On Thursday evening, March 15, at the opera house, the High School will present the operetta, "The Outlaws of Elliquett." Everyone knows the quality of the play, "The Merchant of Venice," given by the class of '17 last year, but on account of unavoidable circumstances, the class will not be able to give a play this year. Although they are unable to present a play, they have combined their forces with the rest of the High School and also with those who gave the play, "Boy Blue," and will endeavor to have something different and better this year.

Remember the date and boost the school by supporting the play. Tickets will be on sale by students beginning Monday. Admission 35 and 25c.

Monday morning our dear Caesar class came across a sentence which ran as follows, "The soldiers stormed the wall which was ten feet high." "Ten feet" was, grammatically speaking, accurative, denoting extent of space. Mr. Hayden, not being able to understand this, Miss Armstrong attempted to make it clearer, "Now, don't you see that your "ten feet" is the extent of space?" It was then clear to all.

Miss Howard, another Latin pupil, informs us that the "man was made open."

Miss McConnell in English class which is held in the "Blue Room" at the rear of the building, was unable to make out what a certain continual rumbling noise was. It was raining and suddenly it dawned upon her what the noise was and, of course, she couldn't keep the wonderful discovery to herself. "Oh, it's a tin roof, ain't it!" she exclaimed. (Yes, it certainly was either that or a brass band on the roof.)

Miss Swartz was reading, "Green meadows lie before them, where they will lay down their burdens."

Miss A-teacher, "Which is transitive—lie or lay?"

Eula, "Lie."

Miss A., "The meadows can't lie anything, can they?"

Eula, "No ma'm, but they can lay, can't they?" !!!?-*

Mr. Goodrich: "Miss Brooks, what is the Grand Trunk railroad?"

Listen to this one: "The inaudible foot of time has left its imprint on the man's forehead." Waw!

But here's the one that brought down the house: "The pale hand of Death stalked into our midst last week and fastened its cruel eye on our little John."

We noticed an abundance of rubbers and umbrellas in the corridor Wednesday.

Miss Mary Miller's class pupils rejoiced Monday because, having missed the train, she was unable to get here. Hence no classes. Now you see why the rejoicing.

Pupils with onion breaths are looked upon with envy.

Daily rehearsals are being held for the coming operetta. Watch for it. A Stellar Exhibition!

The English III class was told that David killed Goliath with a snap shot.

Mr. Goodrich: "What is the river bed?"

Miss Comfort: "Where the river runs."

Mr. Goodrich: "Some rivers run on forever."

SEIZE 4 IN PLOT TO SLAY WILSON

German Reservist Arrested and Makes Confession.

CAUSED TERRIFIC EXPLOSIONS

Bombs Were to Have Killed President Monday Night—Fritz Kolb Admits Having Hand in Black Tom Island and Kingsland Blasts—Plot With Wide Ramifications.

HOBOKEN, N. J. — An alleged plot against the life of President Wilson has been uncovered here, according to detectives who arrested Fritz Kolb, a German reservist, from Mexico. In a hotel where Kolb had engaged a room were found two bombs, which, the detectives said, were to have been sent to the President.

Kolb Makes a Confession.

Kolb, questioned sharply at police headquarters here, is said to have confessed he conspired against the President's life and that he took part in the Black Tom island and Kingsland explosions.

Upon information declared to have been given by Kolb, detectives arrested two other men, one here and one in Jersey City, and brought them to police headquarters as alleged accomplices. A fourth man was later taken.

Bombs Ingeniously Made.

According to members of the New York bomb squad, the two bombs were the "height of ingenuity." One is a time bomb and the other fitted to explode by the ignition of a fuse. The explosives were contained in tubing wrapped around with copper wire.

The hotel where Kolb was arrested is the same one at which Lieutenant Robert Fay, formerly of the German army, and Hans Schiller had rooms prior to their arrest nearly a year ago charged with conspiracy to destroy British merchant ships by placing bombs on them before their departure from American harbors.

Conspiracy May Be Wide One.

With the arrest of the three other men whose names were temporarily withheld, it was reported that the police were investigating alleged ramifications of the plot which were said to include the destruction of oil works at Tampico, Mexico, and the Remington Arms works in Hoboken.

Nitroglycerin Is Found.

Nitroglycerin and picric acid were found in Kolb's room, according to reports by the police, whose inquiry was undertaken on information reaching them several weeks ago.

Officers of the New York city police bomb squad were at police headquarters when Kolb's examination be- [illegible] thirty-six years [illegible] ation." Papers [illegible] Kolb's room [illegible] of trinitrotoluol, one pound of nitroglycerin, eight or ten feet of copper tubing and nine pounds of copper wire.

Terrified When Arrested.

Kolb was terrified when the police broke in upon him, but recovered his composure quickly and talked calmly but somewhat defiantly. He came from Germany in 1914 on a Standard Oil boat, he told detectives, and later "went to the Mexican border," returning to New York a long time ago. Since then he has been employed in saloons in New York and Newark, he said.

Blasts Named Were Startling.

The Kingsland (N. J.) and the Black Tom island munitions explosions and fires mentioned in connection with the arrest of Fritz Kolb were probably the worst in late years in point of quantity of explosive fired and property destroyed.

The Black Tom island explosions occurred early on Sunday morning, July 30 of last year. Three men were killed, scores were injured and between $20,000,000 and $30,000,000 worth of munitions and property destroyed.

The Kingsland catastrophe occurred Jan. 11 of this year at the Canadian Car and Foundry company's plant where a large stock of loaded three-inch shells was awaiting shipment to Russia. Nearly 500,000 shells exploded, the plant, consisting of forty or fifty buildings, was almost totally destroyed and the damage was estimated in the neighborhood of $4,000,000. Many were hurt.

Think Kolb Was in Iowa.

DES MOINES, IOWA — Was Frits Kolb, arrested at Hoboken in a bomb plat, the same man who was in the automobile accessory business here from July, 1915, to January, 1915? W. L. Henry, manager of the Henry Taxi company, and Royal Duke, of Brown garage, say he is and say he came here from Mexico and went back to Mexico. Both men say he has a discharge as a lieutenant in the German army and told them that he had surveyed Egypt and other lands for his government.

FARGO, N. D. — Disapproval of the action of United States Senator A. J. At Monday's election the voters of the Village of Tecumseh will elect four trustees, one to fill the unexpired term of F. S. Anderson and three others, four in all.

In voting for the trustee to fill Mr. Anderson's term, it is merely a question of voting for either one or the other of the candidates as there is only one candidate on each ticket and the one receiving the most votes will be declared elected.

For the three other candidates to fill the offices of trustees, the voter is entitled to vote for any three of the six candidates regardless of ticket—the three receiving the highest number of votes will be declared elected.

Should the voter wish to vote a straight Citizen's or a straight People's ticket, a cross at the head of the ticket would indicate his desire and would be all that is required, or should he wish to vote for two trustees who are apparently running for the same office, he may do so by placing a cross before the candidate on the Citizen's ticket and then placing a cross before the candidate on the People's ticket. The law does [illegible] recognize the position on the ticket as long as there are two or more like offices to be filled, but the three trustees regardless of order on the ticket, receiving the highest number of votes will be declared elected.

To further explain the point, we wish to make: There are three candidates for the full term on each ticket for the office of trustee. On the Citizen's ticket John McIntyre [illegible] B. S. Pulver No. 2, and [illegible] No. 3, and the candidates [illegible] same office on the People's [illegible] Geo. Kempf No. 1, [illegible] No. 2 and C. M. Gil[illegible] No. 3. If the voter so wishes, it [illegible] for him to vote for both [illegible] for No. 1 office by simply placing his cross before each name, although apparently they are running for the same office, and the same rule also applies to No. 2 and No. 3 candidates.

We call the attention of the voters to the above as we do not believe that all understand that they have the right to vote for candidates whose position on the tickets would seem to indicate that they oppose each other for the same office. The three candidates out of the six receiving the highest number of votes will be declared elected.

A GENERAL SURVEY OF THE WAR.

Thursday, March 1.—President Wilson was authorized in a measure passed by the house to arm American ships passing through the German U-boat zone.

In the war zone in France German army headquarters announced a voluntary and systematic withdrawal of parts of the German advance positions on both banks of the Ancre, on the Franco-Belgian front.

The Germans have already fallen back behind Bapaume and the fall of that town is imminent.

The remnants of the Turkish force retreating from Kut-el-Amara have been shattered completely, according to information given out in the house of commons. The Turks, it was said, would reach Bagdad only as a disorderly mob.

Friday, March 2.—Congress placed in president Wilson's hands full power to protect American rights on the seas and accompanied it by passing the greatest naval bill in the nation's history—over half billion dollars.

Hereafter all sailing ships encountered in the "barred zone" by the German submarines will be sunk without warning. Germany announced that the period of grace allowed sailing ships has expired, a dispatch from Berlin says.

Saturday, Mar. 3. British troops made an average advance of a quarter mile on a front of nearly five miles in the face of stubborn German resistance, east of Puisieux-Au-Mont and north of Gommecourt.

Hamadan, in Persia, 240 miles northeast of Bagdad, the goal of the present British advance in Mesopotamia, has been captured by the Russians, according to a Teheran dispatch.

Sunday, March 5.—[illegible] the British have advanced their front on the right [illegible] left wings in the Somme and Ancre regions of France. On the left [illegible]k, east of Gommecourt, the Germans gave up ground over a front of [illegible]o miles, to an average depth of 1,200 yards while on the right flank, east of Bouchavesnes, an attack gave the British terrain on a front of 1,200 yards.

With the important town of Hamadan already in their possession the Russians are keeping up their offensive against the Turks in Persia.

President Willson's bill to arm U. S. ships for defense failed of enactment owing to the refusal of 12 U. S. senators led by La Follette of Wisconsin and Stone of Missouri to allow it to come to a vote before the session ended.

WILSON SEEKING TO KNOW RIGHTS

Authority to Arm U. S. Ships Being Studied

EXPERTS BELIEVE HE HAS IT

Cloture Fight Is On In Senate—Owen, Leader in Past Battles, Pushes Plan to Control Debate—Doubtful If It Can Succeed—Old Senators Oppose.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Determined to protect American rights at sea, President Wilson seeks to fix the exact status of his power to arm and convoy American merchant vessels to brave the German war zone of submarine ruthlessness. At the same time, administration leaders in the senate planned their fight to so alter the rules of that body that an opposing minority could not prevent the enactment of legislation to extend and amplify the President's powers to deal with the international situation.

Thinks Experts Will Uphold.

Secretary of State Lansing and Attorney General Gregory made a close, detailed study of the constitution and all of the statutes from the inception of the government, bearing on the question of armed ships. There is a clear conviction in Washington that the cabinet law officers who expect to call on experts in international law from private life to aid their researches, will hold that the constitutional powers of the President are sufficient to allow him to act. The President urged the cabinet members for an early report on the matter and if they uphold his authority, it is stated, there will be little delay in placing government guns and government gunners aboard the ships of the American line, and such other American vessels as request similar protection.

Work to Change Rules.

Meantime Democratic leaders in the senate, immediately after the new upper house organized in special session, called a caucus of senate Democrats to take up the question of altering the rule of unlimited debate which last week allowed eleven senators to defeat the armed neutrality authorization demanded by the President. Following the President's denunciation of the filibuster which prevented action on the measure, Democratic leaders sought to arrange for an immediate change in the senate rules. The caucus which will name a majority leader to succeed Senator Kern, who retired from the senate Sunday, will consider sidetracking all other business before the senate and concentrating Democratic efforts on a fight for cloture.

Wilson Says He Has Not Power.

WASHINGTON — In a formal statement from the White House, President Wilson declared that the failure of congress to give him authority to arm American ships and protect American rights at sea had practically blocked all his plans in this direction. The President bitterly deplored the fact that a small group of senators had blocked the passage of the authorization bill and asserted that old, unrepealed statutes practically nullified the powers which he thought he could exercise in this direction under the constitution. The President asserted that an extra session of congress would be futile because the same senators could again hold up the legislation.

Will Amend Senate Rules.

WASHINGTON — The filibuster which killed the President's bill to arm American ships will result in a revolution in senate procedure.

Senator Robert L. Owen started the fight, which will have the backing of the administration, to limit debate.

Twelve Men Defeat 76.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Twelve senators, led by Senator La Follette and encouraged by Senator Stone, Democratic chairman of the foreign relations committee, in a filibuster denounced by President Wilson's spokesmen as the most reprehensible in the history of any civilized nation, defied the will of an overwhelming majority in congress up to the last minute and denied to the President a law authorizing him to arm American merchant ships to meet the German submarine menace.

To fix responsibility before the country, seventy-six senators, thirty Republicans and forty-six Democrats, signed a manifesto proclaiming to the world that they favored passage of the measure.

The Twelve.

The twelve senators, seven Republicans and five Democrats, who by their filibuster killed the armed neutrality bill, are: Clapp, Rep., of Minnesota; Cummins, Rep., of Iowa; Gronna, Rep., of North Dakota; Kenyon, Rep., of Iowa; Kirby, Dem., of Arkansas; La Follette, Rep., of Wisconsin; Lane, Dem., of Oregon; Norris, Rep., of Nebraska; O'Gorman, Dem., of New York; Stone, Dem., of Missouri; Vardaman, Dem., of Mississippi; Works, Rep., of California.

Stone Spills U. S. Secrets.

WASHINGTON — Naval officers and administration officials are incensed at Senator Stone's disclosure in the senate debate that the navy had planned equipping merchant ships with light, swift submarine chasers to guard them against submarines in the prohibited zone.

HATCH CHICKENS NOW

Poultryman Makes His Greatest Profit from Birds Hatched Before the first of May.

The poultryman makes his greatest profit from the chickens which are hatched before May 1. The early hatched cockerels are sold as broilers when the broiler market is at its best. The flood of late hatched broilers brings prices down and congests the market. The greater returns received from early hatched broilers go far toward defraying the cost of raising the pullets. These pullets in turn begin laying when eggs are bringing the highest prices and when there is the greatest shortage of strictly fresh eggs.

Still more important, early hatched chickens grow more rapidly than those hatched late in the season and are much less likely to become sick. The late hatched chickens are the first to catch cold and spread disease throughout the flock. Chickens hatched late in the year will not mature before cold weather and usually will not lay until well into the winter, or even toward spring. This means that they will have to be fed and carried over for several months at a constant expense, with no return, and this at a time when feed is at its highest.

The early hatched pullets can be developed to a large extent on range, and a saving in grain feed is possible in this way.

The highest producing pullets are those which begin laying early. To get into the 200 class a pullet must lay 60 or more eggs before March 1. In order to do this, pullets must be hatched before May 1 so that they will begin laying by the first of November. In the section of the country north of the Ohio river it is advisable to begin hatching not later than March 1 and to continue hatching at intervals through March and April, so that pullets of different ages will be coming on, and the broilers will not all be ready for market at the same time.

The American breeds (Plymouth Rocks, Wyandottes, Rhode Island Reds, etc.) should be hatched earlier than the Mediterranean breeds, such as the Leghorns, Minorcas, etc., because they take about one month longer to mature. Pullets of the American breeds will begin laying at about seven months of age, and those of the Mediterranean breeds at about six months.

It is often difficult to get enough broody hens to set the eggs early. This may be partly overcome by setting the earliest eggs in an incubator and putting those eggs under hens a few days before they are ready to hatch. A hen usually can brood from one and one half to two times as many chickens as she will hatch, so that additional chickens hatched in the incubators can also be given to hens which are hatching eggs at the same time.

Early hatching will produce more eggs in the fall and winter, while a larger proportion of hens will get broody early in the spring, thus completing the necessary circle for early fall production.

Early hatched chickens are by far the most profitable in every way.

SURPRISED

Mrs. Anna Haviland very pleasantly entertained about fifty neighbors and friends Thursday evening honoring the birthday of L. B. Wood. Progressive pedro was played with five tables of players. Mrs. Fred Chorman was awarded ladies first prize and Mrs. Jack Kimball the ladies booby. Mr. Wood won gentleman's first prize and Frank French the booby.

At the close of the games ice cream and cake were served. The feature of the evening was the cutting of the big birthday cake with its 46 candles.

As the guests departed for their homes they left many good wishes for many happy returns of his birthday.

A NEW BANK FOR HUDSON

Hudson will soon have its third bank. Hudson parties in connection with Toledo bankers are said to be back of the new organization. Byron Foster, cashier of the Bois State Bank of Hudson, is slated for the presidency of the new bank. The bank will open up in temporary quarters and will use the fixtures of the old Wakefield bank of Morenci which they recently purchased. Later a fine new building will be erected for their use.

It is rather unusual for a city of the size of Hudson to have more than two banks, but the large amount of business transacted in and about Hudson seems to warrant the new venture.

That a recount in probably twenty precincts of Lenawee to determine the election of S. W. Beakes or Mark R. Bacon to congress will be ordered within a few days, has been reported.

Two brothers, Wells Sheldon, eighty-four years old, and LeRoy Sheldon, eighty-six years old, are dead at their home at St. Johns. The younger brother died twenty-four hours before the older.

ZIMMERMANN LETTER SEIZED BY HOOSIERS

Indiana Guards on Border Intercepted German Document.

HOUSTON, TEXAS — Four men, one noncommissioned officer and three privates of the First Indiana infantry, arrested the messenger of Ambassador von Bernstorff en route to Mexico to deliver the Zimmermann note to Heinrich von Eckhardt, German minister to Mexico, and General Carranza. This was learned from two men who helped make the arrest and their story was substantiated by two ranking officers of the United States army.

Von Bernstorff's messenger is said to have left Washington about four weeks ago. It was planned that on crossing the Rio Grande river at a designated point he would be met by a body of thirty-five rurales, who were to turn him over to a special representative, who would accompany him to Mexico City.

The messenger was taken Feb. 21, near Progresso, Tex. He was questioned and searched by Captain Chambers and Regimental Sergeant John L. Robertson.

Later the messenger was taken before Colonel Neftzeger, the ranking officer of the Indiana regiment, and then to San Antonio, from which point it is understood he was sent to Washington.

All the possibilities of a lovely fight between the legislature and Governor Sleeper lie in the action completed when the house passed, 62 to 27, the game warden bill which gives the state game warden power to restrict the open season on game, when petitioned to do so by a majority of the board of supervisors of any county, provided the public domain commission gives final assent.

WILSON ENTERS ON SECOND TERM

President Takes Oath of Office Twice.

SWORN IN PRIVATELY SUNDAY

Pledge is Repeated at Formal Inauguration at Noon—Impressive Occasion is Launching of Beginning of New Term — Washington Feels Tenseness of Patriotism.

Washington, Mar. 5.—President Wilson was formally inaugurated into office at noon. The actual inauguration took place at noon Sunday when the President took the oath of office in his private office in the senate wing of the capitol. The formal inauguration and second oath were preceded by a parade remarkable for bursts of patriotism along the line of march. The parade was reviewed by the President and Mrs. Wilson, Vice President and Mrs. Marshall, practically the entire membership of the congress that expired Sunday, justices of the supreme court, members of the diplomatic corps, cabinet officers and army and navy heads.

Chief Justice White, who administered the oath, shook hands with the President, and said to him: "Mr. President, I am very, very happy."

Ceremony at Noon.

The formal ceremonies were held at noon in the senate chamber and in the open air at the east front of the capitol.

Nothing was left undone to make the occasion a great demonstration of Americanism. The capital was decked in American flags and the red, white and blue to the exclusion of all other colors.

The note of patriotism predominated in every ceremony of the day; it was the motive of the inaugural procession and was the theme of what was the most elaborate display of night fireworks ever seen in this country.

President's Oath.

When the President took the oath at the public ceremony outside the capitol the chief justice stepped forward, Bible in hand, and administered the oath of office. He repeated, and, the President touching his lips to the Bible, repeated after him this oath, prescribed by the Constitution:

"I do solemnly swear that I will faithfully execute the office of President of the United States and will to the best of my ability preserve, protect and defend the Constitution of the United States."

The next thing on the program was the delivery of the President's address.

Thirty senators took the oath of office at the extraordinary session of the senate which preceded.

President Wilson's opposition to the time-honored inaugural ball was maintained over all the pressure brought to bear for such an event, and there was no reception or other social affair to take its place.

CHINA SPLIT OVER BREAK

Cabinet Halted by President on Voting to Cut Germany.

Peking, Mar. 5.—The cabinet decided that China should join the United States in breaking off relations with Germany.

This decision was submitted to the President, who refused to approve the cabinet's action, saying such power rested entire with him.

Premier Tuan Chi-Jui immediately resigned and left for Tien-Tsin, accompanied by several other members of the cabinet. Parliament is virtually unanimous in favor of the opinion of the cabinet. The leaders of all the political parties are adversely criticising the president's position. The vice president of the republic supports that action of the cabinet.

ZIMMERMANN ADMITS PLOT

Berlin, Mar. 5.—Foreign Secretary Zimmermann justified Germany's action in seeking to ally Mexico and Japan against the United States.

Such a course, he said, were merely a defensive measure—not to be carried out except in case the United States declared war on Germany. Moreover, he said, it was no more a "plot" than the "plot" which was reported in South American newspapers as having been undertaken against Germany by the United States when America sought, according to South American and other newspaper reports, to line up the American republics in common action against Germany.

BIG OIL STEAMER AGROUND

Tanker Louisiana Goes Ashore Off Maryland Coast.

Newport, R. I., Mar. 5.—Calls for help from the steamer Louisiana of the Texas company, aground on Winter Quarter shoal, were picked up by the radio station here. The calls soon became too faint for the local station to distinguish.

Wasted Power.

Professor Charles Baskerville, head of the department of chemistry in the College of the City of New York, stated in a recent interview regarding the work of modern chemists:

"In any chemical problem there is no telling where the chemist will stop. Just now there are many chemists working on the problem of free gas. An immeasurable lot of power is wasted in the dumps of our coal mines. If this waste were reduced to gas by the retort process enough ammonia might be produced as a byproduct to pay for the whole cost of the operation, making the gas free. The gas could then be used to generate electric power. Really, one big railroad ought to be running on the power it is now throwing away in those supposedly worthless dumps."

GENERAL F. S. MAUDE

General Maude by his recapture of Kut avenges the reverse suffered by General Townshend when the latter was compelled to surrender to the Turks his garrison of 9,000 after a hard siege.

ENDED THE ARGUMENT.

Frank Lombard of San Francisco, who was in Manila during the winter of 1898-9, tells this story of the late Admiral Dewey:

"In Cavite, you know, there are no dockage facilities. Vessels lie at anchor, and native freight boats called 'cascoes' carry things to and from the shore. One of the native officials contracted with Admiral Dewey to carry stuff to the flagship. After doing his duty he dressed himself in the latest European fashion to visit the admiral, silk hat, white shirt, cravat, cuffs, etc.

"When he presented his bill Dewey remarked that there were many overcharges which he could not pay. The freighter captain protested that the admiral was wrong and that he had agreed to the terms. Dewey politely replied that he would pay the original bill, nothing more.

"Mistaking the quiet, gentlemanly manner of the admiral, the freighter became insulting in his manner and insisted upon payment. With a slight movement of the hand the admiral remarked to the watch, 'Drop that man overboard,' and in a minute the plug hat was floating in Cavite bay, while the insolent native was swimming to his vessel."—Exchange.

HIGH COST OF SHOES.

It Sends the Dealers on a Hunt For Substitutes For Leather.

"Years ago the shoe dealers' cry was 'beware of substitutes for leather!' Now our cry is 'give us substitutes so that we can sell shoes more cheaply to the masses.'"

Thus spoke A. H. Geuting, Philadelphia retailer, secretary of the National Shoe Retailers' association. "I'm wearing a substitute sole now," he added.

"Substitutes wear longer than leather—they give greater satisfaction and save the wearer money," Geuting continued. "Shoes for which we paid a wholesale price of $5 in 1915 now cost us $8, $3.50 shoes now cost us $6, and shoes for which I paid $2.25 formerly now cost me $4.25.

"Not long ago the highest priced shoes in our stores sold for $8; now they sell for $18 and $20. A shoe store on Fifth avenue, New York, is selling shoes at $35 a pair.

"With sole leather costing 90 cents a pound, kid skins $1.30 a square foot and with the insurance and freight on imported goatskins from the orient alone costing 40 cents—as much as the skins formerly cost—the high cost of shoes is explained."—Cincinnati Times-Star.

Andean Knowledge of the World.

Knowledge of the world is not one of the strong points of the Andean natives. Harry A. Franck, wandering through Colombia on foot, had this fact thrust upon him by a certain barber. "Last year another Meestear"—in the rural Andes the native form of this word is used as a common noun to designate not only Americans and Englishmen, but Germans, Swedes, Frenchmen and even Spaniards—"stopped here," he began. "You will perhaps know him. His name was Meestear Giuseppe."

We doubt it.

"But surely you must know him," persisted the barber, "for he was a foreigner also."

The rural Colombian conceives of the world as made up of two countries, his own, the chief one, and a smaller one, perhaps only a city, that lies outside its boundaries.

Big Chains Are Handmade.

In this day of machine manufacture it will perhaps surprise some to learn that the making of big chains is largely, if not entirely, confined to methods dependent on hand labor, says the Scientific American. There are probably no big chains being made in the United States by the use of machinery. There are various appliances employed, but these are hand operated or personally controlled. This situation appears to be due to two things. First, as the proverbial expression has it, "a chain is no stronger than the weakest of its links." A handmade chain is naturally made link by link. If the workmen are not only careful, but conscientious as to details, there is a considerable opportunity for attention equivalent to continuous inspection. The making of big chains is largely an old time blacksmith's job.

Well, There Were.

For years the village druggist had two big red bottles in the window. He took them out and filled the window with imported perfumes.

"There!" exclaimed a passerby. "There's some scents in that."

WILSON SAYS HE HAS NOT POWER

Twelve Filibusterers Prevent Senate from Acting.

LA FOLLETTE IS THE LEADER

Seventy-Six Members of Upper House Sign Round Robin to Nation Stating That They Would Have Voted to Give President Desired Power—Measure Is Talked to Death.

Washington, Mar. 5.—In a formal statement from the White House, President Wilson declared that the failure of congress to give him authority to arm American ships and protect American rights at sea had practically blocked all his plans in this direction. The President bitterly deplored the fact that a small group of senators had blocked the passage of the authorization bill and asserted that old, unrepealed statutes practically nullified the powers which he thought he could exercise in this direction under the constitution. The President asserted that an extra session of congress would be futile because the same senators could again hold up the legislation.

Washington, Mar. 5.—Twelve senators, led by Senator La Follette and encouraged by Senator Stone, Democratic chairman of the foreign relations committee, in a filibuster denounced by President Wilson's spokesmen as the most reprehensible in the history of any civilized nation, defied the will of an overwhelming majority in congress up to the last minute and denied to the President a law authorizing him to arm American merchant ships to meet the German submarine menace.

Unyielding throughout twenty-six hours of continuous session to appeals that their defiance of the President would be humiliating to the country; uncompromising in a crisis described to them as the most serious to the nation since the civil war, La Follette and his small group of supporters refused a majority of their colleagues an opportunity to vote on the armed neutrality bill.

Bill Dies With Congress.

It died with the Sixty-fourth congress at noon.

To fix responsibility before the country, seventy-six senators, thirty Republicans and forty-six Democrats, signed a manifesto proclaiming to the world that they favored passage of the measure.

This declaration, embodied in the record of the senate, referred to the fact that the house on Thursday night had passed a similar bill by a vote of 403 to 13, and also recited that the senate rule permitting unlimited debate gave a small minority opportunity to throttle the will of the majority.

Protest of Majority.

"The majority of United States senators favored the passage of the senate bill authorizing the President of the United States to arm American merchant vessels, a similar bill having already passed the house by a vote of 403 to 13. Under the rules of the senate allowing unlimited debate it appears to be impossible to obtain a vote previous to noon March 4, 1917, when this sessin of congress expires.

"We desire the statement entered on the record to establish the fact that the senate favored the legislation and would pass it if a vote could be obtained."

The Twelve.

The twelve senators, seven Republicans and five Democrats, who by their filibuster killed the armed neutrality bill, are: Clapp, Rep., of Minnesota; Cummins, Rep., of Iowa; Gronna, Rep., of North Dakota; Kenyon, Rep., of Iowa; Kirby, Dem., of Arkansas; La Follette, Rep., of Wisconsin; Lane, Dem., of Oregon; Norris, Rep., of Nebraska; O'Gorman, Dem., of New York; Stone, Dem., of Missouri; Vardaman, Dem., of Mississippi; Works, Rep., of California.

CUTLERY PLANT IS BURNED

Tipton, Ind., Suffers Severe Loss in Newly Acquired Manufactory.

Tipton, Ind., Mar. 5.—Fire of unknown origin destroyed the plant of the Henri Clauss Manufacturing company which made fine cutlery. The loss is $100,000 with insurance of $25,000 on the building and $55,000 on the stock and equipment. The plant was moved here last fall from Fremont, Ohio.

West Indies Ask New Name.

St. Thomas, Danish West Indies, Mar. 5.—At a mass meeting held here it was decided to suggest to the Washington government that the Danish West Indies, now American territory through purchase, should be named the "American Virgin islands," instead of the "Dewey islands" or other names suggested.

Willard Aids Defense.

Washington, Mar. 25.—Daniel Willard, president of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad, was elected chairman of the advisory commission of the council of national defense at a joint meeting of the council and commission.

Mosaic Work.

The origin of mosaic work is unknown. We may be sure, however, that it began among some oriental people. It had attained to great excellence in Greece in the time of Alexander and his successors. The Romans also excelled in mosaic work. The art was revived in Italy by Giotto, Cimabue and others and from Italy made its way into the other European countries. Some of the achievements of the mosaic works of the best Italian period are little less than miraculous.

"Smith's wife worked him so cleverly about getting her a motorcar for a birthday present that he thought it was his own idea."

"I see. A case of auto suggestion."—Detroit Free Press.

NAVAL MILITIA GETS ORDERS TO BE READY

Adjutant-Gen. Bersey Is Told to Muster Full Strength.

LANSING, Mar. 5.

Immediate enrollment of all officers and enlisted men of the Michigan naval reserve corps was ordered by the navy department in a telegram received from Washington by Colonel John S. Bersey, adjutant general of Michigan.

The request means that all members of the reserve corps must proceed at once to fulfill the orders received last week from the navy department, covering the procedure necessary in the enrollment. Both officers and men must take the prescribed examinations, both physical and technical, and fill out the information blanks provided by the department.

Orders received a year ago by the naval reserve officers were to the effect that in case of war or threatened hostilities, necessitating a naval mobilization, the Michigan corps should proceed at once to Philadelphia, where its members will be stationed on the reserve battleships guarding the harbor.

SLEEPER TALKS WITH OATES

It Is Thought Governor Will Not Veto Game Bill.

LANSING, Mar. 5.

Governor Sleeper, Game Commissioner William R. Oates and Augustus C. Carton, secretary of the public domain commission, had a long conference on the discretionary game season closing bill, which it had been rumored Governor Sleeper was going to veto as a slap at Commissioner Oates for his activities against Sleeper in the primary campaign.

None of the conferees would talk after the meeting although there was every indication that Messrs. Oates and Carton, who were for the bill, seemed satisfied that the measure would not be vetoed. About the capitol, while it was known that the governor has been importuned to veto the measure, the prevalent opinion has been that he was being led to do so by some of his friends. After the conference, however, the impression is abroad that the veto will not be forthcoming.

SEEK TO HALT "MUGGING"

Bill Prepared to Head Off Detroit Police Head.

DETROIT, Mar. 5.

Plans have been laid in Detroit for the introduction in the present session of the state legislature of a personal rights bill aimed to prevent Police Commissioner James Couzens from carrying out his announced plan of photographing and of taking the finger prints of all persons arrested in vice and gambling raids before they are convicted.

It will follow closely, it was said, along the line of the fight for personal rights that made the late Mayor Gaynor, of New York, a national figure. It will affect the entire state and probably will be introduced by a member of the legislature from outside Detroit.

The first is known as the perpetual candidate, as he has appealed to the voters for their ballots at every election for twenty years, apposing Diaz and Madero.

Garment Making In New York.

The garment making industry in New York, much before the public nowadays by reason of the efforts of the save New York committee to move its base from the retail shopping district in the Fifth avenue section, is really one of the biggest assets the city has. Some 10,000 factories are operated for tailoring, millinery, laundering and other branches of work upon garments, employing more than 800,000 persons. Their output exceeds goods valued at $500,000,000 annually, aiding materially in making New York the leading manufacturing center of this country, Chicago, Philadelphia, St. Louis, Boston and Cleveland following in the order named.

STONE SPILLS U. S. SECRETS IN SENATE

Naval Officers Highly Incensed at Missourian's Act.

Washington, Mar. 5.—Naval officers and administration officials are incensed at Senator Stone's disclosure in the senate debate that the navy had planned equipping merchant ships with light, swift submarine chasers to guard them against submarines in the prohibited zone.

They regarded it as fortunate that more of the plans had not been disclosed in the heat of the senator's opposition to the armed neutrality bill, but were chagrined that so much had been said, especially in view of the fact that the senate only recently, at the request of the military departments, passed a bill making it a crime to publish the government's secrets.

American Military Attache at Rome Meets Accidental Death.

Chicago, Mar. 5.—Major Elvin R. Major Heiberg was assigned to the embassy at Rome at year ago. A distinguished cavalry office, he won many honors in the Philippines, where he was civil governor of the Cottabato district, Mindanao. No stipulation is made as to just what Mr. Sunday will do, but it is intimated that he may preach to the big audiences which the circus will draw each day, and a special service is proposed for the Sabbath when the proceeds, all or the greater part, will be devoted to charity. Mr. Sunday has not stated whether he will accept the offer.

LIGHTING A CATHEDRAL.

Simple Yet Spectacular Method at St. Isaac's, in Petrograd.

In an article in the Atlantic Monthly describing a midnight mass on Easter eve in St. Isaac's cathedral, Petrograd, Warrington Dawson says:

"A sudden blaze of innumerable candles, hanging high overhead in great chandeliers, tore away the gloom and told us that the ceremony was to begin. At the Isaakiewski Sobor one match did what a switch or button does elsewhere, save that here the operation was as ingenious and initiative as could be devised, instead of being a machine made contrivance scattered by millions over the world.

"A waxed string, an end of which hung down within easy reach from the marble paving, ran from one wick to another, then from group to group, from chandelier to chandelier, until all the candles in the cathedral were connected. The match was applied to that string. A spark spitting tiny flame raced up to the first candle and so sped on its way, an earnest, busy little lamplighter, quick as the snap of a finger, adroit as a monkey and almost unfailing in its success.

"Among the hundreds I saw it reach I counted very few which did not blaze at the touch, and most of these flared an instant and sputtered out, showing that the string's work at least had been done. The general effect, indeed, was as if each wick had been an electric bulb, but the whole, instead of lighting when one switch was turned, depended upon a hand swept over successive buttons."

An Exchange of Tokens

It Was Made on New Year's Eve.

By F. A. MITCHEL

A convivial party had assembled to see the old year out and the new year in. Among them were Lena Wadsworth and Frank Andrews. The company had not yet passed into the supper room, and these two were sitting apart from the others.

"Come, Lena," said Frank, "you have put me off long enough. Give me my answer."

"You know very well why I have put you off, Frank. You are captivated by every pretty girl you meet. If I said yes, before three months had elapsed you would wish to be released. I have no fancy for such an engagement."

"Try me."

Miss Wadsworth toyed with a flower she held in her hand and remained silent. Finally she said:

"I will not consent to an engagement, but I will say this: If one year from tonight you can assure me that you have not made love to another girl you can ask me again to be your wife, and I will accept you."

"That's assuming all the constancy is on your side."

"I think it is."

The party was as gay as the supper was excellent. The guests sat down at the table at 10 o'clock and left it at 3 a. m. A great deal of wine was drunk, and doubtless a great many things were said that were not well considered before the saying. The party broke up singing "Auld Lang Syne," and half an hour later the banquet hall, deserted, bespoke the evanescence of all worldly pleasures.

At 11 o'clock the next morning Frank Andrews awoke. On a table beside his bed were his eyeglasses, his watch and a gold locket in the shape of a heart. The eyeglasses and the watch were familiar objects in a familiar place. But the gold heart? Frank looked at it earnestly, then thoughtfully. How it had come to be with the other articles he could not imagine.

That which had deepest root within him first showed itself above a confusion of happenings pertaining to last night's conviviality. He remembered one thing perfectly. He had persuaded Lena Wadsworth to be his wife on condition that he remained true to her for one year. But he had no remembrance of her giving him this bauble in token of the agreement.

When had it come? Had some [illegible] dropped it, and had he found it? Had some one given it to him as a token of something now forgotten? Up to the present moment his connection with it was a blank.

Pushing an electric button, he called the butler.

"James," he said, "when you were here last did you notice that—that gold locket?"

"No, sir; I didn't see it, sir."

"Did you observe this table especially?"

"Yes, sir; I did. There was a glass on it, and I removed it, sir."

"Nothing else?"

"No, sir."

Frank thought for awhile, the butler waiting. Finally Frank asked:

"Any mail this morning?"

"Yes, sir. One delivery about half an hour ago."

"Bring it up."

There were several inclosures of bills and a scented missive addressed in a delicate feminine hand. Frank opened it and read:

> Dearest—I cannot sleep without saying to you that you have made me, oh, ever so happy. And I am going to step out to the letter box right before the door and post this, so that you'll get it tomorrow morning and have a pleasant New Year day surprise. How can I wait till I see you again? Come as soon as you can and tell me again, tell me a thousand times, that you love me. I have your gold pencil, and you have my heart. May the pledges they stand for be sacredly kept.
> Your loving GWEN.
> P. S.—A million kisses.

"Oh, my good"—

Frank finished the exclamation with a groan. He must have fallen again, and this was the longest fall he had ever made. Who was Gwen? Most of the girls present at the New Year's party he knew by their family names, but not their Christian names. There were Miss Willis, Miss Everhart and Miss Worthington, whom he knew quite well, but which one, if any, of them was Gwen? He looked for a heading to the note, but there was not even a date. The postmark was no guide at all.

What deepened the mystery was that Frank had not immoderately indulged in the potent cup. There was no time during the evening that he indulged in lovemaking with an exchange of pledges that he would not have been conscious of the fact. But here was indisputable evidence that he had. There was no other explanation. He went over every episode, so far as he could recall them, that had occurred during the evening without result. But five hours at an exhilarating supper party embraced a good deal.

"All I've got to say," remarked Mr. Andrews to himself, "is that if I'm to be made happy every New Year's morning in this way I trust I shall end my earthly career on the 31st of December next."

There were two horns to the trouble. One was a fear that Lena would learn that he had fallen from grace within a few hours after he had assured her of his constancy, the other his ignorance as to who was the girl he had exchanged pledges with. Getting out of bed, he took up his dress vest and felt in the pocket where he carried his gold pencil. It was gone. Oh, how he tried to remember where it had gone! Of all his horrible entanglements—and he had passed through a number of them—this was the worst.

There would have been something like comfort in his not remembering the girl he had made love to had it not been that he shrank from doing a dishonorable act. The girl, not receiving a visit from him, would suppose that he intended to jilt her and would be too proud to trouble him again. But from such a position he shrank. And would she not tell some friend who would tell another and the matter finally get to Lena?

There were so many awful things that might grow out of his relapse that he resolved to banish them all. With one kick he removed the bedclothes and in a few minutes was driving the blood out of his head with a shower bath. Then when dressed he sallied forth for breakfast.

Time was when New Year's day was devoted to calls. This custom having passed away it is a holiday without any especial object. Andrews wished that he could relieve his mind by work. During the afternoon he received by messenger a note from Lena. A new shock greeted him when he read it:

> Mr. Andrews—After what occurred last night I do not consider it necessary to keep you waiting a year for an answer, which may as well be given now in the negative. I am aware of what passed between you and my new rival. I regret that I am not indifferent as to your action, but it is better that I should suffer now than as your wife. Trusting that you may be happy with the girl with whom you exchanged tokens, I am your wellwisher, LENA.

Frank rested his elbows on his knees and his head in his palms and groaned. He saw no hope anywhere. The night before on account of his constitutional failing he had been required to wait a year before being accepted by the girl he loved; now he had to wait forever. In his position with regard to Lena he forgot his position to this Gwen, whoever she might be. What should he do to palliate his offense to Lena? He did not see that he could do anything.

It is questionable if there was ever a lover who was without hope till the lady of his love had passed to another, and Frank Andrews was no exception. About 8 o'clock in the evening he called Lena on the telephone.

"Will you be at home this evening?" he asked.

"Yes."

"May I call?"

"I shall be pleased to see you."

There was nothing in the replies or the tone of voice in which they were spoken either to reassure or discourage him as to an ultimate forgiveness. He would go to Lena and see what he could do.

Lena kept him waiting a few minutes, then entered the room where he was with neither vindictiveness nor encouragement. He judged that it was indifference.

"I received your note," he said gloomily. "I thought I would come to at least say goodby."

"You began your trial at 10 o'clock on Dec. 31 and proved your inconstancy at 1 o'clock on Jan. 1 of the next year. You were true to me just three hours."

"You remember how much champagne"—

"You can't plead that you didn't know what you were doing. You did not drink wine enough to mar your memory of me. Besides, if true, that would be no excuse."

Driven from this expedient, Frank concluded to try another.

"You see, Gwen and I were playmates when we were children. I used to carry her books to and from school. I had no idea then and have never had since that she thought any more of me than any other fellow. I presume something I said last night sounded to her like lovemaking, and she—well, she, thinking that I— Of course I couldn't turn her down in a brutal fashion, you know"—

Lena burst into a laugh.

"Frank Andrews, you are the biggest humbug I have even known in the whole course of my life!"

"I swear"—

"Don't commit perjury."

"Then you will not permit me to explain?"

"There is no need of an explanation from you. It must come from me."

Frank looked at her in bewilderment.

"There is no such person as Gwen. Last night it occurred to me to play a joke on you. I have for years worn a sort of amulet around my neck—a gold locket. I saw Charlie Hartwell ask you for a pencil, and you handed him your gold pencil case. I took it from Charlie and didn't give it back to him. Here it is."

A relieved smile began to break out on Frank's face.

"Handing Charlie my gold heart, I asked him to slip it into your vest pocket. He did so while you were engaged in an animated discussion with Alma Wardswell. You forgot your pencil and did not know about the heart being put in your pocket. The rest is easy for you to understand without my saying anything more."

Frank made one bound for her.

And that's the end of the story. He made a bluff himself later on, telling Lena that she should either marry him as soon as she could get her trousseau together or she could not marry him at all. The matter was compromised by a six months' trial period, during which Frank behaved himself very well, and the nuptials were duly celebrated.

BEWITCHED HIS HEARERS.

In his "platform career," during those years when he went about the country reading his poems, James Whitcomb Riley saw with his eyes and heard with his ears what people thought of him. Never any other man stood night after night on the stage or platform to receive such solid roars of applause for the "reading" of poems—and for himself.

He did not "read" his poems; he did not "recite" them, either. He took his whole body into his hands, as it were, and by his wizard mastery of suggestion left no James Whitcomb Riley at all upon the stage. Instead the audience saw and heard whatever the incomparable comedian wished them to see and hear. He held a literally unmatched power over them for riotous laughter or for actual copious tears, and no one who ever saw an exhibition of that power will forget it—or forget him.

There he stood, alone upon the stage, a blond, shortish, whimsical man in evening clothes—a figure with "a whole lot of style," and a whole lot of its own style too! He offered a deferential prefatory sentence or so; then suddenly face and figure altered, seemed to merge completely into those of a person altogether different from the poet, and not Mr. Riley, but a Hoosier farm hand, perhaps, or a thin little girl stood before you, "done to the life." Then the voice came, "done to the life," too—done to the last half audible breath at the end of husky chuckle or wistful sigh. There was no visible effort on the part of the magician. The audience did not strain or worry for him as audiences so often do for those who "entertain" them, because his craft lay not in contortion, but in a glamouring suggestion that held spectators rapt and magnetized.

Nat Goodwin's opinions upon the production of realistic pathos in comedy may be accepted as academic. Mr. Goodwin said: "I used to recite 'Goodby, Jim'—until I heard Riley do it. Then I asked the Lord to forgive me and never tried it again!"—Booth Tarkington in Collier's Weekly.

MME. NAZIMOVA IN "WAR BRIDES"

Last New Year's day we presented the first Selznick photo-play production in Tecumseh, Clara Kimball Young in "The Common Law." We heard nothing but words of praise from the hundreds who saw it, many complimented us on the excellent acting of Miss Young others on the story and nearly everyone spoke of the magnificent way in which the entire picture was staged. The Selznick pictures are all staged on the most magnificent lines possible. This week Friday, March 9th, it is with the greatest of pleasure that the management of the Bradley presents the second big Selznick production, Mme. Nazimova, the famous Russian actress, "War Brides."

"War Brides" was directed by Herbert Brenon who wrote and directed "The Daughter of the Gods" recently presented at the Bradley, and critics claim "War Brides" his greatest work. It is universally claimed where ever "War Brides" is presented that no better actress has ever appeared on the screen than Mme Nazimova, and after saying that "War Brides" arises to even greater heights than, "The Birth of a Nation," the New York Herald's critic also writes:

"Mme. Alla Nazimova fairly startled the spectators who crowded the Broadway Theatre to see her first appearance in motion pictures, in "War Brides." Her expression and power as an actress carried right out from the screen in a manner almost lifelike, and made her close-ups more vivid and convincing than any that have previously been presented.

There often is a question whether an acting star will be successful in the vastly different work of the studios, and Mme. Nazimova answered last night in the affirmative so far as she is concerned. The director, Herbert Brenon, made use of the acting ability of a star with a strong effect that has seldom, if ever been equalled in motion pictures.

"War Brides" is the story of a woman who defied an empire and the Bradley offers it as one of the best productions coming to Tecumseh. "War Brides" really played to several weeks of capacity business at the Broadway Strand along about Christmas. Many people home from Detroit about that time told of the mammoth crowds standing in line for every performance.

"War Brides" is a picture you will regret if you miss it. There are pictures produced by the score but only one in an age a picture like this.

LETTER FROM A. C. CROSSMAN

The following letter received from A. C. Crossman of Omaha, Neb. will be of interest to some of the older residents of Tecumseh.

Omaha, Neb. Feb. 27th 1917

Dear Friend:

Under date of Feb. 23rd 1917, I noticed in the Herald an account of the Tecumseh Cornet Band on May 12, 1875. I was very much interested in reading the names of the charter members, as I was well acquainted with most of them.

However I want to go back a little farther, and give you a list of the members of our old band, which was organized in 1865 ten years before the band you refer to. The names of several of the members have slipped my memory.

Henry Fisher, LaMont Bidwell, John Hall, Dan Marsh, Henry Powers, Robert Chatterton, Geo. Wood, Brant Roberts, and Arthur C. Crossman.

I also remember a band that was playing in Tecumseh about 1858, Alfred James played the tuba, and I thought he was the finest in the world at that time.

It is now 50 years since I left Tecumseh, with a very few short visits in the meantime, but the many pleasant recollections of my early childhood come to me more and more as I advance in years.

I long to go back, and walk alone over the places that were so attractive to me at that time, and once more (in memory) enjoy the pleasures of many years ago.

Sincerely Yours,
A. C. Crossman

"THE MYSTERY OF THE RAISIN"

By William B. Hartzog

Lovers at Findlay Lake

Chapter I.

In the western part of Chautauqua County, N. Y., lies a beautiful body of water known as Findlay Lake. It is the head waters of French Creek. At the north end of the little lake is a dam over which pours sufficient water to turn the wheels of the mill that has provided the inhabitants of that country with flour for several generations.

The country about Findlay abounds with hills and deep ravines. Bubbling springs of pure water burst from the hillsides and trickle down the numerous water courses into the lake. The roads circle about the hills making it difficult for a traveler to find his way.

At the time of which we write, dense forests abounded on every hand and hunters did not have to go far to find plenty of game. The lake provided fish in abundance for those who were disposed to spend a little time trying for them. The little village that nestled on the hillside near the old mill consisted of about fifty homes. It bore the name Findlay Lake.

On the winding road leading in a northwesterly direction, about a mile from the village stood a rather pretentious house for those days. It was the house of Nathan Grove who was considered one of the most successful farmers in that section. About a half a mile farther on was the home of the widow Barnes whose only son, Luke, was her main stay. Lamuel Barnes, his father, was killed by the falling of timbers at a barn raising.

Clara Grove and Luke Barnes attended the village school and were in the same classes, though Clara was younger than Luke by one year. They had traveled back and forth on the winding highway ever since they were children. They knew each other's traits of character. Clara was cheerful and buoyant; Luke was serious, sensative and inclined to be easily discouraged.

Clara noticed those traits, particularly after Luke's father was taken away. It was a great shock to him. She felt sorry for him and on the last day of school as they were coming home she said, "Luke, I sympathize with you. It was a terrible thing to lose your father. It has thrust a great responsibility on you to take care of your mother."

"Clara, you are the first person to offer a word of sympathy, and I appreciate it very much, especially because it comes from you. This will be my last day of school. Next fall when school opens I will not be going back and forth with you. I will have to work and support mother and myself."

His voice faltered and his face bore a look of indescribable sadness as he remarked, "If mother's health was only better. It seems as if she never will recover from the shock caused by father's death."

"Take courage", said Clara, "for this is springtime and I believe your mother will feel better when she can be out of doors."

"I mean to keep up courage and do my best for her sake."

"That is good Luke, I am glad to hear you say that. But really I shall miss your company next year for we have gone back and forth together so many years."

Luke looked into her large brown eyes. "Clara," said he, "if you enjoy my company as much as I do yours, we will be friends forever."

By this time they had reached the gate of the Grove residence and Clara was about to turn in when Luke said, "Clara, let us drive over to Sherman next Sunday."

"All right."

They drove to the village of Sherman the following Sunday and attended the Baptist church. Luke met his uncle, John Barnes, who invited them to dinner.

After they had started home, Mr. and Mrs. Barnes discussed the young couple.

"How old is Luke?" inquired John.

"He was just eighteen years old last Thursday," said Mrs. Barnes, "and Clara was seventeen last February."

"Well she is an attractive girl, I like her ways, and Luke is a fine boy."

During the summer Luke and Clara were constant companions. Sometimes driving about the country, other times boating on the beautiful lake, they were happy in each other's society.

Luke had worked faithfully and was rewarded with excellent crops. He painted the house, planted fruit trees, put fences in order and helped his mother cultivate flowers.

"I tell you, Luke is making things go," said Nathan Grove to his wife, "he is going to make a number one farmer."

"I am glad of it, but what pleases me most," said Mrs. Grove, "is to see his devotion to his mother. That is a good trait in any boy."

Clara was in the kitchen, but she overheard this conversation of her parents. Her heart swelled with joy for she loved Luke.

Judged by Appearances.

"You can't always judge by appearances."

"I just had a costly demonstration of that fact. Because I saw Flubdub chewing a toothpick I thought it would be safe to invite him to lunch. But he went right along and hung me up for an expensive lot of grub."—Kansas City Journal.

Mrs. Vernon Castle as Patria Channing in PATRIA International Serial

At this time when the whole talk seems to center on Preparedness no more timely or fitting pictures could be booked than Mrs. Vernon Castle in the greatest of all serials "Patria." In the first place Mrs. Vernon Castle is the best known woman in America, is the most charming star ever seen on the screen, she is pretty and attractive and delightfully feminine and is known to be the best dressed woman in the world. The idol of society, every one has heard of her though comparatively few have seen her and those who have paid two dollars a seat. As an artist Mrs. Castle stands without challenge in the front rank of American women—everyone knows her—everyone admires her and everyone wants to see her. In "Patria" Mrs. Castle has every opportunity to display her remarkable versatility. But why waste space describing Mrs. Castle. When we mention her name we tell the whole story.

"Patria" is by Louis Joseph Vance author of several of the best sellers published. The story tells of Patria Channing, a society girl left sole heir to America's largest munition works and her struggle against a wily foreigner who is struggling to obtain control of the plant and a hundred million dollar trust fund left to her.

Among some of the thrills are a race between a train and an automobile, Patria diving from a steamer deck into the ocean, driving a motor at a speed that defies all law and hundreds of other thrills that will never be attempted by any other than Mrs. Castle. Does she dance? Sure! In several of the numbers of this big serial Mrs. Castle does some of her latest and best dances.

"Patria" cost over a half million dollars to produce. When the idea was first conceived, William Randolph Hearst directed that no expense be spared. He ordered the greatest star, the greatest publicity, the greatest story, the best cast and the best production that money could buy. Many of the scenes were taken at Newport, the summer home of the world's millionaires, many scenes requiring the use of the United States warships and the co-operation of the Navy. "Patria" is rightly called "the serial supreme," all other serials falling completely out of sight when this screen sensation of 1917 is presented.

Just a word in regard to when and where this great serial will be shown. It is booked to appear at the Bradley Opera House soon and in addition to a big five reel picture each evening. This mammoth show could not be thought of at our prices but for our big seating capacity as we seat over 800. This is one of the first of the big double programs to be presented at the Bradley for which new machines and equipment are now being installed, two new picture machines being part of the new equipment. See next Friday's paper for further particulars.

The Kitchen Floor.

A practical way of dealing with the kitchen floor and at the same time economizing labor, is to cover it with a plain, dark colored linoleum, such as red, blue, green or black, and to polish it. A shiny surface is easy to sweep up and keep clean, and if polished once a week on the other days it need only be run over with a mop. If treated in this way it will always look nice and will save at least twenty minutes' work a day.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Fogs of Peru.

Peru has hundreds of square miles along its coast of rainless country. In this tract rain is never known to fall. Yet the region is not entirely barren of vegetation. Some parts of it, indeed, are comparatively fertile. This is due to the extraordinary fogs known as "garuas." They prevail every night from May to October after a summer that is sultry and extend up to a level of 1,200 feet above the sea. Above 1,200 feet rain falls.

Inactive Kidneys Cause Disease

"I shall not soon forget the benefits I derived from the use of Foley Kidney Pills."—Al. A. Godfrey, Forest Grove, Oregon.

Too much work and too little work seem to have about the same effect on persons past middle age. Proper action of the kidneys is necessary to good health. They act as a filter and remove from the blood poisonous waste matter which if permitted to remain in the system leads to many complications.

Many nervous, tired, run-down men and women suffer from pains in the back and sides, dizzy spells, bladder weakness, sore muscles and stiff joints and fail to realize that rheumatism, diabetes or even Bright's disease may result.

If you have cause to believe that your kidneys are weak, disordered or inactive you should act immediately. Foley Kidney Pills have been used by young, middle aged and old with complete satisfaction. They act quickly and surely and have given relief in cases of ten years' standing.

HOW To Give Tone and Character to a Room

THAT your home, whether it be in a four room flat or a twenty room mansion, shall be artistic is a laudable ambition, but it is well to remember that art is defined as the skill of handicraft and that nothing is skillful that is inappropriate.

The first and perhaps most important rule in furnishing a house is the following: Don't put big features into a small room.

To begin with the parlor, that apartment in the average home of today is not sufficiently capacious to accommodate massive upholstered furniture without conveying the impression of being stuffy and overcrowded, and yet many women refuse to eliminate what they have been educated to regard as essential

Such a parlor is most often entirely without character. It fails to strike the mean between luxuriousness and utility, which its circumscribed dimensions demand. Harmony and simplicity could effect wonderful reforms in many drawing rooms. One large masterpiece by Corot, beautiful as it is in itself, could wreck beyond repair the gentility of any 12 by 12 drawing room in which it might be hung.

The fault of overcrowding and an incongruous mixture of styles is not so general in dining rooms as in parlors, but character is frequently lost through overornamentation of mantels and sideboard.

The dining room, if it is a dining room and not compelled, as, of course, many are, to fill the double function of refectory and sitting room, should have its purpose made attractively apparent, not only by its chief central feature, the table, but by chairs of amplitude and comfortable solidity. It is a mistake to install cheap dining room chairs; far better, if necessary, to economize in some other direction. Let the chairs typify inexhaustible hospitality rather than be merely "seats at table."

The excellence of a library is naturally judged by the choice number of its books. But be your books what they may, if you would really boast a library in your house, have the room arranged so that reading appears to be its primary purpose. Do not imagine that a small central chandelier, which would serve the purpose in your front hall, can fill a like mission in your library.

HOW TO MAKE YOUR FAVORITE PERFUMERY.

—To the woman who has unemployed time on her hands and who would be interested making some practical experiments the following perfumery formulas, reprinted from the Electrical Experimenter, offer a unique opportunity:

In all the following formulas secure the best ingredients regardless of price. Quality is of the first importance. Procure the best spirits of deodorized alcohol obtainable. When the perfumes are mixed they should be frequently agitated and allowed to stand two or three weeks before filtering. Age improves all perfumes if kept in a moderate atmosphere and in a dark place.

SANITARY PILLOWS.

Why One Should Be Careful In Selecting These Necessary Articles.

With feathers an ounce of prevention is worth several pounds of cure. Read the tags on the pillows you buy to see if the feathers are new. Dirty feathers, from which the lumen or protein matter in the quill has not been removed, carrying barnyard filth, mean a smelly pillow, with possible danger from disease. It is very difficult to purify them perfectly even by factory methods.

Never buy pillows made of secondhand feathers. You can never tell whence they came or whither they go. This was where our grandmother got her start. She had feathers of known origin, from her own barnyard, sun or oven baked, and she changed the ticks faithfully, often with thorough washing of the feathers themselves.

Modern cleaning establishments, using either live steam or an electrochemical process, offer the housekeeper every opportunity for the bacteriological cleanliness of her feather beds and pillows. If the inside of the cup should be clean, so also should the inside of the pillow.

Buy only pillows made in factories which have a process for complete sterilization. One woman after seeing a film picture of the factory method of removing dirt from feathers and the minute evidence of how much it was needed wrote to the factory for a supply of the sterilized article, saying that she hadn't had a night's sleep since seeing the pictures.

Why You Have Gooseflesh In Chilly Temperatures.

Gooseflesh is nothing more or less than a contracting of the muscles under the skin. This causes the tiny blood vessels also to contract and drives the blood out. The skin tightens, and this acts directly on the hair follicles, which are always at an angle with the skin and not directly inward. Therefore as the skin exerts a pull the angle is changed and the hair is made to stand straight up. As the growth of hair on the body is so slight, the hair follicles are clearly visible, and what we term gooseflesh is the result. But it is nothing more or less than the hair standing on end.

Why We Hear More Clearly on a Frosty Night.

When the atmosphere is dense, as on a frosty night, sounds are carried farther and faster than when it is warm. Ordinarily if you walked three times as far away from the source of a noise as you were when it first reached you the sound would not be one-third of its original intensity, but one-ninth.

How the Magnet Will Hunt the Needles You Drop on the Floor.

Much time is saved in hunting for lost needles if you keep a horseshoe magnet suspended from a string in your workbasket, ready to drop to the floor and hunt your lost needles for you.

Some Trees.

In the angle between the Kings and Kern canyons lies a woodland empire beside which the Harz and Black forest of Germany would appear almost diminutive. Within the borders of the Sequoia National park and the General Grant National park near by there are no fewer than 1,166,000 sequoia trees, and of these 12,000 are more than ten feet in diameter. In the Sequoia National park stands the largest tree in the world—not the tallest, but the largest—the General Sherman tree, with a diameter of 36.5 feet and a height of 279.9 feet. Its massive trunk and branches contain about 1,000,000 feet of lumber, board measure. This is equal to the amount of lumber that is cut from forty acres of average Minnesota timberland.—Argonaut.

FOR WOMEN MOTORISTS.

Some Things a Good Driver Should and Should Not Do.

The good driver of a motorcar never applies brakes swiftly except in an emergency. When drawing up at a street side she cuts off ignition early and allows momentum to carry the car to the stopping place, using the service brake gradually. The good driver thus saves gasoline and wear upon brakes, coasting to a stop with the smoothness of operation of an easy start.

A good driver never uses the emergency brake, because she never has emergencies. She sees and avoids the emergency before it arrives. The poor driver rushes into trouble and depends upon quickness in grabbing the emergency lever to save life. More than one accident has followed a futile attempt to find the seldom used emergency lever in a hurry.

The good driver rounds sharp corners to the right and goes over extremely rough stretches of road or hits unexpected "thank you ma'ams" with clutch disengaged, to save the rear axle mechanism.

The good driver uses the wheel with the least possible motion. She does not drag it suddenly from side to side, but turns it so gradually that passengers are unconscious of the fact. In rounding a corner she commences to straighten the car up before it is halfway around.—Woman's Home Companion.

RECORD COAL LOADING.

Uncle Sam's Plant at Cristobal Is the Fastest In the World.

The good work of the Cristobal coal loading plant at the isthmus of Panama is the subject of a report received at the war department from one of its boards, whose conclusions are that the plant fully meets the plans of the engineers and is probably the most efficient loading plant in the world. It was found that the minimum performance during the test was 1,930 tons an hour and the maximum 2,486 tons. The minimum occurred when one of the four diggers was temporarily out of commission, due to a defective bucket.

At 2,400 tons an hour the plant far exceeds the work of any other known plant for loading steamships or even of railroad loading plants. The canal collier Ulysses was loaded at the rate of 1,050 tons an hour, and 12,000 tons were put on her in eight hours. Merchant ships cannot be loaded at this rapid rate, as their hatches are too small and their bunkers are not arranged to admit of such work. This is a feature in shipbuilding that is being carefully taken care of nowadays in constructing ships that are to pass through the canal. All new United States naval colliers are so built that they can be loaded at high speed.

Swayed by a Bell's Tones.

The Church of St. Nicalso, in the city of Rheims, is surrounded with pillars. When a certain bell in the tower is rung the top of one pillar always sways to the extent of seven inches on each side, although the base is immovable, and the stones are so firmly cemented as to seem like a solid piece of masonry. Notwithstanding that each of the four bells is about the same distance from the trembling pillar none of the others has the slightest effect on it.

Impecunious Irritation.

"You say the couple quarreled on their honeymoon?"

"Yes. You see, they hadn't much to start with, and the honeymoon had got to its last quarter."—Baltimore American.

SIXTY KILLED IN INDIANA CYCLONE

Newcastle Residence District Wiped Out.

CINCINNATI IS ALSO HIT

Two Are Reported Dead at Richmond, Ind.—Storm Passed Around Business Section of Newcastle—300 or 400 Houses Blown Down—Loss Put at Million.

Chicago, Mar. 12.—A long-distance telephone from Newcastle, Ind., said that the death list in the cyclone which struck there is estimated at sixty at least. Nineteen bodies already have been found. Fifteen thousand people live in Newcastle.

Newcastle, Ind., Mar. 12.—Death and devastation filled the greater part of Newcastle following a tornado that wrecked the residential part of the city and left the dead and dying in wreckage and on the bare ground.

Hundreds Are Dead and Injured.

More than 300 houses were torn to pieces in the worst storm Newcastle ever knew and over 400 were damaged.

The damage will be close to $1,000,000.

First Identified Dead.

The first identified dead were: Gray Davis, Mrs. John R. Davis, Mrs. Archie Fletcher, Edward Donlop, James Neilis, Elizabeth Day, Mrs. Acie Williamson and daughter Opal, —— Razer, man; —— Hayler, girl.

With only one telegraph wire in use, the town virtually was isolated from the rest of the world and left to recover its dead alone.

The first calls for help were sent to Indianapolis, whence physicians and nurses started at once for this place.

Late in the night the relief forces had not been able to obtain complete or accurate information on the casualties. It was then reported that as many as fifty perished.

The storm broke suddenly late in the afternoon. The victims were trapped as the storm seized upon their homes and tore them to pieces, laying them flat or lifting them from their foundations and bearing them away on the wind.

The power-house was torn to pieces, and the remainder of the night was black as the blackest hour of the tornado.

When the storm had passed, leaving black ruin and the bruised and battered bodies of the dead in its wake, men ran about, shouting, carrying lanters where they could be found.

Women and children ran shrieking from house to house. Members of families were separated and for hours knew not whether they must mourn the lost as dead.

Stores as Hospitals.

These and scenes almost beyond description met the unorganized rescuers who hurried into the city from the surrounding towns and countryside.

The train of doctors and nurses from Indianapolis was the first organized rescue party to reach Newcastle. They found many dead, but a far greater number of injured requiring their ministrations.

In lieu of hospital accommodations stores and homes that had survived the cyclone were made into improvised hospitals.

Storm Hits Cincinnati.

Cincinnati, O., Mar. 12.—A cyclone swept through the fashionable residential district of Cincinnati at 8 o'clock Sunday night. Many houses were blown down or partially wrecked. First reports say many were injured.

Two Dead at Richmond.

Richmond, Ind., Mar. 12.—Two are known to be dead and many injured in a cyclone which struck Richmond. The property loss is heavy.

PREMIER PLOTTERS GUILTY

Three of Family That Tried to Poison Lloyd George Convicted.

London, Mar. 12.—Mrs. Alice Wheeldon and her daughter, Mrs. Winifred Mason, and the daughter's husband, Alfred George Mason, were found guilty of conspiracy to murder Premier Lloyd George and Arthur Henderson, member of the war council. Miss Harriet Ann Wheeldon, another daughter of Mrs. Wheeldon, was acquitted. She was discharged from custody.

Mrs. Wheeldon was sentenced to ten years' penal servitude. A sentence of seven years was imposed upon Alfred Mason, while his wife was given five years' penal servitude.

RUSSIANS PURSUE TURKS

Slavs Have Advanced 50 Miles South of Hamadan, Says Petrograd.

Petrograd, Mar. 12.—Russian troops have occupied the town of Sahna, in northwestern Persia, and are pursuing the retreating Turks in the direction of Bisitun, fifty miles south of Hamadan, according to an official statement issued by the Russian war department. In Asia Minor, the Turks took the offensive along the Sivas road, but were repulsed by the Russians.

CARRANZA ELECTED MEXICAN PRESIDENT

Majority of Senators and Deputies His Supporters.

Mexico City, Mar. 12.—Elections were held throughout the republic for president, senators and deputies. The election of Venustiano Carranza, who as "First Chief" of the Constitutionalist revolution has dominated Mexico since the overthrow of the Huerta government, was conceded.

It was the first national election since that which lodged Francisco Madero in the presidency for his short-lived term of office. This fact caused much enthusiasm among the people. Mr. Carranza took an active part in the campaign.

The presidential campaign was not as strongly contested as the election of senators and deputies, judging from the early election returns received here. It was assured that the revolutionary government would carry a large majority in both chambers.

OWEN SEEKS MORE CLOTURE

Oklahoma Senator Is Opposed to One-third Rule in Senate.

Washington, Mar. 12.—In an article Senator Robert L. Owen of Oklahoma, who has fought against the filibuster ever since he has been in the senate, says that the new modified cloture rule "still permits the minority to defeat the will of the majority by a filibustering process." By his own filibuster speech of eleven and one half hours six years ago this month, New Mexico and Arizona were admitted to the Union.

Senator Owen said he is just as much opposed to one-third ruling two-thirds as he was to one man ruling the other ninety-five senators and will fight it.

UNLOADING POTATO STOCKS

Looks Like Longs Are Running to Cover in Bull Campaign.

Cedar Rapids, Ia., Mar. 12.—Evidence that potato longs are endeavoring to unload a surplus in a manner to escape attention has been disclosed here. A carload bought "on the market" at a northern wholesale point was retailed in a small town near Cedar Rapids at $1.65 a bushel.

The price to the retailer at the point of purchase could not have been above $1.25 to $1.30. The shipment of standard stock in 90 pound bags northern grown.

Fritz Wolf Is Freed.

Chicago, Mar. 12.—Fritz Wolf, taken into custody on the suspicion of being an escaped member of the crew of the interned commerce raider Prinz Eitel Frederich, and thought also to have been a German spy, was released by Hinton G. Clabaugh, head of the local branch of the department of justice.

"King" Schlatter Guilty.

Los Angeles, Mar. 12.—"King" Francis Schlatter, self-styled divine healer, was found guilty in the United States district court on a charge of using the mails to defraud.

"Prince" August Schrader, co-defendant in the case, died son after the start of the trial several weeks ago.

RUSSIA'S GREAT CLOWN.

Durov Had a Biting Tongue, and He Dearly Loved Pigs.

The famous Russian clown, Anatole Durov, held that, whatever your vocation, the only thing that brings you success is work. Accordingly he became the most industrious, successful and beloved clown in Russia and probably the richest clown in the world, too, for when he died he left a fortune of $1,000,000 and a collection of trained animals that brought visitors to his home from all over the world.

Born of an ancient and noble family, he was a pupil of the renowned cadet corps, but before his graduation he ran away and joined a circus.

But he had no ambition to be an ordinary clown. He kept in touch with politics, with everything that took place in Russia, and applied to it his wit. Soon he became an unlicensed censor of Russian society in motley. Evil he rebuked by jest and gibe. No man was in too high a place for his tongue, and furious officials once brought about his exile. Russia loved him too well for that, however, and soon he was back in the ring. To show that he meant to be more discreet he appeared with a padlock attached to his mouth.

He was a very famous animal trainer. The pig was his favorite pupil, and it is said that his pigs could do almost everything that human beings can do except talk.

A team of trained pigs drew him about the streets, and so did he love them that a pig's head with a "D" to the left was the device upon his seal.

He used to enjoy telling how, when he was on tour in Germany, one of his pigs ran away and came finally to a farm not far from Berlin. The farmer, who was a kind man, gave the tired looking beast food and drink. To his consternation, the visitor solemnly mounted an upturned barrel, looked gratefully at his host and stood on its head as a token of appreciation.—Youth's Companion.

A Giant Emperor.

Maximinus, the giant Roman emperor, could twist coins into corkscrews, powder hard rocks between his fingers and do other seemingly impossible things. When angered he often broke the jaw of a horse or the skull of an ox with his fist. His wife's bracelet served him for a ring, and every day he ate, besides other food, sixty pounds of meat and drank an amphora of wine.

How the Days Go By.

Frank looked up thoughtfully from his engine and cars game of railroading, played on the primitive plan of a five-year-old boy.

"Mamma, isn't it funny how the days go by, one after the other, just like a train of cars with Sunday for the engine."—Harper's.

BRITISH REACH GOAL AT BAGDAD

Gen. Maude's Drive Declared Greatest of War.

TWO-YEAR CAMPAIGN ENDED

London and Entente Capitals Hear News With Great Enthusiasm—Captured City Was Capital of Ancient Empires—Is Holy Moslem City. Morale of Turk Army Weakens.

London, Mar. 12.—Bagdad has fallen. Official announcement is made that British troops under General Maude have entered and taken possession of the city.

Few details of the capture are available. All that England knows now is that the ancient Moslem metropolis is in British hands.

England Jubilant Over Victory.

That is sufficient cause for jubilation. Not since the beginning of the war has a greater victory crowned the hard work of England's army.

The capture of Bagdad wipes out the defeat of Townsend's army at Ctesiphon and its capture at Kut-El-Amara.

Maude's Drive Called Greatest of War.

General Maude's drive northward along the crooked Tigris since the capture of Kut is regarded as one of the most spectacular and brilliant feats of the war.

News of Bagdad's capture reached London late in the afternoon. It was promptly flashed broadcast and came to all Europe as one of the greatest surprises of the war. That the city would fall sooner or later was generally expected, but that the capture would come as soon surprised even the most sanguine British military experts.

The Turks had been expected to make a stubborn stand on the River Diala, six miles away. Only a few days ago Major General Frederick B. Maurice, chief director of military operations at the British war office, had predicted a hard battle. The idea was general that for two years the Turks had been busy constructing powerful defenses to ward off the final British onslaught.

Blow to Ottoman Morale.

All England was jubilant and advices from the other entente capitals show the spirit of triumph is fully shared there.

The capture of Bagdad, it is felt, goes a long way toward re-establishing the badly impaired British prestige in the Near and Far East.

To the Turks the reverse is one of the worst they have suffered in the war. It is expected to deal a telling blow to the morale of the Ottoman army and to the Sultan's prestige through the Mohammedan world. Bagdad has been in Turkish possession since 1638, when Sultan Murad IV, wrested it from the Persians. Two centries ago one desperate but futile effort to retake it was made by Shah Nadir. Bagdad represents, therefore, a precious page in Ottoman history. The Mohammedans have given it the name of "Dar Es Salam" (City of Salvation, or "Sacred City").

Germans Predict Turk Rally.

Washington, Mar. 12.—In Teutonic quarters here there was unconcealed gloom. "Everything's gone dead wrong down there since Von Der Goltz died," said a German diplomat. Further than that he had nothing to say. Germans well-versed with military affairs took the view that Bagdad, like Kut-El-Amara, was voluntarily evacuated by the Turks, who were "luring on the British" into regions which will be swamped when the spring thaw sets in. They likened the Turkish strategy of retirement to that of the Germans on the Somme and Ancre, in the west.

"There is an army of at least one million Turkish soldiers, quietly organized and trained for more than a year," said one. "This army will be heard from when the proper time comes."

One of the amazing features of the British success is the rapidity with which they took and swept beyond Ctesiphon, the high water mark of their advance two years ago when the Turks unexpectedly rallied and drove them back to Kut.

Four Freighters Arrive.

New York, Mar. 12.—Four freight steamships arrived here after avoiding the perils in the submarine zones. They were the Mississippi of the French line, from Bordeaux; the British steamships Port Napier and St George, which were under orders for the Cunard line, and the Shonga, from Dakar, in Senegambia, Africa.

Kaiser Denudes Belgium of Trees.

Havre, Mar. 12.—The German military administration in Belgium has begun systematically requisitioning the trees throughout the country. According to information received by the Belgian government here, the Germans are taking the finest growths, province by province, and sending them to Germany.

Gerard Reaches Havana.

Havana, Mar. 12.—James W. Gerard, recalled United States ambassador to Germany, arrived here on the steamship Infanta Isabel from Corunna, Spain.

Happe—That man's gone through twenty fortunes or more.

Happe—He isn't. He's an expert accountant.

Shrewd Bobby.

"Here's a nickel, dear, for doing that errand for me."

"Make it 5 pennies, please, auntie."

"Why, child, the amount is the same."

"Yes, but a nickel comes in too handy when mamma wants to go and telephone somebody."—Boston Transcript.

"What kind of a creeper do you like best about a house?"

"A little fat baby."—Exchange.

DEMOCRATIC HOUSE PROSPECTS IMPROVE

Death of Sulloway, Republican, Weakens G. O. P.

Washington, Mar. 12.—The prospect of the Democrats retaining control of the organization in the next congress, an extraordinary session of which has been called by President Wilson for April 16, was again strengthened by the death of Representative Cyrus Adams Sulloway, Republican, of New Hampshire.

Before the death of Mr. Sulloway the count in the house stood, Democrats, 215; Republicans, 214, with hopes of lining up Representative Martin, of Louisiana, a Progressive, to give them a tie vote with the Democrats.

With this line up the Republicans hoped to force a coalition organization agreement. But the announcement Saturday by Representative Schall, of Minnesota (Progressive) that he would not be a party to any independent movement which would block any important legislation considerably reduced the strength of the demand the Republicans could make on the Democrats for equal control of the house.

TO START MOOSE SUCCESSOR

Call for Convention of All Kinds of Progressives Issued.

New York, Mar. 12.—Announcement that negotiations are under way with Progressive Republicans and Democrats, Prohibitionists, Socialists and representatives of other parties "to meet with a committee of Progressives and discuss plans for the formation of a league of liberals" was made by Matthew Hale, acting chairman of the Progressive national committee, in issuing a call for a convention of enrolled members of that party in St. Louis, April 12, 13 and 14.

POTATOLESS DAYS IN BRITAIN

Berlin Claims London Times Admits Great Tuber Shortage.

Berlin, Mar. 12.—According to the London Times, copies of which have reached here, the potato shortage in England has reached such serious degree that several "potatoless" days each week are imminent.

The British stock of potatoes is exhausted, the London Journal states, and whatever remained in the villages is being detained in order to obtain still higher prices. London hospitals can no longer be provided with potatoes.

SHOOT SONS, ADVISES GLUCK

Prima Donna Says Such Course Is Preferable to War.

Boston, Mar. 12.—"Shoot your sons dead, American mothers before you allow them to enlist for war."

Such is the advice of Alma Gluck, the grand opera star and wife of Zimbalist, the violinist. Mme. Gluck is of Roumanian birth, her husband is a Russian.

"If every woman would pledge herself to kill her sons before she let them go to war, there would be no war," she continued with emotion in an interview.

Man Saved by Accident Cleared.

Columbia, Miss., Mar. 12.—A death bed confession by Joseph Beard, a farmer, announced by the sheriff's office, cleared of suspicion William Purvis, who twenty-five years ago escaped death by hanging, after conviction for murder, only because the noose about his neck slipped when the scaffold trap was sprung, which was looked on as a Divine interposition and brought a commutation of sentence.

WEDDED SIXTY-FOUR YEARS.

And a Cuss Word Has Never Passed Between This Couple.

In a day of hasty divorces, when minds are turning to seek ways in which married couples may live happily, credit is due to Mr. and Mrs Charles Bodine of Philadelphia, who have been married sixty-four years. The fact that they have lived together that long is interesting in itself, but their chief claim to public notice is in their statement that they have never quarreled or even exchanged a cross word.

The wife ascribes her happiness to these causes:

"Because I think there is no one like 'father.'

"Because I am always willing to humor his little ways.

"Because I will do anything in the world to please him.

"Because I have always given him plenty of good food.

"Because I have always praised him when he deserved it."

The husband's viewpoint of the marital partnership and the reasons which he finds for the unmarred felicity of himself and his wife are contained in the following:

"Because I think my wife is the finest woman in the world.

"Because I never have a vacation unless she goes too.

"Because I have always been ready to listen to what she has to say.

"Because I have never wanted anybody else but 'mother.'"

The fact is that this couple continued courtship after marriage and each contributed to the union love, respect and willingness to make sacrifices, each for the other, in the little as well as the big things. Most marital unhappiness is based on selfishness.—Exchange.

Twelve Was a Mystic Number.

Why should a jury number twelve? Blackstone attributes the fixing of the number to the Normans, who, like all their Scandinavian ancestors, held twelve in veneration as a mystic number. Stephen, in his "Commentaries," supports this idea and gives instances of the regard paid to twelve in early Teutonic laws and finds distinct evidence that twelve men were required among the Anglo-Saxons to form an inquisition.—London Standard.

ARMED SHIPS BRING CRISIS

Germany Has Declared That They Will Be Treated as Pirates by U-Boat Commanders — American Captains Have Orders to Shoot on Sight.

Washington, Mar. 12.—Within ten days the question of actual hostilities or peace between the United States and Germany will be settled.

With armed American merchantmen prepared to dash through the submarine zone, the President and his advisers began "watchful waiting."

Long days and anxious nights will now occupy Washington and the country.

The administration was convinced the differences between the United States and Germany will reach a climax when the first armed American merchant ship meets a German submarine.

While all ship movements were shrouded behind impenetrable secrecy, it was stated American commercial ships with naval guns and gunners will depart in a few days and enter the war zone within ten days at most.

The American gunners will have orders to fire at once on any submarine which approaches in a threatening manner.

Hope Is Held.

The administration still hopes German submarine commanders will follow international law. If this is followed, and American ships are boarded and searched for contraband, the ships will not resist.

Only this course, it was stated, can prevent open hostilities.

Meantime the navy department pressed steadily the work of arming merchantmen. Every ship, which requests protection, will be given adequate armament and qualified naval gunners.

Every government agency will be invoked to insure secrecy concerning departures, arrivals and probable courses.

The government's war-making machinery is ordered to prepare to fight, and industrial and commercial mobilization will go steadily on. Through the council of national defense, and its advisory committee, all the nation's energies will be made available for the President to use.

Legislation Is Planned.

He and his advisers have begun planning the "war legislation" to be laid before the extraordinary session of congress called April 16.

All these matters were with the international situation.

DEWEY'S IRON NERVE.

How, When a Young Officer, He Subdued an Ugly Mutineer.

In Admiral Dewey's autobiography, written for Hearst's Magazine, is the following story, which shows that as a young lieutenant commander the hero of Manila bay already possessed the iron nerve that characterized his later life:

"Commodore H. K. Thatcher, in command of the Colorado, welcomed me on board heartily, notwithstanding my youth. He said the ship was in a bad state and gave me full authority in the government of the crew of 700 men.

"Gradually I was able to identify the worst characters. They were the ones I had to tame. The ringleader was a giant red headed Englishman named Webster. Many of his mates were in bodily fear of this great brute. The prison being full, I had him put down in the hold in irons.

"One day I heard a breaking of glass, and the orderly told me that Webster had broken free of his irons, had driven the sentry out of the hold and, in a blind rage, was breaking up stone bottles of soda and ale that were stored there.

"I sent the master-at-arms to arrest him, and the master-at-arms came back to report that Webster had sworn he would kill the first man that tried to come down the ladder into the hold.

"Such a situation was not to be endured. I took my revolver and started for the hold. When I came to the ladder Webster yelled up the threat which had made the others hesitate in view of his known ferocity. Of course, any one going down the ladder would expose his whole body to an attack before his head was below the deck level and he could see his adversary. But any temporizing with the fellow meant a bad effect on the whole ship's company.

"'Webster, this is the executive officer, Mr. Dewey,' I called to him. 'I am coming down and, Webster, you may be sure of this—if you raise a finger against me I shall kill you.'

"I stepped down the ladder quickly, to see Webster standing with a stone ale bottle in his hand ready to throw. But he did not throw it and submitted to arrest peaceably."

"I haven't done a day's work in two years."

"You ought to be ashamed of yourself."

"Oh, no. I'm a night watch in a bank."—Gargoyle.

BERLIN ADMITS NEW ANCRE WITHDRAWAL

French Make Successful Attacks in Woevre Region.

London, Mar. 12.—The Paris war office reports that French troops made several successful surprise attacks Saturday night on the German trenches in the sectors of Lassigny and Canny-Sur-Matz and north of Jury Wood, in the Woevre region.

In the Maisons de Champagne, which has been the scene of bitter engagements in the last few days, spirited artillery activity is reported.

Berlin, reporting on engagements on the Ancre river front, says that after infantry fighting with British troops near Irles, German rear guard detachments, in accordance with the orders of their comamnders, retired on the Teuton main positions.

French attacks launched Saturday between the Rivers Avre and Oise were without success, according to Berlin. Renewed attacks against the German positions on Hill 185 and on both sides of the Champagne Farm, it is added, were sanguinarily repulsed, notwithstanding the use by the French of strong forces and large supplies of ammunition.

FOOT RULES IN OUR ARMY.

Advice Which May Be of Value to the General Public.

No better advice to the public can be given in reference to the care of their feet than is embodied in our Army Manual of Military Hygiene, which, of course, is not in general circulation. The points particularly emphasized may be paraphrased as follows:

Wear a shoe wide enough and straight enough on the inner margin to give the toes space for their proper position.

The best treatment of bunions will be found in removing the pressure over the affected joint. This can only be done by supplying a properly fitted shoe.

To relieve ingrowing nails they should be cut squarely across and not rounded. Scrape the nail thin on the top and insert a pledget of cotton under the edge.

For corns use properly fitted shoes. Remove corns or callouses only when they are a source of pain and irritation.

Have at least two pairs of well fitted shoes for constant use and smooth stockings as free from holes and darnings as possible.

After a long walk wash the feet, dust with foot powder and put on clean stockings and shoes, but do not soak the feet in cold water.

Foot powder shaken into the socks or dusted over the feet will help prevent blisters.

Woolen stockings will absorb perspiration. Those who are on their feet very much should harden them by applying foot powder and bathing the feet frequently in cold water.

The correction of flat foot may require a long period and can be aided by furnishing a broad and well shaped shoe, taking care that the foot is strengthened by proper exercises and not overloaded.

Do not "toe out," but walk with the inner margins of the feet parallel so that the weight of the body will be thrown on the outer or stronger part of the foot.—Kathleen Hills in Leslie's.

Looks are a means of judging a girl's possibilities of early marriage, which is a negative element of her value with some firms, as they do not wish to waste money on training girls who will leave them soon. HOW

To Run Furnace Smoothly and With Comfort

O[illegible] heater is [illegible] damper [illegible] which when open allows air to get into funnel thus checking draft. This is between funnel damper and top of heater. We have fourteen radiators in a house of twelve rooms and two bathrooms.

Assuming your radiators are large enough and full of water, you should have no great trouble. However, it is very important to keep the air out of the radiators in the top floor, and we test ours on that floor every day by opening the little air valve on radiator until the water flows in each and then closing. If the water does not come there is quite likely not enough in the system to fill all. We turn on more until it shows in overflow pipe.

Another important thing is to scrape the ashes from off the shelves at the top of heater. We have a small door for each shelf admitting of cleaning, which we do with a wire brush on long handle. We brush shelves every morning, taking one minute to do it. While doing this have every damper wide open so as to draw the ashes away. The damper in funnel at all other times we keep closed just as tight as we can get it, there being sufficient space by hole in middle of it and around it to take off gas and make fire burn. We are particular to keep heater well shaken and well cleaned out in ashpit, as we get the best results by good bottom draft. Shake during day if necessary but surely late in the evening, getting fire in good condition for night and putting on fresh coal on retiring. We then leave the dampers as follows: funnel closed, top of heater closed, little door between slightly open, allowing some air into funnel; ash pit damper open the very least. The water now in heater is about 170 degrees and in the morning should be about 130 degrees.

In the morning close little door at top, open damper at top of heater, open ash pit door, leaving damper in funnel closed tight, and while we are getting the kitchen range a-going the heater is warming up nicely, and when next we go to the cellar we find 150 to 170 degrees of heat. We then open some of the radiators on the lower floor that we closed the night before. This we always do, as we think our plants do better if not in too hot a place at night. As for managing the heater during the day, it depends on the weather, but anyway we endeavor to obtain results by use of damper in ashpit door, believing bottom draft most economical and carries less waste heat into the chimney. Hope this will be of some use to you.

FOOT TREATMENT.

Why Your Feet Go to Sleep and How to Wake Them.

There is hardly a man or woman who has not experienced the strange feeling of having his or her foot asleep. Few of them really know what is taking place. Though the pain is a strange one, the cause is explained readily.

The strangeness of the "foot going to sleep" is due to a mechanical obstruction of the great sciatic nerve. When we sit for a long time with our legs crossed or with the back of the thigh pressing upon the edge of a chair the sciatic nerve is squeezed.

The sciatic nerve is the largest in the body. It springs from the small of the back and supplies nearly the whole of the nerves of the leg and foot. The sciatic, like all other nerves, is really a great bundle of nerve fibers, each of which has its own sheath.

The whole nerve is elastic, and pressure on it will flatten it, as a rubber hose is flattened by pressure. The nerve fibers are like bundles of thread, but finer. They run longitudinally, each thread having its ending somewhere in a muscle or in the skin and passing, without branching or communicating with the other threads with which it is wrapped up, straight to its [illegible] in some nerve center of the brain or spinal cord.

How these nerves carry sensation is not known, but the operation is similar to that of messages passing by electricity over a telegraph wire. If a nerve [illegible] no longer carries sensation. [illegible] at one point on [illegible] the work is soft, and [illegible] firm. [illegible] matter within the sheath [illegible] apart, so that the continuity is actually broken and the messages can no longer pass to or fro over it.

Why Some of Us Are Color Blind.

That part of the eye called the retina is divided into little structures, some of which can perceive a slowly moving ray of light. Others can see only medium or rapidly moving waves. The slow waves look red, the medium green or yellow and the rapid waves blue or violet. When any of these delicate eye structures lose the power of visualizing the colors which they were destined to see the eye's owner becomes color blind, being unable to differentiate between red or green or blue.

"THE MYSTERY OF THE RAISIN"

By William B. Hartzog

CHAPTER II

The New School Teacher

One day early in September Squire Brown drove up to the Grove residence. After being seated on the porch the Squire said, "Nathan, I am around taking up subscription for our school. We have secured the services of Samuel Warner of Buffalo to conduct our school this year. He is a scholarly young man of fine manners. We will have to raise a little more than we did last year but the best is none too good for [illegible]."

After discussing the matter Nathan Grove enlarged his subscription and Squire Brown went away.

"What did Squire Brown want?" inquired Clara.

"He is getting up a subscription for our new school teacher. His name is Samuel Warner from Buffalo."

School opened on the fifteenth day of September. The young teacher made a good impression. The pupils were all pleased with his agreeable manners and new methods.

The young teacher was interested in the church work of the village and the minister prevailed on him to take the superintendency of the Sunday-school. It was not long before nearly all of the young people of the village and country about were enlisted in the Sunday-school.

Luke became a teacher in the Sunday-school, having a class of boys. Clara taught a class of girls.

In December the lake was a solid mass of ice and the superintendent suggested hat they have a Christmas skating party. The young people were delighted with the idea. On Christmas eve a huge bonfire blazed on the bank of the lake and the young people had a merry time.

Mrs. Barnes had taken sick during the week and Luke felt that it was his duty to remain with his mother.

During the evening of the party Mr. Warner solicited Clara to join him in a tour around the lake. He found that she did not have anyone to accompany her home and asked that he might be her escort. She consented. About midnight they started for her home. On the way they met Luke driving hurriedly toward town. It was a bright moon light night and Clara hailed him and inquiredwhy he was going to town at such a late hour. He replied that his mother was very sick and he was hastening for the doctor.

On reaching home she informed her mother of Mrs. Barnes' condition. Mrs. Grove immediately arose and went to Mrs. Barnes' home and stayed with her the remainder of the night. Early the following morning. Clara went to the Barnes' home. She discovered that Mrs. Barnes' condition was serious. She tried to speak to Luke and extend her sympathy and explain why she was with Mr. Warner. Luke appeared very much distressed and left the room. Clara returned home having an opportunity to speak to him.

Luke's cup of anguish was full. His mother's critical illness and the thought that Mr. Warner was about to alienate the affections of Clara utterly discourged him.

A few days later he started to the village to find some woman who would aid about the house and care for his mother. As he passed Nathan Grove's house he saw Mr. Warner sitting near the window. This increased his distress of mind. He knew that Samuel Warner was his superior. He was bright, brilliant and winsome. He felt that it would be an easy matter for him to win favor with Clara. Any of the young ladies in the community would have been glad to have received his attentions.

Luke's mother lingered for many weeks, then came the end. It was a sad hour for Luke. His friends gathered about him and tried to comfort him. Clara's heart was touched over Luke's distress and she wrote him a letter expressing her sympathy, but there was not a word in the letter to indicate that she loved him. He read the letter and tore it to pieces, saying to himself, "If sheonly would say that she loved me I could endure this great sorrow." The truth was that Clara could not say that she loved Luke. Mr. Warner's charming ways had completely captivated her.

During the springtime Clara and Mr. Warner were often together. Luke was in the village one day and as he passed near he old mill, he discovered Mr. Warner and Clara in a boat some distance out in the lake.

"This ends it," he said to himself. "I cannot live here and witness this any longer."

He drove over to Sherman the next day and ordered sale bills printed. The following week the people about Findlay Lake read that he would sell off everything.

"Luke Barnes is doing a rash thing," said Nathan Grove to his wife. "He is a fine young man. He is strong in body and understands farming. He has eighty acres of fertile land with good buildings. What he ought to do, is to stay right here; find some good young woman, marry her and establish a home."

"I think so too," replied Mrs. Grove, "but he seems to be desperately discouraged."

Clara overheard what her parents said. She was conscious that she was the cause of his rash act.

The sale occurred on the same day the school close. The next day Luke started for the village carrying a traveling bag. Clara saw him coming and she ran out to the gate.

"Luke, where are you going?"

"I don't know, Clara, I am ruined."

"Don't go Luke, it is a mistake."

Luke made no reply, but walked on toward the village. As he passed through the village he saw Mr. Warner loading his trunk into a wagon preparatory to going back to Buffalo. Luke walked on through the village and out over the hills toward Sherman. It was late in the afternoon when he reached his uncle's home.

After supper he said, "Uncle John, look after the farm, take all the proceeds and if I never return the farm is yours." At that he took up his traveling bag containing a few belongings and started.

"Luke Barnes, you're not going away to-night, are you?"

"Yes! Goodbye."

"Tell us where you are going, Luke."

"I don't know."

"That is awful," said John to his wife.

"It certainly is, but we can not stop him. He is almost beside himself. I tell you, John, it is all brought about by that Mr. Warner. Luke's heart was set on Clara Grove and Mr. Warner has won her away from him. He is a pretty smooth fellow, but, mark what I tell you, he is just fooling with Clara. When he goes away that will end it with Clara."

- - - - - - - - -

It was weeks before Clara heard frm Samuel Warner. At length a letter came stating that he had secured a position in Rochester, N. Y. She answered the letter, but never heard from him. Her dream was shattered. It was her turn to suffer.

A Scandal Averted.

Little Gertrude had been very naughty and had been severely slapped, first by the nurse and then by mother, with a promise of another dose from father when he came home.

She sat on the floor, her eyes filled with angry tears. Suddenly she rose with a determined look upon her little face, and seized her hat.

"Where are you going?" asked her mother.

"Out to tell the family secrets to the neighbors," said the child firmly.

But she didn't go.—Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

What She Asked For.

Uncle Jack, who was visiting them from the west, wished to talk to Elizabeth's father at his office. He could not find the telephone directory and thus appealed to three-year-old Elizabeth for information regarding the phone number: "Elizabeth, what does mother ask for when she talks to daddy at his office?"

Elizabeth was wise for her days.

"Money," she lisped.

Following Their Example.

"Why don't you go to your friends when you want to borrow money?"

"I have been to them, but just at present they are all hard pressed, they say."

"Then count me among your friends. Their judgment on you is good enough for me."—Detroit Free Press.

Possible Substitute.

"Nothing can ever take your place," cooed the bride.

"Nothing, dear?"

Something Accomplished.

"Well, was it?"

"No, but my pocketbook was."—Baltimore American.

VILLAGE ELECTION

THE PEOPLE'S TICKET WINS AT MONDAY'S ELECTION

Elect Full Ticket with the Exception of Assessor and One Trustee

Monday's election brought out a good vote, a total of 346 being cast. The People's Ticket won every office except village assessor which was returned to Samuel Steel by a majority of 31 votes and one trustee.

Dr. C. A. Waldron adds one more scalp to his belt and tucks away the village presidency for the next year, winning by a majority of 20 votes from his opponent Geo. B. Hines.

Clyde A. Barber, who is acting as clerk of the village, was defeated by J. Duaine Service who won by a majority of 153 votes.

For treasurer Friend A. McNeil won from John C. Mahaney by a majority of 61 votes.

Samuel Steel, our present village assessor, was re-elected over B. P. Anderson by a majority of 31 votes and, with one exception, was the only candidate on the Citizen's ticket elected.

The four successful trustees are Richard M. Moiles, who won from Dr. W. B. Hartzog by a majority of 94. Mr. Moiles was elected for the short term to fill vacancy made by the resignation of F. S. Anderson. For full term: John A. McIntyre on the Citizen's ticket, Geo. J. Kempf and Lester C. Rogers who ran on the People's ticket.

Vinol Restored Mr. Martin's Strength

Wapakoneta, Ohio.—"I am a farmer by occupation, and the Grippe left me with a bad cough and in a nervous, weak, run-down condition, and I could not seem to get anything to do me any good until I took Vinol, which built me up, and my cough and nervousness are all gone, and I can truly say Vinol is all that is claimed for it."—JAMES MARTIN.

"I'm seeing [illegible]," said the tramp at the door. "Would you assist me in me travels, mum?"

Told Him the Difference.

When the archbishop of Canterbury was a curate he conducted a Sunday school class.

The subject was King Solomon, and after the lesson he catechised the children.

"Tell me, boys," he said, "what was the difference between Solomon and other men?"

There was no answer.

"Come, come!" said the future primate. "Was there any difference, for instance, between King Solomon and myself?"

A small hand went up and a tiny voice replied.

"Please, sir, Solomon was wise."

Here We Show The Full Reo Line

TEN REOS to choose from the coming year—a car for your every need, including the needs of your business.

DOES THAT SOUND flippant? We assure you we do not mean it so. Nor is it far-fetched by any means.

IN TRUTH we do not know of anyone who owns one of every Reo model, but we could name several who own as many as four or more Reos of different types.

IT ISN'T UNCOMMON to find business men who own both 2-Ton and ¾-Ton Reo trucks, and one or more Reo pleasure cars as well.

AND IT ISN'T DIFFICULT to think of many who might profitably own even more of every model.

ONE THING IS SURE: You find more Reo models in the same owner's garage than of any other make.

THAT'S BECAUSE once a man owns a Reo he is "sold" on Reo quality, Reo dependability, and Reo low cost of upkeep.

SO WHEN HE DOES need another car or truck, either smaller or larger than the one he has, first thing he does is to find out whether Reo makes such an one.

"50 PER CENT OVERSIZE" in all vital parts, the Reo standard factor of safety, is in all Reos—look them over at the show.

LET A REO MAN go over the stripped "cut out" chassis with you.

THEN YOU'LL KNOW why Reos are so reliable and so almost unbelievably economical in upkeep.

NOT THE CHEAPEST to buy—but the cheapest to own—that is the Reo slogan.

OLD-FASHIONED GRANGE GATHERING

You are most cordially invited to attend an Old-Fashioned Family Gathering at the Grange Hall, Tecumseh, next Saturday, March 17th, St. Patrick's Day.

The ladies will serve an excellent dinner—as they always do—bless their hearts!

A fine program will be given. Some special music and an address by Dr F. A Perry, pastor of Plymouth M. P. Church, Adrian

I never happened to meet St Patrick In my recent trip around the world, I called at his castle in county Antrim, but he was not at home that day

His but told me that he had gone to the home of John Murphy, to pay his respects to Miss Lucy Ivaletta, John's youngest daughter

However, Worthy Master Boyce tells me that St. Patrick is a real honest-to-goodness adopted Irishman—and John ought to know.

So, all we Irish Grangers will want to come home on St. Patrick's Day And the German members will want to come because the Kaiser will be there And the rest of you will want to see what happens when the Irish meet the Kaiser.

No business that day, just a general jollification All roads will lead to Grange Hall on St. Patrick's Day in the morning

Now, we shall look for you, and if you are not there you will regret it forevermore—and then some

Fraternally,
The Secretrry.

"WAR BRIDES"

Nazimova, the great Russian actress was seen at Bradleys Opera house last Friday evening in the great photo-play production, "War Brides."

As an emotional actress Mme. Nazimova, was wonderful and told the story of a woman's sacrifice for the mothers of a war ridden country. Her protest against raising boys to be slain in war, how she defied an empire and her King in the interest of her cause was most vividly portrayed by Mme. Nazimova.

Those who saw "War Brides" will never forget the picture nor the story.

TWICE-TOLD TESTIMONY

Tecumseh People are Doing all They Can for Fellow Sufferers

Tecumseh testimony has been published to prove the merit of Doan's Kidney Pills to others in Tecumseh who suffer from bad backs and kidney ills. Lest any sufferer doubt this evidence of merit, we produce confirmed proof — statements from Tecumseh people who again endorse Doan's Kidney Pills—confirm their former testimony. Here's a Tecumseh case:

Geo. Chaplin, N. Pearl St., Tecumseh, gave the following statement on December 5, 1908. He said: "I have taken Doan's Kidney Pills and they proved to me that they are the good medicine that I have often heard others recommend. I had kidney trouble and got Doan's Kidney Pills at Wright & Son's Drug Store. They greatly benefited me."

Added Praise

On July 28, 1916, Mr. Chaplin said: "I still recommend Doan's Kidney Pills and my former endorsement still holds good."

Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Chaplin has twice publicly recommended. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y. adv

SKIDDING AUTOS.

Why Cars Skid and How to Overcome This Danger.

This is the time of the year skidding is prevalent, much more so than at other seasons. This is due to the fact that rain and ice keep the pavements wet or icy, according to the temperature. There is another element entering into the situation, however. Because of the cold and discomforts of motoring most folks who travel at this time of the year desire to get there and so travel faster. The very fact that they are uncomfortable causes them to pay less attention to driving with care. The result is they run up close behind some other vehicle which stops quickly. Then they jam on the brakes hard and skid. Or a car comes out of a side street suddenly, making it necessary to swerve quickly to one side or stop, and the result is a skid in either case.

Probably the greatest cause of skidding is turning a corner at too high a rate of speed. This often causes a skidding of the front wheels as well as the rear wheels—that is, the car is going so fast that the front wheels do not get traction enough to change the direction, and when they attempt to make the turn they skid and the car goes for the curb. Applying the brake will usually overcome this skid.

In a rear wheel skid the worst thing one can do is to apply the brake. It is best to let the car coast, turning the front wheels in the direction in which the rear end of the car is skidding. If it is trying to go to the left, turn the front wheels that way. If there is something in the way, so that it is necessary to stop, the brake may be applied a little as the wheels take hold, leaving the clutch engaged, which prevents locking the wheels, as the engine is pulling against the brake and there is not so much likelihood of locking the wheels. It keeps the wheels revolving slowly, so that you get a better traction for stopping.

It takes a greater pressure applied laterally to start the wheel sliding than to keep it skidding once it is started, and you can bring the car to a standstill much quicker if you can keep the wheels from sliding. A little practice will teach the driver just how much he can apply the brakes without causing the wheels to skid.

The man with a camera rarely has his picture because of the difficulty of being in front of the camera and behind it at the same time. A simple manner of accomplishing this seemingly impossible performance is described in a recent number of a photographic journal, which was worked out by a foreign genius. Secure a wooden clothespin and shape out one end so that it grasps the bulb of the shutter and the spring tends to press on the bulb. Then the other ends are brought together so as to release the bulb and are tied with string or thread. On this is put a piece of fuse of some length. Lighting the fuse, the person goes to the distant point before the camera, and when the string is burned the clothes pin presses the bulb and makes the exposure

English Undefiled.

We observe that in his Jutland battle story Rudyard Kipling uses the phrase "under the circumstances." It is no doubt supported by usage, but all the same we are rather surprised to see it employed by such a master of English style. The proper expression must surely be "in the circumstances," since it is difficult to see how you can be supposed to be "under" the things that stand around you. There is an old controversy on the subject, and we thought the matter had been settled long ago. However, "in the circumstances" we venture on this gentle protest in the interest of English pure and undefiled.—London Globe.

CODY WAS SCARED

One Occasion When Buffalo Bill Was Shy on Courage.

TYING A MARRIAGE KNOT.

As a New Justice of the Peace He Had to Perform the Ceremony, but He Didn't Like the Job—One of His Close Calls as a Pony Express Rider.

It is difficult for this generation of boys, even though they be born on the "Great American desert," to believe that Buffalo Bill was ever anything except the star of a tent show, but old timers know of his perilous life of earlier days as an Indian fighter, scout, overland freight guard and pony express rider.

When the Kansas Pacific railroad was building to the coast it employed Will Cody to supply its construction gangs with meat. One of the greatest shots of the plains, he won his name and his spurs killing buffalo for the builders of the iron trail.

During Indian campaigns Cody rose to be chief scout for the army and Indian adventures became a part of his daily routine. The fame of Buffalo Bill spread through the army. None doubted the courage and resource of the great scout and Indian hunter.

Yet one day this courage was sorely tried. There was one time when Buffalo Bill admitted he was scared.

General Emory, in command at Fort McPherson, induced the county authorities to make Buffalo Bill a justice of the peace.

"Why, general," protested the scout, "I don't know any more about law than a mule knows of singing."

But the appointment was duly and legally made, and the new justice had to serve.

His first task was to perform a wedding ceremony. A wedding was a great event at McPherson, and the whole fort resolved to attend.

In vain his wife and sisters tried to coach Buffalo Bill. Nobody could find a copy of the marriage service.

The great day came. The guests assembled. Cold sweat stood in beads on the brow of the Indian fighter. His hands trembled.

Yet at first the ceremony moved without reproach. The bride and groom were counseled in the conventional manner until the close of the ceremony, when Buffalo Bill startled the congregation by announcing:

"Whom God and Buffalo Bill hath joined together let no man put asunder!"

As a marrying justice he was voted a great success.

Before the days of the telegraph news traveled by the pony express, nine days from St. Joseph, the end of the railroad, to Sacramento, Cal. The distance over the short route was 1,966 miles.

Will Cody was twice in the employ of the pony express as one of the relay riders in the western wilderness. It was during his second engagement that he saved his life by his knack of shooting straight and thinking quickly.

Will was riding from Red Butte, on the North Platte, to Three Crossings, on the Sweetwater, a distance of seventy-six miles, when a station boss one day informed him:

"There's signs of Injins about, Billy. Better keep your eye peeled."

The young rider nodded comprehension as he swung into the saddle on a fresh pony and dashed out of the station with his mail sacks.

Plainsmen learned early to keep their eyes open. As Will Cody rode he scanned the country ahead of him with tireless gaze. Every rock and hummock had his attention.

It was a grim, wild country he rode through. Great cliffs overhung his narrow path and darkened the way. Forests of black pine stood thick on the precipitous slopes of the Rockies.

His keen eye caught sight of a slight movement behind a large bowlder that lay ahead of him. It needed no more than that to tell the pony express rider of danger. Riding at top speed toward the danger zone, he made his plan.

Cody was almost upon the rock before he swerved his horse sharply and dashed off to one side. Two rifle reports came simultaneously, and from behind the rock sprang two unmounted Indians.

At the same time a score of Indians on ponies burst from the timber on the opposite side of the valley and rode toward him.

Ahead lay a narrow pass leading to safety. The race began.

Only one rider threatened the express messenger. He wore the headdress of a chief, and his pony was fleetest.

Close together the horses sped toward the pass, and the Indian was gaining steadily.

Cody turned in his saddle.

The Indian chief had lifted an arrow to his bow and even then was sighting his target.

Like a flash Cody drew his revolver. Seemingly he fired without aim, so quick was the action. The Indian dropped from his saddle, and the pony express sped on safe. — Kansas City Star.

Theory and Practice.

Here is a good story from the collection of a German school inspector. The pupils were being examined on the subject of personal hygiene. A boy was asked, "What have you to do in order to keep your teeth sound and white?" "Clean them," was the prompt reply. "When ought you to clean them?" "Morning, noon and night." "What are they to be cleaned with?" "With a toothbrush." "Very good. Have you a toothbrush?" "No, sir." "Has your father a toothbrush?" "No, sir." "Has your mother a toothbrush?" "No, sir." "But how do you know about the use of toothbrushes then?" "We sell them, sir."

Not Risking Any Money.

"I wonder if I could interest you in a little scheme to make money," said the affable caller.

"Hum! Do you know what 'academic interest' means?"

"Why—er—yes, sir."

"Well, I'm prepared to take that sort of interest in any little scheme you may suggest."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

DENIES ALLIES PAY TEENIE

Greek Charge at Washington Says Story Is Teuton Invention.

Washington, Mar. 12.—In an official statement the Greek legation here denied "widely published stories that King Constantine of Greece receives part of his salary from France and England."

The Greek charge d'affaires, charging the report to Teutonic sources, declared that it grew out of the renunciation by France and England of payments due them on Greek debts, which payments were resigned in favor of the late King George of Greece as a personal perquisite.

Roumanian King Flees to Russia.

BERLIN — The King of Roumania has changed his residence from Jassy to Poteinkins palace, at Yekaterinoslav, Russia, according to a report from the Nishkoye Slovo, published by the press bureau. The government will reside partly at Cherson and partly at Yekaterinoslav.

The Life of Trade.

The proprietors of two rival livery stables, situated alongside each other in a busy street, have been having a lively advertising duel lately.

The other week one of them stuck up on his office window a long strip of paper bearing the words:

"Our horses need no whip to make them go."

This bit of sarcasm naturally caused some amusement at the expense of the rival proprietor, but in less than an hour he neatly turned the tables by pasting the following retort on his own window:

"True. The wind blows them along!"

Reindeer Clothes.

Garments made of reindeer skin are remarkable for their moisture resisting capability as well as for their warmth. The hair, unlike that of many animals, is not hollow throughout its length, but is divided into watertight cells filled with air, which appears to be under compression, so that when the garments are placed in water the hair swells without breaking, and the wearer is buoyed up and does not readily sink if he falls overboard. Among the Russians, Swedes and Norwegians reindeer clothes are very common.

GOLDEN WEDDING

The following was clipped from the Caney (Kansas) News. Mr. and Mrs. Estes were former residents of Raisin where both were born and spent their early life. Ev Estes and Julia O'Dell being familiar figures in every social circle. Their many friends will be interested to hear of their well doing.

Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Estes celebrated their golden wedding last Tuesday, March 6th at their home on North Wood street. All of their children and a number of other relatives and friends were present.

The dinner was such as only Mrs. Estes is capable of producing. The table was beautifully decorated with cut flowers. Mrs. Estes said they had bean soup at their first wedding feast, but that was away up in Michigan where they raise beans.

Mr. Estes is of a long lived family, his grandparents on both sides living up into the eighties. This was the 4th golden wedding anniversary in his family as his father and mother lived together 52 years, his brother C. H. Estes and his wife have been married 58 years and his sister Mrs. J. H. Horton and her husband had been married 56 years when he died.

Mr. and Mrs. Estes came to Kansas in 1884 and have resided in Montgomery county all this time. Since 1891 they have made their home in Caney.

The children present at this celebrated occasion were Wort E. Estes of Chanute, Mrs. Clara E. Walker of Kansas City, Bert E. Estes of Dewey and Ferd E. Estes of this city. There were also ten of Mr. and Mrs. Estes' grandchildren present. After dinner a family group picture was taken

"OUTLAWS OF ETIQUETTA"

Operetta Presented by the Students of the Tecumseh High School, Thursday Evening.

At Bradleys Opera House.

A crowded house greeted the operetta "The Outlaws of Etiquetta" presented by the students of Tecumseh high school at Bradleys Opera house Thursday evening. The operetta was preceeded by songs and fancy drills by the grade children which proved to be one of the most interesting parts of the evening.

The kindergarden children first appeared in a fancy Peek-a-boo drill. Their costumes were very pretty and they certainly covered themselves with glory. They were enthusiastically encored but could not be made to respond.

Next came the first and second grade pupils who appeared in the Virginia reel. The stately young dancers were dressed in Colonial costumes and conducted themselves in a manner that would have done justice to their forefathers. One stately dancer even lost his wig much to his discomfiture and the amusement of the audience.

The final act of the prelude was a Japanese drill and song by the girls of the 5th and 6th grades. The young ladies appeared in Japanese costumes carrying Japanese parasols and fans. The young ladies entered into the spirit of the drill and sung with a right good will.

The operetta of the "Outlaws of Etiquetta" was given in two parts, with the following caste.

Rudolph, "King of Pannonia"—Harold Lowry

Thairizire, "Chief of the Outlaws"—Fay VanValkenburg

Wotte, "His Lieutenant"—Lester Waring

Ouona, "The Lord High Keeper of the Book of Etiquette"—Ralph Cuthbert.

Goawai, "Prime Minister of Pannonia"—Arthur Brown

Gohou, "Kings Jester"—Perry Hayden"

Veronica, Princess and Ruler of Arcasia"—Edna Taylor

Mary, Her Foster Sister"—Lillian Kennedy

'Chorus of Outlaws and Village Girls'—High school students.

The king of Pannonia (Harold Lowry) goes out to court the fair princess and ruler of Arcasia (Miss Edna Taylor) whom he has met before, knowing her only as "the Mountain Maid." A treaty signed between the two countries has decreed that he should marry the princess, this part of the treaty being unknown to him

Before she consents to the marriage she determined that he forever abolish the custom which has been a long time established and known as "Court Etiquette."

Anono, the lord high keeper of the Book of Etiquette (Ralph Cuthbert) and Goawai, prime minister, (Arthur Brown) object most strenuously to any interference of the ancient custom.

The outlaws and the princess plot to overthrow this ancient custom and in the end are successful

The story ends by the entrance of the princess of Arcasia wearing a disguise, when the king discovers that the princess is none other than his mountain maid which brings joy and peace to his royal highness and his faithful subjects of Pannonia.

The parts were well taken. The solo parts by Miss Edna Taylor, Miss Lillian Kennedy, Harold Lowry, Lester Waring and Fay VanValkenburg were nicely rendered. They were assisted by a good chorus made up of high school pupils. Miss Camila Hayden presided at the piano. The operetta was staged under the direction of Miss Martha Caldwell who was assisted by the teachers.

MRS. VERNON CASTLE IN "PATRIA"

A Guarantee Attraction at the Opera House

The much heralded much talked of society serial, "Patria" with Mrs. Vernon Castle, the best dressed and best known woman in the world, as its leading star will commence at the Bradley Opera House next Thusrday, March 22nd, and will be shown each Thursday evening in addition to the regular show as an added attraction.

A five or six part feature will be shown each evening as usual with this big feature as an extra attraction. "Paria" alone is worth every cent that you will be asked to pay for the entire evening's performance and you have never seen a performance in Tecumseh anywhere near this big double program for twice or three times the admission charged.

Among the thrills in the first few episodes of "Patria" (and the entire serial is full of thrills) are a race between a train and an automobile with the latter dashing over a grade crossing only inches ahead of the engine (this is one of the best scenes of its kind ever filmed) Mrs. Castle as Patria diving from the height of an ocean liner's deck into the ocean and in fact, just one thrill after another.

The local management of the Bradley saw the first three episodes of "Patria" screened in Detroit a short time ago and booked this wonderful serial on the spot. Better that anything we have ever run and that's saying a whole lot.

Many of the patrons of the Bradley will remember the excellent dancing and acting of Mrs. Castle who was presented here a short time ago in the big society film "The Whirl of Life" that being the only picture that Mrs. Castle ever appeared in previous to "Patria."

A combination auction sale will be held at Macon Grange hall, March 21, beginning at 10 a. m. 20 horses, 40 head of cattle, and farming implements will be on sale. The Grange ladies will serve dinner at noon. Come early.

"THE ROSARY"

"The Rosary" was presented at the New Royal Thursday afternoon and evening and drew full houses. The story was finely told and held one's close attention.

From the moment that Young Kelly promises his mother that he will be a priest, the struggle between love and duty begins, but finally duty conquest and he enters the priesthood. He comes to America and becomes the beloved priest of his parish. Years pass and he receives word from his old love who has married and, being at the point of death, sends a message to him, giving into his care her young son.

The career of this boy is watched over lovingly by the priest and when treachery and wrong bring him to poverty and want, when everything seems lost, the loving kindness of his friends the dear old priest, brings peace and happiness to him and his once more.

Safety! Service! Strength!

Safety and strength are prime factors in that part of our statement just made to the banking department of the State of Michigan. which shows how conservatively and wisely our funds are invested. Service is a part of every day's business upon which we especially pride ourselves and which we believe, if our growth may be taken to mean anything, is appreciated.

A PRETTY WEDDING

MISS MARGARET MURPHY AND CLARE GILLESPIE

Married Last Evening at the Home of the Bride's Parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Murphy

It was a very pretty wedding at the farm home of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. T. Murphy last evening when their daughter Margaret Elizabeth became the bride of Clare Richard Gillespie, son of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Gillespie.

At 7 o'clock the company were hushed by the beautiful "O Promise Me" on the Victrola and immediately an aisle of ribbon was formed by the little nephew and niece of the groom. Down this aisle came the officiating clergyman, Rev. W. A. Rex. Behind him were the bride and groom unattended. The party took their places before an immense bank of flowering geraniums and ferns in the parlor and there plighted their troth. The bride was lovely in white and carried an arm boquet of white roses.

After the congratulatins, the company were served a bountiful wedding supper. The bride's table was beautified by a centerpiece of carnations and ferns and here sat fourteen of her closest relatives, both the old ones and those just acquired, also the minister and wife.

The remainder of the guests, some fifty in number, were served at small tables, each bearing a pot of hyacinths.

The newly-weds received many beautiful and valuable gifts, attesting the love of their friends.

They came into town and remained over night with her grandmother Mrs. Anna Lowry and today left on a further trip but they have not advised us of their destination.

Several from away were present for the ceremony: Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Lowry of Ann Arbor, Frank Gillespie and family of Monroe, Robt. Lowry of Chicago.

What to Do When Backache Comes on

"Foley Kidney Pills have done me more good than $150.00 worth of other medicine," writes Chas. N. Fox of Himrod, N. Y.

When backache comes on, and it seems as if you can't stand the pain and pressure in the small of your back and sides, do not feel that you must continue to suffer, but get a bottle of Foley Kidney Pills and begin taking them. They usually help from the very first doses.

It is worth a good deal to you to know that Foley Kidney Pills give you just what your system needs to repair the weak sick kidneys. It is their inability to do their work properly that causes your pain and misery. Foley Kidney Pills lend to middle-aged and elderly people the spryness and elasticity of youth. They take away the cause of backache, stiff and aching joints, rheumatic pains and annoying bladder and urinary troubles. Try them today. everywhere in Tecumseh. adv

Tecumseh People are Doing all They Can for Fellow Sufferers

Tecumseh testimony has been published to prove the merit of Doan's Kidney Pills to others in Tecumseh who suffer from bad backs and kidney ills. Lest any sufferer doubt this evidence of merit, we produce confirmed proof — statements from Tecumseh people who again endorse Doan's Kidney Pills—confirm their former testimony. Here's a Tecumseh case:

Geo. Chaplin, N. Pearl St., Tecumseh, gave the following statement on December 5, 1908. He said: "I have taken Doan's Kidney Pills and they proved to me that they are the good medicine that I have often heard others recommend. I had kidney trouble and got Doan's Kidney Pills at Wright & Son's Drug Store. They greatly benefited me."

Added Praise

On July 28, 1910, Mr. Chaplin said: "I still recommend Doan's Kidney Pills and my former endorsement still holds good."

Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Chaplin has twice publicly recommended. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y. adv

DETROIT FAGIN ROBS HOTELS AS IN NOVEL

New Oliver Twist Exhibits Rare Cleverness in Hauls.

DETROIT, Mar. 19.

For the past five days three of the leading downtown hotels of the city have had to deal with one of the cleverest boy thieves Detroit has ever known. Although hotel and police headquarters detectives have been on his trail, this modern Oliver Twist, the tool of Fagin, has made a clean get-away.

In one of the biggest hotels in the city this boy, now known as "Oliver Twist," has stolen more than $400 worth of clothing and jewelry within two days. On one occasion, when he was seen stealing by a maid, he made his escape by running through the employes' entrance and then to the first floor of the hotel. Later that day the guest in whose room the boy was found reported to the management that a belt with a gold buckle had been stolen from the room and that in its place the juvenile thief had left a cheap belt.

According to a hotel detective who has been working on the case, the boy is a tool for a band of thieves who have been robbing Detroit hotels for several weeks. This detective's idea is as follows:

"'The Fagin' in the case goes to the hotel desk and obtains a key to a room. He then meets the boy outside and gives him the key and instructions as to how to rob the room. I am convinced that this boy obeys his master implicitly, for he has been known to steal heavy bags from rooms. The kid is clever, too, for only in one instance was he seen by a maid."

CHILD IS BURNED TO DEATH

Western Michigan Youngster Dies as Brother Chases Cows.

WHITEHALL, Mar. 19.

The two year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Christian Biers, living just outside Montaque, was burned to death.

Mrs. Biers had gone to the village with a neighbor, leaving a small boy to care for the baby. The boy saw some cattle in the yard and went out to drive the stock away. He had hardly been gone five minutes when he returned and found the child with all her clothing burned off and dead on the floor. There was no fire in the kitchen stove and just how the accident occured is a mystery. A hole was burned in the floor but the dwelling did not burn. It is possible the baby found a match and lighted it.

ROBBER KILLED BY SHERIFF

Officer Believes Victim One of Gang Looting Cottages.

GRAND HAVEN, Mar. 19.

Sheriff Dornbos at Grand Haven shot and killed an unidentified man who he alleges was one of a band of robbers who for the last several months have been robbing cottages at Highland Park.

The sheriff declares that the man pulled a revolver on him near the heart of the city, after he had trailed the man from the park, and was about to shoot when the sheriff killed him in self-defense. In the man's pocket was a telegram from Lansing addressed to "Bert Lewis, Jackson, Mich.," and was signed, "Gertrude Phillips, Lansing, Mich."

Fourteen men from the Vigilancia are missing, as are some of the men from the City of Memphis.

The crew of the Illinois was landed safely.

The City of Memphis, in ballast from Cardiff for New York, was sunk by gunfire. The second officer and fifteen men of the crew have been landed. A patrol boat has gone in search of the other members of the crew.

Illinois in Ballast.

The Illinois, from London for Port Arthur, Tex., in ballast, was sunk at 8 o'clock in the morning.

The Vigilancia was torpedoed without warning. The submarine did not appear. The captain, first and second mates; first, second and third engineers and twenty-three men of the crew have been landed at the Scilly Islands. The fourth engineer and thirteen men are missing.

Carried Crew of Fifty.

The City of Memphis carried a crew of about fifty officers and men, virtually all American-born citizens or Americans by naturalization.

The captain, three mates and chief engineer and three assistants and the steward were Americans by birth. Most of the crew were born in Norway and the fireman in Portugal or Spain, but had taken out final citizenship papers in the United States.

The cook was an American negro. Captain Borum of the City of Memphis was a Virginia.

The vessel was owned by the Ocean Steamship company of Savannah. It left here on Jan. 23 for Havre, France, with cotton. It arrived there on Feb. 6 and word was received here by owners of the departure for Cardiff to take on bunker coal for her voyage toward New York.

The City of Memphis was 5,252 tons gross. It was 377 feet long, 49 feet of beam and was built in Chester, Pa., in 1902.

Illinois a Tanker.

New York, Mar. 10.—The Illinois was a tank steamship owned by the Texas company of New York. It sailed from Port Arthur Feb. 17 for London. Marine records do not chronicle the arrival or departure from London.

The Illinois was of 5,225 tons gross. It was 390 feet long, 52 feet of beam and was built in Newport News, Va., in 1913. Its master was Captain Iversen.

The steamship Vigilancia, owned by Walker, Armstrong & Co. of Savannah, sailed from New York for the Azores and Havre on Feb. 28, according to latest marine records. It was 4,115 tons gross, a freighter, 320 feet long and 45 feet of beam. It was built in Chester, Pa., in 1890.

Situation Gravest Since War Began.

Washington, Mar. 19.—The destruction of three great American ships in the German submarine zone brought the United States one step nearer an actual physical clash with Germany. With but meager reports of the latest toll of the campaign of ruthlessness before them, President Wilson and his advisers were in doubt as to the fate of scores of American citizens who were among the crews of the three American ships lost. The day's news from the war zone was clearly the gravest that has come to Washington since the submarine campaign was instituted, and it threatened to hasten the prosecution of President Wilson's plans for combating the submarine menace.

The President said nothing. Those who saw him say his face turned a shade graver and a shade grayer. He is still far from well. Other officials of the White House immediately let it be known that no comment would be forthcoming at this time. They said the dispatches were "too incomplete" to admit of discussion.

Secretary of State Lansing remained at his home. He made the following statement:

"I do not regard the facts which have come in as sufficient on which to form an opinion as to whether they produce any change in the situation."

NORRIS SEEKS VINDICATION

Nebraska Senator Proposes to Submit Recall to State's Voters.

Washington, Mar. 19.—Senator George W. Norris, progressive Republican of Nebraska and one of the "little group of wilful men" who halted the enactment of the armed ship bill in the expiring hours of the last congress, will seek vindication of his course at the polls.

He has tendered Governor Keith Neville, of Nebraska, the suggestion that the legislature of Nebraska be asked to call a special election at which the question of his recall may be submitted to the voters of the state.

Punished For Looking Healthy.

In the days of the Puritans the stocks were not unknown as a penalty for looking too healthy. Ruddiness of complexion was a crime when a gaunt visage was regarded as an outward sign of sanctity. Dr. Echard, writing in the early eighteenth century, remarks: "Then it was they would scarcely let a round faced man go to heaven. If he had but a little blood in his cheeks his condition was accounted dangerous, and I will assure you a very honest man of sanguine complexion if he chanced to come nigh an official zealot's house might be set in the stocks only for looking fresh on a frosty morning."—London Chronicle.

PERONNE FALLS, TAKE 60 TOWNS

Kaiser Is Dealt Hardest Blow of War in West.

ROUTED ON 60-MILE FRONT

Noyon and Other Strategic Points Yielded by Germans, Berlin Admits. Retirement Continues as French and British Push on at Places to Ten-Mile Depth.

London, Mar. 19.—British troops continuing their rapid advances on the heels of the retiring Germans, have occupied the important towns of Nesle, Chaulnes and Peronne.

Along a front of about forty-five miles they have entered the German positions to a depth of ten miles in places. In addition the British have taken more than sixty villages. This is an official report.

Peronne Important Point.

Peronne was one of the strongholds of the Germans on the Franco-Belgian front. It is a town of about 4,000, on the Somme, and is of strategical importance on account of its railway and high road connections. It was invested on three sides and the retirement of the Germans to the north and south made the abandonment of this town inevitable. From Arras to the Oise, where Berlin reports the withdrawal is being made, is about fifty miles. The capture of Bapaume and Roye was announced Saturday. Noyon is a town of about 6,000, sixty-seven miles northeast of Paris.

Berlin Announced Retreat.

Berlin, Mar. 19.—Systematic retirement of the German troops between Arras and the Oise on the French front is announced by the war office. Peronne, Noyon, Bapaume, Roye and several other towns have been abandoned by the Germans.

The official report says twenty-two allied aeroplanes were shot down Saturday by the Germans.

Field Marshal von Hindenburg has gone to great headquarters to make a report on the situation to Emperor William.

French Continue Drive.

Paris, Mar. 19.—The withdrawal of the Germans is still proceeding rapidly over a wide section of the French front. The day's official announcement says the French defeated the German rear guards and continued to advance.

They have occupied all the ground between the old line and the Roye-Noyon road, from Damery as far as the Lagny Height, and are continuing pursuit of the Germans north of the Noyon road.

Captain Guynemer, the famous French aviator, brought down his thirty-fifth German airplane Saturday.

Damery is three miles northwest of Roye and twelve miles northwest of Lagny, making the advance along a twelve mile front.

British Take Bapaume.

London, Mar. 19.—The British troops made another extensive advance Saturday, capturing the stronghold of Bapaume and entering German positions on a front of about sixteen miles, according to the official report from British headquarters in France.

CHINA PREPARING FOR WAR

Wu Ting Fang Meets With Entente Envoys and Asks Concessions.

Peking, Mar. 19.—China is preparing to enter the war on the side of the entente allies. This action was made plain when Foreign Minister Wu Ting Fang called a meeting of the ministers of the entente nations and later a meeting of the ministers of neutral countries.

He made the request at both meetings that the payment of indemnity for the boxer uprising be suspended. He also asked permission to station troops at Tien-Tsin, along the Tien-Tsin-Peking railroad and in the legation quarter as a protection against Germans. Minister Wu also urged that China be permitted to increase import duties.

FOUR DIE WHEN HOME BURNS

Scottish Old People's Institution Near Chicago Destroyed—30 Periled.

Chicago, Mar. 19.—Four inmates of the Scottish Old People's home were burned to death in a fire which destroyed the building. More than thirty others had narrow escapes and several were injured. The dead are: Mrs. James Gronnock, William McPherson, Thomas Loutitt and William Robertson.

The home is near Riverside but outside the city limits. The nearest hydrant is 2,000 feet from the building and the hose belonging to the management of the institution was only 1,000 feet long.

W. E. Chandler Critically Ill.

Washington, Mar. 19.—William E. Chandler, former United States senator from New Hampshire and former secretary of the navy, is critically ill at his home here. He caught cold inauguration day and shortly after was placed under the care of a physician and a trained nurse. Because of his advanced age his recovery is doubtful. Mr. Chandler is eighty years old.

Where the Laborer Is King.

The day laborer, as opposed to the employer and to other workers, is king in Australia. The unions, through the labor party, practically control the executive, legislative and judicial machinery of the cities, the states and the commonwealth. Forty-eight hours is the recognized maximum for a week's work, but in certain occupations forty-four, forty-two, forty, and even thirty-six hours are considered full time. Some of the larger building trades have a forty-four hour week, and it is probable that this figure will become the recognized standard for all labor. Of the "four sacred eights" in the original slogan—"eight hours' work, eight hours' play, eight hours' rest and eight bob a day"—only the portion relating to rest has been retained.

NEW TREATY IS BEING DRAWN FOR COLOMBIA

The payment of $25,000,000 by the United States to Colombia; cession by Colombia to the United States of the Atrato River Canal route and of the important strategic islands of Old Providence and St. Andrews; recognition of Colombia of the Republic of Panama; obligation by Colombia not to permit her harbors or shores to be employed for any hostile operations against the United States; conditional use by Colombia of the Panama Canal without the payment of tolls.

THE CLERK PLANS A CAREER

His Wife Has Just Inherited $135,000 from Aunt.

Quincy, Ill., Mar. 19.—Word came to Mrs. J. F. Hayes that she had been awarded $135,000 of the $700,000 left unwilled in the estate of an aunt in New York, whom she had not seen in years. Her husband, a hotel clerk here, plans to engage in business in Michigan.

The estate was accumulated by George Fithian, an Irish emigrant, who with Simon Kenton founded Urbana, Ohio, and whose son settled in Fithian, Ill., near Danville.

Milwaukee, Wis., Mar. 19.—A man giving his name as Peter Luck, thought to be the man wanted for participation in the Oconomowoc Lake region robberies of Chicagoans' summer homes was found on a steamer in the Gulf of Mexico with a bullet in his thigh.

A wireless notified the local police and he will be dropped at Mobile.

IRONIC JUSTICE TO PASTOR

Bouck White, Who Burned Flag, Is Sentenced to Raise It.

New York, Mar. 9.—By order of the commissioners of corrections, Bouck White, pastor of the Church of Social Revolution, who is serving a thirty day sentence in the Tombs for burning an American flag at a "melting pot" ceremony, will raise the flag on the flagstaff in the Tombs yard each morning and haul it down at night.

Cannon's Family Leases Home.

Danville, Ill., Mar. 19.—Uncle Joe Cannon, former speaker of the house of representatives, may become a resident of Indiana again, at least during the summer of each year. Ernest X. LeSuere, president of the Danville National bank and son-inlaw of Mr. Cannon, leased the old Rodgers homestead in Warren county, Indiana, with the option of purchasing it within a year if he desires. The Rodgers home, a colonial mansion, was erected in 1821 by Elisha Rodgers at a cost of $80,000. The home is three miles northwest of Covington, Ind., and thirteen miles east of here.

Boston Bomb Mystery Deepens.

Boston, Mar. 19.—The mystery of the bomb explosion at the courthouse is as deep as ever. One of the two killed is known to have been the janitor of the building, but the other body has not been identified.

SHELL SHOCK IN BATTLE.

A Curious Fact That Only Unwounded Men Suffer From It.

By the methods of modern war no inconsiderable proportion of battlefield casualties are due to shell shock—a new terror of battle and one that was unknown before the advent of later day high explosives.

It is a curious fact that only unwounded men suffer from shell shock. Eminent surgeons say that a wound neutralizes the psychic sense—in plain English that nerves do not affect a wounded man in the same way as an unwounded one.

For shell shock is nothing more or less than a nervous breakdown—a terribly intensive breakdown that physicians find most difficult to cure. It is entirely a mental cause, and though it is called shell shock it has very little to do with shells.

There are men, brave men, too, who find the strain of war too great for their mental stamina. They see terrible sights and hear terrible things, and these react upon them temperamentally and physically. Gradually, perhaps unconsciously, their ability to resist is overborne. Their mental power is exhausted. They become afraid—dreadfully, terribly afraid—and the end is only a matter of time.

A certain cure has yet to be found, though severe electrical treatment has had some effect.—London Answers.

Hens and Water.

From the hen's viewpoint, water is worth just as much as feed, for she can't make an egg with either one alone. Therefore the man who provides high priced feed, but neglects the water supply, is making a big mistake and will have to be content with a limited egg yield.

That's Different.

"What's the matter with me, doctor?"
"You have a stitch in the back."
"Dear me, that is prosaic. I can't tell my stylish friends. They would laugh at me."
"This is one of the fashionable new stitches."—Pittsburgh Post.

ARISTIDE BRIAND

French Premier Whose Cabinet Has Fallen.

RIBOT MAY FORM CABINET

Minister of Finance Has Request Under Consideration.

Paris, Mar. 19.—President Poincare conferred with the president of the senate, Antonin Dubost, and the president of the chamber of deputies, Paul Deschanel, in regard to the situation created by the resignation of the Briand cabinet. The president then received M. Briand for further consultation.

Deschanel declined to quit his post to form a new cabinet and M. Poincare then requested M. Ribot, minister of finance, member of the war council in the Briand cabinet, to form a ministry. M. Ribot reserved his decision until he could consult the various members of parliament.

HIS LOVE FOR HIS DEAD.

He Made It a Power to Gladden Some of the Needy Living.

A little old man came into the office of the Chicago Charities the other day and laid down $150, "to help out some needy families." Then he told them a story:

"Years ago, when all of my folks were living, I couldn't afford to give presents. Things are different now, but most of my folks have gone. I went shopping, just as if my folks were alive. I picked out a shawl for an aunt of mine. She's dead and so I didn't buy it, but I put down the amount of money I would have spent. Then I went and got some things for my dead brother and for my father and mother and for a few old friends of mine. I didn't really get them, you know, but I priced the things I thought they would like. When I added up all the money I would have spent it came to almost $150, so I added a little to it, and here it is."

Has any one heard of a finer, more beautiful way of showing a man's love for his dead? The things he had wanted to do it was too late to do now. He might, it is true, have spent money on stone to make more artificial and melancholy the quiet hillside where "his folks" rest. He found a better way to spend his affection, to remember in fancy those he could no longer reach and then to see that his loving memory of them went to make others happier. He made his love for his dead a power to gladden the living. He laid tribute on grief and made it a blessing. It is not a sad story. We need not pity him. But we cannot help loving him.—Milwaukee Journal.

High Brow Stuff.

"What are you giving your cows now in the way of galactagogues?" asked the professor of the milkman.

"Oh," said the milkman, who had just been graduated from the state agricultural college and was not to be stumped, "their sustenance is wholly of vegetable origin, rich in chlorophyll and opulent in butyraceous qualities."

"A pint, if you please," said the professor.

"Git up," said the milkman.—Country Gentleman.

RUSSIANS TAKE VAN, BRITISH ROUT TURKS

Important Victories for Allies in Asia Minor.

London, Mar. 19.—The capture by the Russians of the City of Van, in Turkish Armenia, is reported in a Reuter dispatch from Petrograd.

Petrograd, Mar. 19.—The Russian advance on the Caucasian front is being continued over a large section. The war office announces the capture of Baneh, which is in Persia, about ten miles from the Turkish border.

The Russians are also continuing pursuit of the Turks in Persia. The war office announced that a Turkish column had been cut off by Russian cavalry and had fled into the mountains.

London, Mar. 19.—The British army in Mesopotamia has put the Turks to rout, it is announced officially. On Friday afternoon the Turks were in full flight toward Samara, seventy-five miles northwest of Bagdad.

MEDIATORS MEET SUNDAY

8-Hour Day Demand May Be Met By Mutual Concessions.

New York, Mar. 19.—Conferences on the railroad strike situation were resumed here Sunday in the hope of reaching some agreement looking toward a settlement of the eight-hour controversy in the event that the Adamson act is not upheld by the United States supreme court or in the event that no decision is handed down at once.

Both sides have agreed, it is understood, that if the Adamson act is declared unconstitutional the law will be applied on a basis of concessions by each, providing in effect an eight-hour day and pro rata for overtime in freight and yard service.

French Smash German Front.

Paris, Mar. 19.—French advance guards have entered the important town of Roye and the French have occupied the entire front between Andechy and the Oise, on a thirteen mile front, comprising powerfully fortified lines, which the Germans have held for more than two years.

Cologne Blast Kills Hundreds.

Copenhagen, Mar. 19.—A large munitions plant at Cologne blew up on Tuesday, according to information received from German sources by a newspaper at Kolding, near the frontier. Several hundred workmen are reported to have perished.

Canned Food Periled.

Washingotn, Mar. 19.—Representatives of the National Canners' association told Secretary Redfield that a serious shortage of cans threatened to reduce production of canned food this year. Manufacturers are unable to obtain tin plate.

Paris, Mar. 19.—The French cabinet, headed by Premier Briand, has resigned.

Parentheses and Brackets.

Know all writers, compositors and proofreaders by these presents: Marks of parentheses (which are frequently required) are not to be confounded with brackets ["Hear, hear!"], which serve a different purpose. The use of one for the other (vide almost any newspaper page) is extremely sloppy (if you know what we mean) and exhibits lack of familiarity with or indifference to the technique of writing. Milk a Pain Killer.

"Everybody should know that milk is an excellent pain killer," says Farm and Fireside, "first, because it gives almost immediate relief and, second, because milk or cream is nearly always available. If a person should get tar in the eyes, put in a few drops of milk or cream. It will also afford great relief if cement or a gnat should get in the eyes."

Both Happy.

"How do you like your room at the hotel?"

"Very much," answered the poetic young man. "From my window I have a beautiful view of the hills. I wish father could share it."

"Father is happy. From his window he has a beautiful view of the Sixteenth National bank."—Kansas City Journal.

Uncle Sam is getting nearer and nearer the brink of war. Will we be called upon to enter the great European War?

It is stated that a state of war [illegible] exists and the President may call an April 16. Merchant boats are being armed and the Navy department is [illegible] naval construction policy. Contracts are [illegible] let for [illegible] within a period of fifty days. The two junior classes at Annapolis are to be graduated early to supply officers for our rapidly increasing navy and the evident intention of the President is to [illegible] and to clear the [illegible] the shipping [illegible]

[illegible] to withstand an [illegible] against Germany. [illegible] end of the European war [illegible] In the east [illegible] the British have won big [illegible] from the Turks and the Allies are gradually pushing the [illegible] out of France in the west. [illegible] show that 300 villages have been occupied by the French. [illegible] of these towns have been destroyed by the Germans in retiring. Cavalry, practically for the first time has played an important part in this [illegible].

The revolution in Russia, we believe, has had its effect upon the German people as it is sowing the seeds of unrest among the people which may play an important part in the final windup. The submarine campaign which Germany launched is not proving to be so disastrous to shipping as they had hoped. Germany and her allies are surely losing ground and must by this time see the "handwriting on the wall."

With the sea lanes cleared and [illegible] necessities to Europe, with our great country's vast resources opened up for use by the Allies, will it be possible for Germany and her Allies to long continue the war? Her sun is fast setting.

Our Navy department is keyed up to fever heat in rushing plans for making it more effective, but our preparations as far as our army is concerned seem to be lagging. Would it not seem wiser to get busy and create an army, if not for active service, for protection? It is not possible to create an army within 60 days, it takes months to make real soldiers.

In the settlement of the great railroad strike, the labor unions are claiming a great victory. They call it a "dawn of a new day for U S workers." An 8-hour day and more pay to railroad employees who are now considered the best paid class of American laborers. The railroads will pay the increase, of course but who will really foot the bill? Why the people of course. The people are always the ones who foot the bills. Just a little increase in the cost of living which is now dragging like a loadstone around the neck of the American people. We like to pay the bill, we American people.

MRS. VERNON CASTLE AS "PATRIA" AT BRADLEY OPERA HOUSE THURSDAY, MARCH 22

This week Thursday March 22, marks the opening of the screen sensation of 1917 at the Bradley Opera House, the serial supreme. "Patria" featuring the best known and best dressed woman in the world Mrs. Vernon Castle.

The entire serial deals with the preparedness question which just at the present is the talk everywhere which makes "Patria" the most timely picture possible to present. This great masterpiece must not be confused with the average cheap priced serial but stands in a class by itself, costing over half a million of dollars to produce. It is a big society picture many of the big scenes being taken at Newport, the summer home of the world's millionaires. Mrs. Castle's handsome gowns are the talk of the ladies everywhere and the men, too, for that matter.

As for thrills "Patria" is full of them. Sensation after sensation a thrilling story of adventures on land and sea. And Mrs Castle's dancing, that must be seen to be appreciated. "Patria" will be presented in addition to a magnificent hand colored five reel feature "The Matrimonial Martyr" with the well known actress Miss Ruth Roland in the leading role.

"Patria" is the only serial ever presented in the greatest vaudeville house in the country "Keith's Palace" in New York. The Keith people are showmen, they know how to please their patrons, thats why they booked "Patria" and thats why we booked it. This big double show of 8 of the greatest feature films is positively the biggest feature program ever offered in Tecumseh and is only made possible at our regular prices on account of our mammoth seating capacity of over 800 people. The regular prices of 10c for adults and 5 cents for children will prevail with a free school childrens matinee on the opening day, when all school children, with the exception of high school students, will be admitted free to the matinee right after school.

We absolutely guarantee that you can't see a program to equal this in the city of Detroit for less than 25 cents, why right over at Adrian they are paying 15 cents for the same thing and commenting on such a wonderful show for such a small admission and you get it here for a dime. Over two hours of the best in pictures for 10 cents. You can't beat it anywhere.

"THE MYSTERY OF THE RAISIN"

By William B. Hartzog

CHAPTER III

Willard Briggs at Monroe.

In the autumn of 1823 a boat landed at Monroe, Michigan. Among the passengers was a young man. He made his way to the tavern and signed his name as Willard Briggs. That evening the men of the village gathered in the large room which served as a bar room and office. They smoked, drank whiskey and discussed town topics. Young Briggs appeared timid and unaccustomed to such scenes.

"Young feller, you are not used to this wild country, be you?" inquired Champau, the tavern keeper.

"No, sir, I never was this far west," replied the young man.

"Say, young feller, take a drink and cheer up," said a rough looking man.

"Not tonight," said the youth.

"Now, maybe you will, by G--," said the rough looking man, the worse for his drinking.

Staggering across the room he struck at Briggs, but Willard dodged the blow.

"Pick somebody nearer your size if you want a row," shouted a man dressed in buckskin.

Paying no attention to this remark, he lounged at the young man and again he dodged the blow aimed at his head. The man dressed in buckskin seized the drunken man, jerked him backwards toward the open door and sent him whirling into the darkness. Briggs looked at his defender. He was a veritable giant, tall, straight and muscular having a luxuriant growth of black hair. It was Buckskin Joe.

"I thank you," said Briggs. "I don't want to get into trouble here the first night I am in Michigan."

"Of course, you don't. You're a pretty civil young feller, if I read human nature right. When a young man comes here and tries to be decent he can't for some of these d--- roudies. I won't allow anybody to hurt you. You just stick to me and I will see you through."

Willard realized at once that he had a friend in Joe and stayed close to him during the evening.

After the excitement died down and the men began to converse with each other, Willard drew his stool close to Joe and said, "Is there any chance to get work around here?"

"Have you got any education, so you can figure and write letters?"

"Yes, sir, I am pretty good in reading, writing and arithmetic."

"Well, I've got a good tradin' business and I need someone like you, I can take you to-morrow. I have tradin' posts all along the Raisin for sixty miles. I trade with the Ottawa and Pottawatamie Indians. They have villages along the river. Its a wild country west of here. There are bears and wolves and all kind of wild animals. I will be arount for you in the morin'. Let me see, what's your name?"

"Willard Briggs."

"My name is Joe Grove. They call me 'Buckskin Joe' around here."

"Mr. Grove, could I stay with you to-night? You have been kind to me and are the only friend I have here."

"Certainly, come right along, got any baggage?"

"Nothing but that traveling bag?"

"Bring it along and we will go over to my place. Tain't much of a house but we'll rig up a place to sleep."

They went out into the darkness. Willard held on to Joe's arm as they made their way to a dimly lighted cabin.

"Laura, this is Willard Briggs, he is going to work for me. I just run on to him over at the tavern. Can we rig up a place for him to sleep?"

"Yes, there is always room for one more," she said goodnaturedly.

"You haven't been in these parts long I suppose?"

"No, ma'm. I just landed here this afternoon. I have been on the boat for five days. I am pretty tired."

"I think I can sleep anywhere to-night," said Willard.

Lighting a candle Mrs. Grove went up the rude stairway and prepared a bed on the floor of the loft.

"I left the candle burning up there I hope you will have a good night's rest," she said on her return.

Willard was soon sleeping soundly.

The next morning he was awakened by the sound of a man cutting wood. He dressed and glancing out of the window, saw Joe splitting kindling.

"Let me do that Mr. Grove," said Willard as he approached the wood pile.

"Alright I will build the fire."

"That feller takes right a hold as if he wasn't afraid to work, Laura," said Joe.

"He seems like an industrious boy, I wonder where he is from?"

"I don't know. I didn't ask him. He has good manners. He said 'No ma'm last night."

After breakfast they went to a large shed erected on the bank of the river. It was piled full of hides. They spent the day loading them on the boat that was anchored by a rude dock. As they worked Joe explained the nature and value of the several kinds of skins. Willard kept a list of the shipment and during the evening transcribed the list to be sent to the dealer in Buffalo.

In a few days he had learned the business so he could keep the accounts.

"To-morrow we will take our boat and go up the river and visit some of the Indian villages."

"I am anxious to go. It will be a new experience for me," said Willard.

TECUMSEH GRANGE

CELEBRATED ITS ROUND-UP

With a Banquet at Grange Hall Saturday, March 17th

Grange Hall presented a very attractive appearance Saturday when the members met in response to the final call of the season. About 150 Grangers and friends were present.

The banquet being in the nature of a St. Patrick's Day banquet, decorations were largely green though U S flags were displayed quite generously about the room. On the speaker's table was an Irish hat in green upon which rested the faithful clay pipe of the Irishman conspicuous as the centerpiece, while on another tables was a pot of Irish primrose in full bloom which was raised in Ireland and brought to America. This was formerly the property of Mrs Eugene Harris. The tables were further decorated with smilax, also pots of hyacinths and shamrock, American and Irish flags. The ladies who waited on the tables wore aprons and caps of green.

A sumptuous banquet was prepared and served by the ladies of the Grange to which all did ample justice. The guests marched in to music by the Ridgeway M. E church orchestra who also played several selections during the banquet.

At the close of the banquet John T. Boyce, master of the Grange, made a few remarks and introduced the toastmaster Rev. W. B. Hartzog. Mr Boyce stated that the invitation was a call to the faithful sons and daughters of old Ireland to attend an Irish banquet and those present, in most cases all Irish, but the trouble was the Irish had been extracted.

Rev Hartzog proved himself equal to the task of toast master and tried hard to manufacture a little Irish wit and succeeded quite well for his stories and jokes were much appreciated.

The first number on the program was a selection by the Ridgeway M E. church orchestra which was followed by a piano duet by Marjorie Boyce and Lilas Howard.

Rev. Geo W. Jennings responded in his usual happy mood to the toast, "Ireland, Irish People and St. Patrick."

The speaker of the day was Dr. F. A Perry of the Plymouth M P church of Adrian, who responded to the toast, "Grange Ideas." Dr. Perry made a strong speech and stated that he was always delighted to attend a meeting of Grangers, as he was reared on a farm and his parents had been Grangers.

Dr. Parry said that the American people would have to look to the Granger, the farmer, to save them from some of the national perils which are confronting our nation today. The American people are drifting into ways of idleness, trying to seek easy jobs, large pay and cultivating lives of idleness and ease. Much of the discontent in the labor situation is due to the fact that our labor unions are fostering the idea of shorter hours, more pay and easy jobs. The farmer will have to teach the nation the gospel of hard work, the satisfaction of having accomplished something through the energy of the mind and body. These are the days of the near and veneer. Furniture is made these days largely of basswood and other cheap woods covered with a thin strip of mahogany, walnut, quarter-sawed oak, etc., instead of the real wood as was used in the days of long ago. He likened the American people of today to thin veneer and said that what they needed to make them better American citizens was to throw off this veneer and get back to the solid life such as the farmer leads, throw off the thin sham of so-called refinement and social nothingness and get back to honest, free and open, substantial life.

He touched on the subject dear to his heart and which he is giving much of his time fostering and encouraging, that of universal military training of our boys. Besides furnishing us with military protecton, this would do much to disciplne and train our boys for life and work. The rich man's son who has been protected and brought up in a life of ease would march shoulder to shoulder with the boys who have been brought up on the farm who are used to hard work and the rugged life, and at the end of their military training with its rugged life they would be better fitted for hard work and would become better citizens.

Rev. W. A. Rex, beautified by a large green necktie, was modestly called upon by the toastmaster to speak a piece. He responded by giving an Irish recitation which is going some for a dyed-in-the-wool German.

Norma Moody next gave a piano solo and the program closed with music by the orchestra.

WIT AND WISDOM

The Wit and Wisdom Club were entertained Monday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. B. Hurry, Miss Alice Wimple assisting in the entertaining. Mrs. Hurry was leader and announced the following program:

Piano solo—Mrs. F. S. Turner

Paper, "Religious Customs and Practices of South America"—Mrs. J. O. Eaton.

Vocal solo—Mrs. A. J. Bigelow

Paper, "History and Progress of Education in South America"—Prepared by Mrs. F. D. Rector and read by Miss Alice Wimple

Trombone solo—Wilfred Waldron, accompanied by Mrs. Waldron on the piano

Roll Call: Current Events proved quite interesting.

At the close of the program refreshments were served by the hostesses.

BRILLIANT ARRAY OF STARS FOR THE ANN ARBOR MAY FESTIVAL

The program for the Ann Arbor May Festival, long known as "Michigan's greatest musical event," which will be held in Hill Auditorium May 2, 3, 4 and 5, has just been announced by Director Albert A. Stanley and Secretary Charles A. Sink.

As usual six programs will be given, four evening concerts and two matinees. The Chicago Symphony Orchestra consisting of seventy men under the baton of Frederick Stock will take part in all concerts except the Saturday Matinee which will be given over to a recital on the famous Columbia Exposition Organ which was completely rebuilt a few years ago when it was transferred from University Hall where it was installed at the close of the World's Fair in 1893, to Hill Auditorium.

A list of soloists such as has never before been brought together in Ann Arbor, or at any other Festival for that matter, has been engaged, including:

Amelita Galli-Curci, the distinguished Spanish-Italian Soprano whose recent operatic successes have been the most sensational which have taken place in the last thirty years according to competent critics.

Maud Fay, soprano, whose success in the Munich Royal Opera as well as at the Metropolitan has been so profound.

Louise Homer, famous contralto known the world over for both her operatic and concert triumphs, as well as for her womanliness.

Margarete Matzenauer, contralto of the Metropolitan Opera House, whose career has been most brilliant in America as well as in the leading operatic houses in Europe.

Christine Miller, contralto, who will make her Ann Arbor debut at this time. She is one of the most popular American oratrio singers

Mrgan Kingston, tenor, distinguished concert and operatic singer whose success at the last Festival was such as to demand a re-engagement.

Giovanni Martinelli, tenor, of the Metropolitan Opera House, whose brilliant career is familiar to all. Two years agohe made a pronounced success when on short notice he was selected to fill the place on the program made vacant by John McCormack's inability to be present.

Giuseppe De Luca, baritone, one of the most popular Metropolitan Opera House singers whose appearance is always the signal for a capacity house. He is of the Amato type.

William Wade Hinshaw, baritone, late of the Metropolitan Opera House, is a singer of pronounced success. He will be remembered by Festival patrons as an attractive artist at the Festival several years ago.

Gustolf Holmquist, bass, whose splendid work at the last Festival made him a host of freinds.

Ethel Leginska, pianist, "the Paderewski of women," whose brilliant career in the instrumental field is comparable to that of Galli-Curci in the field of song.

Richard Keys Biggs, well known American Organist, who received his preliminary training at the University School of Music, and who during the last decade has held many of the leading organ positions in New York City and other Eastern centers. He has also made a brilliant record as concert organist, his work at the San Francisco and San Diego Expositions in 1915 attracting much attention.

The University Choral Union will render "The Dream of Gerontius" (Elgar) at the Thursday evening concert with Miss Miller and Messrs. Kingston and Holmquist in the cast and the "Aila" (Verdi) at the Saturday evening concert with Miss Fay, Mme Matzenauer, Messrs Martinelli, De Luca, Hinshaw and Holmquist as soloists; while the Children's Chorus will sing Fletcher's "The Walrus and the Carpenter" at the Friday Matinee in the same program with Miss Leginska. Mme. Homer will be the star at the opening concert Wedesday evening, and Mme Galli-Curci at the Friday evening concert.

Information regarding the program in detail, or regarding tickets, may be secured from the Secretary Charles A. Sink, Ann Arbor.

IMPROVEMENTS AT THE BRADLEY

Ed Mark was in Detroit yesterday where he purchased the very latest Velvet Gold Fibre Screen, the latest thing in moving picture screens and exactly like the one installed in the new Medison theatre which has just opened there. The screen is guaranteed to give the best picture possible to present, giving a clearness of detail possible with no other screen and eliminating all eye strain.

The new screen will be installed the early part of next week. This with the new Powers machine installed a few days ago should give the patrons of the Bradley as clear and fine a picture as any possible to see in Detroit's best theatres. Ed says: "Paramount Pictures Properly Presented for the Patrons of the Bradley."

MONDAY CLUB

At the regular meeting of the Monday Club held at the usual time and place the following program was given.

The first paper of the afternoon was given by Mrs Robt McCoy, her subject being "Indian Schools and Reservations." Mrs. Harry Waldron followed with a paper on "Indian Industries, baskets blankets, and beads."

The study for the ensuing year will be, "The Jew, departmental work and miscellany.

The Tecumseh high school boys put on a dancing party at Witherells hall Friday night, which proved a very successful affair. There were twentyone couple present. Music was furnished by Will Coller and wife, and Archie Boyd. Refreshments were served during the evening. The party was a very pleasant one, and much enjoyed by those in attendance.

AT THE M. E. CHURCH SUNDAY

Two large congregations were present at the M. E. church Sunday. In the morning Mrs. A. J. Bigelow had charge of the services, it being the annual Thank Offering meeting of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society. She gave a fine address on "Missions" and was followed by Mrs. H. R. Conklin who illustrated with a map talk.

Mrs. Alva Waring led the responsive reading. The Thank Offering was collected by some of the Standard Bearer girls. It amounted to $20.00 and will be sent to Chunking, China. The choir had special music for this annual missionary meeting.

Rev. G. W. Jennings presided in the evening, giving a sermon on "The Transfiguration."

Next Sunday the pastor will have charge of the morning service and in the evening Mrs. Jenny C. Law Hardy will give an address on Cuba. Everyone invited.

CHICKEN THIEF CAUGHT

L D. Dewey had been missing some of his best fowls, and remarked on the street that he would give $10.00 to any one who would discover the thief, Dept. John Smith took him at his word, and proceeded to trace the guilty party. He found the chickens at Williamsons where they had been sold by Wesley Handy. Mr Handy was taken before Justice Josmer where he plead guilty and paid a fine and costs amounting to $18.14.

THE LUCKY 13

Mrs. Ed Everett very pleasantly entertained The Lucky 13 at her home Friday afternoon. Progresive pedro was the game of the afternoon, ten games being played. Mrs. Ed Schreder carried off the first prize and Mrs. Thos. Denniston the consolation. At the close of the games light refreshments were served. Believing in lucky numbers, Mrs. Everett will entertain the Jolly 16 Wednesday evening.

5,000,000 Corns Lifted Right Off!

Try 2 Drops of Magic "Gets-It."

There's a wonderful difference between getting rid of a corn now and the way they used to try to get rid of it only four or five years ago. "Gets-It" has revolutionized corn history. It's the only corn remedy

Put 2 drops of "Gets-It" on that corn or callus tonight. That's all. The corn is doomed sure as sunrise. No pain, or trouble, or soreness. You do away once and for all with toe-bundling bandages, toe-eating salves and irresponsible what-nots. Try it—get surprised and lose a corn. Threads as Complexion Charms.

The girls of Roumanian country districts take great pride in a clear, healthy complexion, and just as the girls in our own rural districts a generation ago would get up before breakfast and steal down unobserved on the first day of May to wash their freckles away in the dew of the morning so the girls of Roumania take red and white threads, twist them into cords, from which they suspend coins around their necks. These talismans they wear from the dead of winter to the moment they see the first blossom of spring, feeling sure that thereby they will guarantee themselves a milk white complexion, rosy cheeks and ruby lips. —National Geographic Magazine.

The most aggravating person in the world is the fellow who is sure he is right without ever getting ahead.—Philadelphia Record.

A Bone of Contention

It Came Between a Pair of Lovers.

By CLARISSA MACKIE

It stretched across the salt marsh and connected two villages. Harborhead folk called it "the red bridge," while Portside people grimly referred to it as "the white bridge." As a matter of fact, it had never been painted at all, and now, after two years' exposure to wind and weather, the new wood had taken on soft gray tints that blended with the silver tide that ebbed and flowed between the piles.

Although Harborhead and Portside were connected by the new bridge and the vehicles of both villages rumbled to and fro over the planks, the inhabitants were widely separated by a growing bitterness.

Parson Lane of Portside had pounded the pulpit vigorously over the matter. "Pots of paint! Pots of paint!" he exclaimed one memorable Sunday. "Have my people drowned their souls in pots of paint? The good Lord made it possible for these villages to be united by a beautiful bridge, and you wrangle over the painting of it as if the color mattered. Brethren, see that your souls are as white as you would have the bridge painted. Let not the red smirch of anger sully its purity!"

After that sermon the bitterness was intensified. The Harborhead people who weekly crossed the bridge to attend Parson Lane's church fluttered homeward to spread the good man's words far and wide, with most unhappy results.

Noah Wade and Almira Turner were to be married in June. Three times a week Noah crossed the bridge to Harborhead to see his sweetheart. They had never discussed the bridge matter, because they had been too happy to talk about anything except their own wonderful affairs.

The Tuesday after Parson Lane's sermon Almira waited at the front gate for Noah. She could see him stepping quickly across the bridge, tall, erect, with his head poised high. All the Wades were proud. The girl's blue eyes did not soften at her lover's approach. A new expression came into them.

"Waiting for me?" smiled Noah, taking the hat from his brown hair and covering Almira's little hand with his own sunburned fingers.

She drew her hand quietly from beneath his touch. "Yes," she said gravely. "Come with me, Noah. I have something to say to you. Let us go to the orchard."

"What is the matter? Are you in trouble? Has anything happened?" demanded Noah anxiously, falling into step beside her.

Almira shook her head. In silence they went across the grass to the orchard and paused in the shade of the gnarled old apple trees.

"What is the matter, Almira?" repeated Noah at last.

"Why not?" Noah spoke gruffly. He was angry at Almira's strange manner, at the coldness in her voice and her sudden aloofness.

She looked at the distant sails with steadfast eyes. "Father says I shan't marry any one from over 'the white bridge,' and I don't know that I want to."

"Personally I don't care a rap what color the bridge is," retorted Noah. "I've crossed it for two years to see you, Almira, and now at this late day you suddenly drop me and say it's because I live over the bridge—a flimsy excuse. Why don't you say outright that you don't care for me and never did?" His face was growing whiter, and the hand pressed against the tree trunk was clinched until the knuckles were livid.

Suddenly Noah swung away from the tree and without one backward glance tramped across the grass, leaped the fence into a winding lane and disappeared along the shore road.

After that it became known that Almira's wedding garments were carefully laid away out of sight and Noah Wade no longer crossed the bridge three times a week.

Then followed a summer unprecedented for its lack of rain. Weeks followed days, and months followed weeks, while the sun poured relentlessly down on the sister towns and burned the vegetation to crisp brownness. Only the salt grass that was wet by the tides remained green. Crops died in the baked earth.

September came, fiercely hot. One breathless evening Almira Turner walked listlessly along the bridge. It was said that whatever breeze there might be would be felt on the long wooden structure that united the two villages, yet in its way formed a barrier between many hearts.

Others were walking on the bridge, but it was noticeable that Portside folks walked only as far as the middle of the bridge and then retraced their steps. Harborhead people did the same thing at their end, so there was no passing over the bridge save by those who had business to attend to. Where friendly relations were established between families in the warring villages it was considered most amicable and politic to visit by way of the long road around the shore and avoid the unhappy bridge.

Almira was thinking bitterly of what her father had said when she announced that her engagement to Noah Wade had been broken. He had stared incredulously at her.

"Why, Miry, honey, I was only joking! Now, you go along and make it up with Noah this minute. There'll be bridges standing long after we poor mortals are through trying to be happy in this world."

But Almira could not make it up with Noah Wade. He did not give her a chance. He went away from Portside and found work elsewhere, and she had not seen him through the long summer. Now she was thinking of him and of her foolish excuse for giving him up.

A loud rumble of thunder sent the pedestrians on the bridge scurrying home, but Almira lingered, watching the lightning leap from cloud to cloud in that ominous black mountain in the northwest, listening to the crackle and volley of thunder, harking to the sibilant hiss of the high tide among the bridge timbers.

Just as she turned her steps homeward there came a blinding crash that seemed to enwrap the whole village of Harborhead in yellow light; then all sound ceased for an instant, and out of the murky darkness there sprang a bright flame and another and another. The lightning had struck in Harborhead.

Almira hurried toward home as the wild clamor of the church bells rang out. If the Portside people refused to bring out their fire apparatus to the rescue of Harborhead the closely populated little village was doomed. It was known that Portsiders were very bitter against the people over the bridge.

Just as she reached the gate there came another sound, mingled with the roar of thunder, the clash of bells and the shouts of men. It was the high, sweet clang of the Portside fire bell, and it was followed by the rumble of the little engine across the bridge. It dashed past Almira's gate, dragged by a score of strong, willing hands. The hook and ladder truck came in its wake, and there, sitting high on the seat, steering the truck, was Noah Wade, his face tense and set in the glare of the fire.

The devastating storm died away while the valiant men fought the flames that licked greedily at the frame store buildings and threatened many a nearby home with destruction. Portside men and men of Harborhead worked side by side, and differences were forgotten in the single aim that prompted all.

Many times that night Almira's heart failed within her as she watched Noah risk his life within the flaming buildings. Once he brought out a little child from the tenements over the stores, and the tenderness with which he bore the child and placed it in its mother's arms brought tears to the girl's sad eyes.

And then came the moment when their eyes met across the flames. The sudden leap of recognition in Noah's glance was answered by Almira's appealing eyes, and then the smoke hung between them once more.

The weeks that followed after the fire were not soon forgotten. Differences were patched up and mended so that they would not again break. Portside and Harborhead people mingled together as they had before the days of the bridge trouble. There were church festivals and entertainments that were enjoyed by everybody, and over all was the feeling of satisfaction that the bridge trouble was at an end.

The Harborhead people had gratefully announced their willingness that the bridge should be painted white in view of the prompt and neighborly services of the Portside firemen. Portside people agreed to abide by a choice by vote.

When the vote was counted it was found that all Harborhead had voted for a white painted bridge, while Portside had courteously voted for red, and the vote was tied.

Then the question was solved by a suggestion to paint the bridge green, and it was done, and so peace reigned at last, and there was much passing to and fro.

At last Noah came over to Harborhead and stopped at Almira's gate. Mrs. Turner greeted him pleasantly.

"Almira went over the bridge awhile ago, Noah. If you walk back you may meet her," she said.

Noah walked back slowly, watching for Almira's slender form and dreading to see it beside that of some other admirer. At last she came, stepping quickly, with now and then a glance at the rising full moon.

Halfway across she met Noah, and they both stopped. Noah guided her gently to the railing where they could look along the bright moonlit path that wrinkled the water.

"I've been to see you, Almira. Your mother said I might meet you," he said wistfully.

"I—went to Portside to mail a letter—to you, Noah. I thought you might get it sooner—tonight—and perhaps you would come. I wanted to tell you how foolish I've been"—

Noah stopped her words with a swift caress. "And I was on the way to tell you what a fool I've been, but we've met halfway, after all."

When the wedding day came round both sides thought it would be a suitable occasion on which to celebrate the return of peace, and nothing would do but that the bridal procession should pass over the bridge.

The suggestion was acted on, and a procession of about all the folks in Harborhead and all the folks in Portside followed the bride and groom or strewed flowers before them, a fitting ending to the troubles that had so long separated the two towns.

Belief In Ghosts.

In most of the oriental countries, notably in China and in many quarters in Europe, the belief in ghosts is still active, quite as much so as it was a thousand years ago. The peasantry of Russia and especially of Siberia, are in constant dread of ghosts, and much of their time is taken up with devising ways and means of safeguarding themselves against their visitations. Not even in the United States of America is the ancient superstition defunct. The negroes are notorious believers in ghosts, and thousands of white people remote from the center of intelligence are still the victims of the old idea.—New York American.

High School Notes

Operetta a Success.

The "Out-laws of Etiquetta" presented by the High-school students, under the able direction of Miss Caldwell, was greeted by a full house last Thursday evening.

In behalf of the High school we wish to thank everyone for their hearty support in this undertaking and especially those who were responsible for it.

At this time we also wish to express our hearty thanks, and appreciation to Miss Caldwell, who in spite of the most trying circumstances was able to make this venture a success.

Jane McConnel tells us in a forcefull speech she would not get married. Better consult her, as she is an expert in that line, being "General Manager of the Window Smashers Union."

In English X class there was a heated discussion as to whether all horses were useful. The subject simmered down to colts, and Mr. Moore who did'nt see how they made out colts to be useful, indignantly replied "Oh I do suppose they do eat hay and kick the slats of the barn ...... excuse me."

Miss Miller: "Miss Comfort, what is Babylonian?"

Miss Comfort: "I don't know, give me a start on it will you?"

Julius Caesar says: "They crossed the river by 'Fords' while the Tenth Legion sailed into Britton (Britain)."

Some of our Vaudeville stars failed to succeed in removing the "pink" as was seen by their appearance the next day.

The pupils had a splendid row of "peek holes" in the lower part of the windows, where they had been painted white, but, alas, some little spirit had re-painted them over Sunday. We have our suspicions who the little "spirit" was.

Mildred Lamkin has a new fountain pen. It has the initials M. H. S. inscribed on it. We understand that this stands for "Mildred High Stepper."

David Copperfield Coming

In the near future, "David Copperfield," a film of the highest possible merit, will be exhibited at the Opera House, under the auspices of the T. H. S. Athletic Associaion.

This film, which will be one of the Bradley features for this season, should be seen by young and old, as it is "The" masterpiece of "Charles Dickens."

Miss Armstrong has arranged with Miss Boag, who teaches in Idaho, for an exchange of letters between the two English classes. Several interesting letters have arrived to date, and our Seniors have already written several letters

GERMANS LOSE 165 TOWNS IN BIG DRIVE

Allies Have Recaptured 620 Square Miles.

LONDON, ENG. — British and French armies advanced on wide fronts in northern France Monday and occupied large areas of territory abandoned by the Germans.

General Haig's official report says the British advance is still being pushed rapidly.

"The ground gained extends for a depth of from two to eight miles and forty more villages have fallen into our hands," the report says.

The Paris official report says French troops have occupied about twenty additional villages and small towns in their advance on the retreating Germans, making over 125 in all captured. They have gone beyond Ham on the Somme river and Chauny on the Oise, which brings them appreciably nearer to the St. Quentin-Laon line. The French cavalry, the official report says, has advanced nearly twenty-two miles in the direction of St. Quentin, capturing on the way a convoy retiring toward that point. The French army found the country devastated by the Germans, even fruit trees being cut down. Numerous villages were burned. Since the German retreat began, France has regained, it is estimated, 620 square miles of territory.

U-BOATS SINK 3 U. S. SHIPS

City of Memphis, Vigilancia and Illinois Lost.

LONDON, ENG. — The sinking of the American steamships City of Memphis, Illinois and Vigilancia is announced.

Fourteen men from the Vigilancia are missing, as are some of the men from the City of Memphis.

The crew of the Illinois was landed safely.

The City of Memphis, in ballast from Cardiff for New York, was sunk by gunfire. The second officer and fifteen men of the crew have been landed. A patrol boat has gone in search of the other members of the crew.

Strictly Correct.

"Why, Grace," exclaimed an old friend, "are you going to be married next week? You are a base deceiver. Why, you told us only a few days ago that you were booked for a personally conducted tour with a small, select party."

"Yes, dear," answered Grace, smiling sweetly, "Jack is the personal conductor, and I'm the small, select party."

HURRY WORK FOR ENTRY INTO WAR

Wilson Speeds Warships to Cost $115,000,000.

60 U-BOAT CHASERS ORDERED

"State of War" With Germany Already Exists in the Minds of Washington Authorities—President Urged to Call Congress at Once—Annapolis Graduation Hurried.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Aggressive steps to put the navy of the United States in readiness to fight submarines under any conditions have been taken as an answer to the German defiance conveyed through the destruction of the American ships Vigilancia, City of Memphis and Illinois. Under the personal direction of President Wilson, Secretary of Navy Daniels instituted drastic measures to put the navy in shape to meet war conditions, which Washington is convinced are imminent. Naval preparedness was given an extraordinary impetus after President Wilson conferred for half an hour with the secretary of the navy. This conference followed close on the heels of a report to the President by Secretary of State Lansing on the latest acts of destruction in the German submarine zone.

State of War Exists.

There is a growing feeling in Washington that a "state of war" already exists between the United States and Germany. State department officials declined to comment on this phase of the situation, declaring that "the matter is too serious for discussion." It is stated that any comment will have to come from the President himself. It is known, however, that some of the President's advisers favor an official "declaration of war." Others in the President's cabinet believe that congress should be called together at once, rather than on April 16, and that immediate and vigorous steps to combat the submarine menace should be taken. Meanwhile the President withholds all comment and deals with the increased gravity of the situation, only by augmenting the military and naval preparations for a possible state of war. After the President and his naval chief adviser had reviewed the situation, the following steps were taken:

Steps Taken for Hostilities.

An emergency appropriation of $115,000,000, made by congress to enable the President to hasten naval construction in the event of a credit was made available by the President for immediate use. This is part of an authorized bond issue of $180,000,000, a part of which is to be used for increased submarine construction.

Secretary Daniels ordered sixty "submarine chasers," motorboats, 100 feet long and with 35 knots speed built at once, at the New York navy yard, and announced that bids could be opened from private ship yards for some 200 more of this type of craft. It was stated that the New York yard will begin the delivery of these craft in sixty days. All will be paid for out of the emergency appropriation.

Orders were issued by the navy department suspending the statutory eight-hour day on naval construction, both in private and government yards. Work will be pushed as fast as the men will work, with payment of time and a half for overtime to be made out of the emergency fund.

Speeds Annapolis Graduations.

President Wilson authorized the speeding up of Annapolis graduations to provide additional naval officers. The first year class will be graduated on March 29 with 172 cadets and the second class next September with 187.

FAVORS U. S. ROAD CONTROL

Robert S. Lovett Urges Nationalization of Iron Highways.

WASHINGTON, D. C. — Immediate nationalization of railroad control was urged by Robert S. Lovett, chairman of the board of the Union Pacific, in testifying before the congressional committee investigating all phases of the railway problem.

Final disposition of the control question, he declared, would prove a great factor in the grave problem of obtaining new capital with which to continue railroad development.

Fortresses Join Revolt.

LONDON, ENG. — The entire Russian Baltic fleet and the fortresses at Viborg and Sveaborg have joined the revolutionary movement in Russia, says a dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph company from Copenhagen, which is based on reports received from Haparanda, Sweden.

It is hard for the American mind to realize that the United States is now practically in a state of war with Germany? We have been a nation at peace so many years that [illegible] very war [illegible] close touch with congress at Washington, and knew [illegible] of the rapid and feverish [illegible] by which the President and heads of [illegible] departments are speeding [illegible] preparedness, we might be [illegible] some of the danger which now confronts us.

The sinking of three American boats last week and again this morning we learn of the sinking of the Standard tanker, has caused hardly a ripple on the American mind.

The calling of Congress to convene April 2nd to consider grave questions of national policy which will probably end in a declaration of war with Germany has not had the effect [illegible] the state of lethargy. The American people, it appears, [illegible] look upon the European war as something afar off, a kind [illegible] without very much [illegible] of the terrible details [illegible] An estimate recently [illegible] Washington state that up to the first of the year 4,511,000 [illegible] killed in the European War, 2,148,000 seriously wounded [illegible] captured or missing are estimated at 2,224,500. In all more than 9,000,000 men have been killed, wounded or taken prisoners and still the number is increasing each day.

It is time the people of this country should wake up and lend every effort toward getting this government in a state of preparedness. The [illegible] who shouts that America just as she is can lick the world, is talking rot. We have this class in our own legislature at Lansing as we read that Representative McArthur of Eaton Rapids, in discussing the Culver bill, stated that, no matter how highly trained any army in the world might be, the intelligence and patriotism of the American will serve to make him the superior of any soldier in the world and further added that, if a German army or Jap army should land on our shores, they would never get back.

Who wants to take a chance? There is only one way to be sure and the President realizes it and that is asking Congress for relief.

AMENDMENT TO CONSTITUTION REQUIRED TO ENABLE MICHIGAN TO RECEIVE FEDERAL AID

That Michigan's constitution does not give the State Highway Commissioner authority to originate plans for and to build roads as required by the federal aid road bill, which offers to Michigan $2,186,756 during the next five years, is the claim made by the department of Agriculture in a recent letter to Governor Sleeper.

To remedy this defect and some others affecting the Covert (assessment district) act and the sale of bonds by townships, a joint resolution has been unanimously passed by both houses of the legislature to submit to the voters of Michigan at the coming April election an amendment to section 26, article 8 of the state constitution.

The amendment makes but slight changes, but remedies all the defects mentioned. It is, therefore, very important to the road cause of Michigan that this amendment to the constitution be made at this time.

PROPOSED AMENDMENTS TO BE VOTED UPON AT APRIL ELECTION

At the election to be held in this State on Monday, April 2nd, there will be submitted to the electors, a proposed amendment to the constitution of the State as follows:

A proposed amendment to Section twenty-six of Article VIII of the contitution and to read as follows:

Section 26. The legislature may by general law provide for the laying out, construction, improvement and maintenance of highways, bridges and culverts by the state and by the counties and ownships thereof and by road districts; and may authorize counties or districts to take charge and control of any highway within their limits for such purposes. The legislature may also by general law prescribe the powers and duties of boards of supervisors in relation to highways, bridges and culverts; may provide for county and district road commissioners to be appointed or elected, with such pwers and duties as may be prescribed by law; and may change and abolish the powers and duties of township commissioners and overseers of highways. The legislature may provide by law for submitting the question of adopting the county road system to the electors of the counties, and such road system shall not go into operation in any county until approved by a majority of the electors thereof voting thereon. The tax raised for road purposes by counties shall not exceed in any one year five dollars upon each one thousand dollars of assessed valuation for the preceding year.

The effect of this proposed amendment if adopted, will be to extend to the State the right to lay out, construct, improve and maintain high ways, bridges and culverts; it also provides for the submission in counties of the county road system and places the limit of the amount that may be raised in any one year at five dollars upon each one thousand dollars of assessed valuation for the preceding year.

This statement is made in compliance with Act 23, P. A. 1905, which in part is as follows: The Secretary of State shall prepare concise statements, setting forth the purport, nature and effect of proposed amendments, and send to the doaily and weekly newspaper with a request that said papers give as wide publicity as possible. Publication of any matter by any paper under the provisions of this act, shall be without expense to the State of Michigan.

At the election to be held in this State on Monday, April 2nd, there will be submitted to the electors, a proposed amendment to the constitution of the State as follows:

A proposed amendment to Section twenty-one of Article VI of the constitution, and to read as follows:

"Secion 21. The governor and attorney general shall each receive an annual salary of five thousand dollars. The secretary of state, state treasurer and auditor general shall each receive an annual salary of four thousand dollars. They shall receive no fees or perquisites whatever for the performance of any duties conneced with the offices. It shall not be competent for the legislature to increase the salaries herein provided."

The effect of this proposed amendment, if adopted, will be to provide for increasing the annual salary of the secretary of state, state treasurer and auditor general from $2,500 to $4,000.

This statement is made in compliance with Act 23, P. A. 1905, which in part is as follows: The Secretary of State shall prepare concise statements, setting forth the purport, nature and effect of proposed amendments, and send to the daily and weekly newspapers with a request that said papers give as wide publicity as possible. Publication of any matter by any paper under the provisions of this act, shall be without expense to the State of Michigan.

HISTORY

OF THE GRUB SCHOOL

In thinking of the past, my boyhood and school days with all their pleasures and incidents come back to memory and I think of the teachers who taught us, the dear ones with whom we played and conned our lessons. Nearly all of the former are gone and less than a dozen of the latter are now living. So that the old "Grub School" in West Franklin is a sad reminder of the past.

It is said that John Kimball taught in the year 1853 and was followed by Levi Camburn in 1854. We had for teacher the next term Wm. DeMott who taught part of the term and Miss Mary Mills finished the term in 1855.

These all taught in the old Baptist church nearly opposite the home of P. C. Mills which was built by the Baptist organization for religious services and in which Elder Tripp preached for some time. The lot was donated by Major Mills for religious purposes. Then after it was no longer used for that purpose it reverted back to the original owner and the district found itself without a house in which to train and educate its young, but James Kimball, being of a public spirit, donated the land where the school house now stands, which was nearly covered with grubs.

The writer was present and helped to cut part of the grubs and grade the lot. Then the contract was let and the house finished in time for the winter school which was taught by Samuel Rundall. This was in 1856. It was a large and interesting school.

The next term was taught by Samuel Hubbard. This too was a large and profitable school as he was then attending the State Normal, this being in 1857.

He was followed the next winter by D. C. Blair, son of Charles Blair, who was cousin to Austin Blair, our war-governor, this being in 1858 and was a very successful school.

Then in 1859 Leander Kimball, who was afterwards county treasurer, taught a very exemplary school though not as large as formerly for many of the older ones had gone out into the world for themselves and had bid adieu to the Grub school house with all its play grounds and schoolmates.

At the close of the school we too gathered up the few books we had and bade the teacher and scholars a last farewell, never again to visit that spot where we had spent so many happy days and years with our books and schoolmates.

All the above teachers were men of good character and abilities and taught us both by example and precept many good things and had we practiced them in after life would have made us better citizens but, they are numbered with unimproved opportunities.

The following is a list of the scholars who attended school there from the year 1853 to 1859, to the best of recollection, for there are no records at hand:

T. M. Camburn, Harmon Camburn, Julia Camburn, Melissa Camburn, Philander Millard, Anna Millard, Clarissa Camburn, Lewis Mason, George Mason, Orange Mason, Fannie Mason, Sara Mason, H. C. Daniels, Evelina Mason, George Butrick, Riley Butrick, John Butrick, Charles Butrick, Adda Butrick, Josephine Butrick, Wm. Keeney, Joseph Keeney, Irene Keeney, Mannery Delong, Esther Delong, Lillie Delong, Adelbert Mills, Leroy Mills, Francis Mills, Eugene Kimball, James Kimball, Sidney Kimball, Hattie Kimball, Wm. C. Daniels, Lorenzo Daniels, Jefferson Daniels, James Daniels, Julia Daniels, May Daniels, Fletcher Daniels, Milton Clement, Ira Clement, Rebecca Clement, Harriet Clement.

Those who came in outside the district:

D. W. Love, Charles Shapley, Bradley Miller, Albert Briggs, Horatio Blood, Elsie Blood, Geo. Daniels, Martha Card, Mary Kinogsburg, Sophrana Howard, Harvey Brown, Mary Jane Jordan, Ann Guernseg.

A tax on incomes in Michigan would produce about $12,000,000, according to figures sent to the senate by the state tax commission in answer to a resolution last week asking for figures as to how much a tax on incomes would bring to the state treasury.

James Teal, of Mesick, prevented a wreck on the Manistee & Northeastern railroad near Mesick when he discovered a broken rail and flagged a passenger train. The train contained more than fifty passengers. Teal has received a reward from the railroad company.

Professor L. R. Taft, state inspector of orchards and nurseries, has announced that he has completed the draft of the proposed amendment to the state nursery law to prevent the shipment of white pine into this state from districts affected with white pine blister rust.

Three Michigan men, Sergeant Herbert Smith and Privates Antoine Herbert and Frederick Mamby, have been decorated by Britain's king for bravery displayed while engaged with Canadian battalions on the River Somme, according to dispatches reaching Windsor.

After more than seven months' service on the Mexican border, during which they were stationed at Fort Bliss, Tex., near El Paso, Troops A. of South Haven, and B., of Detroit commanded respectively by Captains E. W. Thompson and H. A. Pickert, numbering 128 enlisted men and six officers, have returned to Detroit.

SOLVAY PULVERIZED LIMESTONE

Solvay Pulverized Limestone is shipped from a point south of Detroit, which means that you get your shipment without delay.

Solvay Pulverized Limestone is furnace-dried, and whether in bulk or in paper bags, it is always shipped in box cars. This means that it is never injured by weather and is immediately ready to spread, quickly and easily, two tons to the acre.

Solvay guarantees that its pulverized Limestone contains 94% total carbonates. Being powdered as fine as flour, practically every particle dissolves quickly into the earth—every particle works to sweeten the soil, and to create maximum fertility. Coarser particles take longer to work in, and cannot be so evenly distributed through the soil—while the cost of hauling and spreading is just as great. Use Solvay Pulverized Limestone—as fine as flour, shipped in box cars—on your soil and insure fuller, richer crops.

Write at once for prices, or apply to your local dealer. See list of Lenawee county dealers published in Adrian Daily Telegram.

THE OLD SCHOOL BELL

How many ever saw our old high school bell before? Or how many like the writer have climbed up into the belfrey in their youthful days, to see the bell, and take a view of the surrounding country? Cast in 1838, now 79 years old, it has served us well so far, and promises to do good work for many years to come for it is sound as ever and its tones are clear and pleasant to the ear as in the days when we went rushing down the street for fear the janitor would stop ringing it before we reached the school house, but the janitors have always been kind and good and would give a few more pulls to the rope, to help the delinquent ones to safety.

The old bell is on exhibition in the window at Satterthwaite's store, and we hope that in the near future it will peal forth again calling the scholars to their duties in the new Tecumseh High School. All honor to our old school bell! It served faithfully on the old court house, did its duty on the old high school, and now deserves a good position on the new building.

Such a family cough syrup is Foley's Honey and Tar Compound. This standard medicine has been on the market for years and in many sections was found in every home in the days when doctors were not so handy and when money was scarcer.

Foley's Honey and Tar Compound is an excellent medicine for coughs, colds, raw or inflamed throat, hoarseness, tightness and soreness of the chest, croup and whooping cough. It is an absolutely safe remedy, containing only healing ingredients, and free from any harmful drugs.

Use "Gets-It," Lift Corn Right Off

Shrivels, Loosens—and It's Gone!

"Just like taking the lid off—that's how easy you can lift a corn off your toe after it has been treated with the wonderful discovery, "Gets-It." Hunt the wide world over and you'll find nothing so magic, simple and easy as "Gets-It." You folks who have wrapped your toes in bandages to look like bundles, who have used salves that turned your toes raw and sore, and used plasters that would shift from their place and never "get" the corn, and who have dug and picked at your corns with knives and scissors and perhaps made them bleed—just quit these old and painful ways and try "Gets-It" just once. You put 2 or 3 drops on, and it dries at once. There's nothing to stick. You can put your shoe and stocking right on again. The pain is all gone. Then the corn dies a painless, shriveling death. It loosens from your toe, and off it comes. "Gets-It" is the biggest selling corn remedy in the world today. There's none other as good.

"O-O-!" End Corns and Stop Pain Quickly With "Gets-It"

Sold in Tecumseh and recommended as the world's best corn remedy by R. I. Pulver adv

A GENERAL SURVEY OF THE WAR.

Thursday, March. 15.—After a three-day struggle, the Russian duma overthrew the government and established itself over the empire. Czar Nicholas abdicated, and the czarevitch was proclaimed ruler with the czar's brother Michael as regent.

Another important gain was made by the British troops between Peronne and Bapaume. Trenches on a front of two and a half miles, running from south of the St. Pierre-Vasst wood to north of the village of Saillisel, were occupied.

Friday, Mar. 16.—British in the Somme occupied almost all of St. Pierre Vaast Wood and 3,000 yards of enemy trenches. French report gains in the Champagne, and from Andechy to the south of Lassigny. The French under General Sarrail captured advanced trenches west of Monastir.

Russian troops dislodged the Turkish forces from their fortified positions on the summit of Narelshkian to the west of Kermanshah in northwestern Persia.

The posts established by General Maude thirty miles up stream on the Tigris were on the left bank of the river. The Turkish rear guard on the right bank about fifteen miles north of Bagdad was driven back three miles.

A portion of the town of Bakubah, on the right bank of the Diala river, was also occupied by the British.

Saturday, Mar. 17.—The British troops entered German positions on a front of about sixteen miles. The British gain reached from Bapaume to Monchy-Au-Bois, and included the villages of LeTransloy, Achiet-Le-Grand, Achiet-Le-Petit, Bucquoy, and others. On the south the gain included various villages from LaMaisonette (South of Peronne) to Fresnes.

French advance guards entered the important town of Roye and the French occupied the entire front between Andechy and the Oise on a front of nearly fifteen miles.

Sunday, Mar. 18.—British troops have occupied the important towns of Nesle, Chaulnes and Peronne. Along a front of about forty-five miles, they entered the German positions to a depth of ten miles in places. In addition, the British have taken more than sixty villages.

The French have swept the Germans back on a thirty-seven mile front between the Avre and Aisne, making the German retreat before the allies a front covering eighty-two miles.

In Armenia, the Russians have captured Lake Van, and in Persia have advanced to near the border. The British have reached a point seventy-five miles north of Bagdad.

"Promise me that the day I am sentenced you will apply for a divorce and marry a beautiful woman," said Mrs. Josephine Pearson to her husband, Dennis, when she signed her confession at Grand Rapids to murdering Billy George, an itinerant paper hanger, in her Alpine township home.

"THE MYSTERY OF THE RAISIN"

By William B. Hartzog

CHAPTER IV

In the Wilds along the Raisin.

Michigan has many rivers, but none more beautiful and historic than the Raisin. For ages her quiet waters have been flowing onward to the great inland sea, which Anglo-Saxons named Lake Erie. On her banks mighty forests arose and fell They put forth their leaves in the springtime and scattered them over her banks in the autumn. The wintery storms freighted with sleet and snow drove their furious blasts down her valleys. For ages her solitude was unbroken by the sound of the woodman's axe. On her bosem roving Indians paddled their canoes, hunted and fished. On her banks they created their wigwams, assembled at their council grounds and lived out their strange life. In her waters their children bathed in the summer time. In the openings which lined her shores they raised their scanty crops of Indian corn. Occasionally her waters ran red with their blood when they engaged in their feudal wars.

Like all rivers she received aid from many tributaries, and in the springtime overflowed her banks On the ancient trails that skirted her shores, mighty chiefs led their braves. What a story she could tell if she had the power of speech. She waited long for the coming of the white man, who would hunt, and trap in the wilderness through which she threaded her way.

At length the pathfinders of New France came to teach religion, trade with the Indians and raise the standard of civilization. They settled at the mouth of this noble river.

"Why do they call it the Raisin river," inquired Willard as they shoved out their boat preparatory to making their way up stream.

"Well, when Col. Navarre came here in 1780 he explored this river and found wild grapes growing so thick along the banks that he named it 'Raisin.' You see that is the French word for grapes. We will see them pretty soon. This is just the right time of the year to get a good view of the vegetation that lines the banks of this river. We are now about to penetrate a country where no white men have settled. I don't think it will be long before they will be pouring in here, for there have been men from the east scouting around through the country of late. The Indians don't like it either. I get along with the Indians pretty well. I always try to treat them right. They are not dangerous as long as they are sober but when they get drunk they are devils. I never trade whiskey to the Indians, because I can't do business with them when they are drunk and they are never sober when there is any whiskey to be had."

Joe Grove's boat was a large one having a flat bottom. In the stern was a coop-like affair that contained food, gunpowder, blankets, bags of meal and numerous articles to trade to the Indians. There was a space large enough for the men to crawl into in case of a storm. They propelled the boat by the use of paddles and pike poles. It was not as swife as in the springtime. They made rapid pace. The foliage of the trees and vines and luxuriant vegetation made it impossible to get an idea of the lay of the land. It appeared to be low and full of swamps. Toward evening they could see clouds of smoke drifting above the tree tops.

"Do you see that smoke?" said Joe. "That is an Indian village. We will stay there to-night."

As the boat turned the bend of the river, they could see a huge bonfire on a high bank. Joe smiled and said, "We are just in time, they are going to have a dance to-night. We will see the Indian in all his glory."

As they drew near, the Indians crowded about the place where the boat landed and talked with Joe in broken English.

"Indian want whiskey," shouted one burly redskin.

"I don't carry whiskey. You know I never bring whiskey.

I bring meal, that is better than whiskey," said Joe.

Joe laid a pole across the boat, to remind the Indians that they were not to meddle with his things in the rear of the boat.

"Won't they steal all we have?" said Willard.

"No, that is the way both whites and Indians lock their doors and wigwams. An Indian will never enter a wigwam or a white man's house when he sees a pole across the entrance."

The Indians knew Joe. He had always treated them fairly and kindly.

We will eat with the Indians, that will please them," said Joe.

That evening Willard ate his first Indian meal. Chief Yellow Hand's squaw prepared their supper, which consisted of roast bear meat and corn cakes. Red Bird, the Chief's daughter, brought a vessel filled with cool water from a nearby spring. Willard thanked her and gave her a string of beads. She seemed quite surprised but highly gratified.

"You made a good hit, Willard. You will have an everlasting friend in that girl," said Joe.

"Now we will have to smoke with them," said Joe.

"I never smoked, but I will try it," said Willard.

"Well, go slow, their tobacco is awful strong. It may make you sick."

Chief Yellow Hand brought out his pipes. They sat on a log near the bonfire and smoked the pipe of peace. Willard was cautious and blew the smoke up through the pipe. In that manner he saved himself from the sickness that usually comes from the first smoke.

It was a wild and weird scene that Willard witnessed that night. In every direction could be seen wigwams constructed of elm bark. Numerous small bonfires sent up a glare of light amid the branches of the large oak trees. Little Indians glided about like so many fairies. The young braves pranced, leaped and yelled like friends. Joe smiled as he watched Willard's grave countenance.

"How do you like it?" inquired Joe.

"It is all right as long as I am with you, but I would not like to be caught out here alone."

"Red Bird wouldn't let them hurt you. You've got her good will already," said Joe with a smile.

All of a sudden thy heard one terrifying yell.

"Its all over," said Joe, "that is Yellow Hand's signal to close the dance."

Joe and Willard retired to their boat and were soon buried in deep slumber.

In the morning they arranged with the Indians to take their stock of hides when they returned and continued their journey up the river. That night they camped at the great bend.

"Do you know which way you are going, Willard?"

"I think I do, for I have been watching the course of the sun. I take it that we have been going southwesterly direction."

"You are right, but from this point we will go northward through a beautiful country. Down in this direction (pointing to the southwest) is a great black swamp. I have travelled all the Indian trails in this region. I think we had better anchor to that snag in the river, it will be safer. The bears and wolves will be howling around here before morning."

Willard had never slept in the solitude of the forest. It was a strange event in his life. The darkness was oppressive. There was a solemn stillness broken only by the occasional hooting of an owl. He lay awake a long time and thought of his past life. Then he fell asleep and dreamed of his home land. He was awakened by an unearthly noise He listened for a few minutes, then he poked Joe with his elbow.

Joe awakened, listened for a moment and whispered, "It is a black bear. Let him go he will not bother us if we don't bother him. If he hangs around here until morning we will have his skin."

Joe rolled over and was soon asleep, but it was too much for Willard.

As the gray dawn appeared he awakened Joe. The bear was still pacing up and down the bank near the water's edge.

"I will fix him," said Joe, "lay your gun near me so if mine fails to kill him I will have yours to fall back on."

Joe took aim and fired. The bear fell over on a pile of sand and soon expired.

"Now we must skin him."

They loosened the boat and shoved her to the shore. Joe was an expert at skinning animals and soon had accomplished the task.

"Why did you work so fast Joe?" inquired Willard.

"You will see pretty soon. The d--- wolves will smell this blood and be here in a few minutes. Shove her off, Willard, they are coming." Then the forest rang with the bloodcurdling howls of the wolves and they came thrashing through the brush.

"We will shove her on up the stream and get away from them."

They were scarcely a hundred feet away when Willard glancing back saw the ravenous wolves devouring the carcass of the bear.

"I am learning new lessons every day, Joe," said Willard.

After about an hour of vigorous exercise they came to a spring gushing from the bank.

"Here's where we pause for refreshments," said Joe.

About noon of that day they reached the junction of two rivers. "Which is which?" said Willard. that is the main river. This one coming in from the west we call the little Raisin. About a mile farther on we will come to a bend in the river where there are high banks. There we will find another spring and we will eat."

When they reached the spring, Joe said, "Let's land and rest under the shade of that big oak."

They ate their lunch and drank the fresh water from the spring.

"Do you see that path Willard? That is a trail. I have traveled with a pack of Indians on that trail. But we haven't hit the main trail yet. We may not find any Indians to-day. There are a lot of lakes northwest of here. They like to hang around them."

Toward evening Joe saw smoke. "That fire is on a high bank where a stream flows into the river. The small stream is the outlet of some of the lakes."

As they drew near they discovered two white men sitting by the fire

"Hello, friends," shouted Joe. "Got supper ready?"

The men seemed startled, but approached the boat.

"Where are you from?"

"We are from Monroe, where are you from?" said Joe.

"We are from Detroit. We came through on the Indian trail from Ypsilanti. We left the trail when we struck this river and came down this far. My name is Evans. I am a surveyor from Jefferson County, New York."

"My name is Joe Grove. I came from Chautauqua County, New York, some years ago. I hold forth at Monroe. I am a trader. "This young feller is Willard Briggs. I don't know where he is from."

"Where are you from, Briggs?"

"I am from New York State."

"My friend here, Mr. Gordon, is from Detroit," said Mr. Evans "You might as well stay here. It is getting late."

"Very well, we will do it," replied Joe.

After eating a hearty supper and adding more wood to he fire, they lighted their pipes and began to converse.

"I feel quite relieved to have you with us, Mr. Grove. This is a strange country, full of savage life and rather dangerous to travel," said Evans. "The Indians in this region are not dangerous, unless they be drunk but the wild animals are pretty dangerous," replied Joe.

"We did not find as many Indians as we expected."

"Sometimes they camp about a mile up the river on the high bank."

"We discovered what appeared to be an Indian council ground there. Where do they keep themselves?"

"There are a lot of them about fifteen miles west of here among the lakes. This little stream flows from there. So does this river. I have been all around in that region."

"I am quite taken with this country. I think some of starting a settlement up there near the old council ground. The Indians have ceded this country to the Government," said Evans.

"I was tellin' Willard the other day, that it would not be long until the whites would be settling in this region."

"You said you were from Chautauqua County, New York. That is the extreme western county. I came through there once. I remember I stayed at a village called Findlay Lake."

"That is where I came from. My brother Nathan Grove lives there now. I have not been there for fifteen years. I have a sort of roving disposition, so I got out here on the frontier. Then I got married at Monroe and I have been there for ten years. I like this wild life."

Willard listened with interest to the conversation of the men, but he was frightened at the thought of being called on to relate the events of his past life. What would he say if he were asked to give an account himself? He had a past, but he came into the wilds of the west to forget it. When the conversation lagged a little he became fearful that that they might question him, so he arose and went into the brush and gathered sticks for the fire.

Suddenly they were startled by a terrifying cry, "Help! Help!"

"What's up there?" shouted Joe, as he seized his gun and ran in the direction of the noise.

Just then Willard came rushing into the camp. His face pale as a sheet, at his heels an Indian shouting, "Big baby, Big baby."

Joe saw at a glance that it was a friendly Indian who had taken pride in scaring Willard. It was Yellow Hand, the Chief.

"Are you alone, Yellow Hand?" inquired Joe.

"Me not lie."

"No, Indian must not lie. Call them in, Yellow Hand."

Yellow Hand put his fingers in his mouth, gave the sound of a whip-poor-will, listened a moment and they heard the sound of a whip-poor-will. Presently five stalwart Indians appeared.

"Yellow Hand sleep here. White men sleep in the boat." said the Chief.

"Alright," said Joe, "we know we will be safe when you are around."

The four men retired to the boat. Joe furnished the two men blankets and assured them that they would be perfectly safe.

The Indians wrapped themselves in their blankets and were soon fast asleep beside the fire.

The next morning Joe and Willard bade the two white men adieu and set out down the river, having promised Yellow Hand that they would stop at his village and purchase his furs. When they reached the village the following day they found Yellow Hand waiting for them. They traded blankets and bags of meal for the furs.

Yellow Hand then explained how he came to be at the camp that night. He said Red Bird has been riding through the forest and discovered a band of drunken Indians going in a northwesterly direction. Fearing they might make trouble for Joe and Willard he had set out to protect them. They arrived in Monroe with a boat load of furs just as the sun was kissing the tree tops good-night.

JACKSON CONVICTS MAY BUILD PRISON

House Votes $211,200 to Buy Additional Land.

LANSING, Mar. 26.

The building of a new state prison, outside the city limits of Jackson and entirely by prison labor with perhaps little or no expense to the taxpayers, was the alluring vision conjured up before the house of representatives by Representative Brower, of Jackson, in the debate over the bill appropriating $211,200 for the purchase of additional farm lands for the prison.

Opposition to the measure developed, some of it based on the attitude of rural members of the house who saw increasing competition by the state with farmers, but more particularly was the argument advanced that the prison was getting too much land, that it was not good policy to have so many prisoners at large and that too many were already escaping when trusted in the open.

SOLDIER SHOT BY SUPPOSED SPY.

Last Friday, at Portland Maine, an American soldier was shot by supposed foreign spy who was trying to destroy one of Fort Williams' 12 inch guns, another incident of nearly the same kind occurred the following day when marine guards fired on a supposed spy prowling around a big powder magazine located in the Navy yards at Mobile, Ala. These incidents only go to prove that the United States is over run with foreign spies and that the different items published in the newspapers to that effect are true. These spies are not of the rougher element but generally high class society men who daily mingle with the best society of the land many of them being among the best society people of Washington and daily coming in contact with the leaders of the nation.

The big society and preparedness serial "Patria" which has the best known best dressed woman in the world, Mrs. Vernon Castle as its star and which opened at the Bradley last Thursday evening to capacity houses, deals in a very open and unique way with this very class of spies. Never was a more timely picture booked than this picture of preparedness which is being shown just at this time when every American citizen is most interested in the defense of the American home. You will see things in this great serial that you are daily reading about in the newspapers and things that you will read about after you have seen them in the picture. "Patria" stands as the screen sensation of 1917, nothing else like it ever has or ever will be produced. A new chapter will be shown at the Bradley each Thursday, if you saw the opening last Thursday we do not need to advise you not to miss the rest, we are sure that you will be there, but if you were not so fortunate as to have seen last Thursdays program don't miss another number. Only the regular admission is charged but a big double show is given, last Thursday a handsomely hand colored five act plotoplay, "A Matrimonial Martyr" was presented in additioh to "Patria" this week the management presents a very strong dramatic offering "The Woman's" starring Miss Florence Reed.

MRS. JENNY C. LAW HARDY LECTURES ON CUBA SUNDAY EVENING

Methodist Church Crowded—People Turned Away—Unable to Find Seats

Many Cuban Views Shown by the Lecturer

Mrs. Jenny C. Law Hardy, Tecumseh's talented lecturer, gave her lecture on Cuba Sunday evening at the M. E. church to a crowded house. Every available seat was occupied and many were forced to leave the church as they were unable to get seats. For about two hours Mrs. Hardy held the attention of her large audience and took them on a delightful trip through the beautiful Isle of Cuba. A great many views collected by Dr. and Mrs Hardy on their recent trip were shown, also many Cuban curios.

Mrs. Hardy prefaced her talk by a short history of the island from the landing of Columbus in the West Indies in 1492 down to the present days of Cuban independence.

In planning their vacation trip, Dr. and Mrs Hardy had wished to go to Australia, but owing to war conditions, danger of coming in contact with German submarines, etc., they gave it up and finally decided upon the peaceful island of Cuba, not knowing that the ever active Mars, the God of War, had preceded them and that they would get into the thick of the Cuban revolution.

Mrs. Hardy describes the Island of Cuba as a perfect gem. Their trip took them south to Florida and along the east coast over the Flagler railroad to Key West where they took passage for Havana.

The harbor and city were shown by many views, the speaker stating that Havana was one of the cleanest cities in the world and, thanks to Uncle Sam, she has not a single case of yellow fever, where formerly, under Spanish rule, it was infested with the fever. Her harbor is one of the best in the world.

Cuba is an island of from 700 to 800 miles in length by about 80 miles in width. A railroad, the Cuban Railroad, extends across its full length with many branch lines running from the main line to port towns on either coast. They traveled nearly the full length of this railroad, traveling only by daylight and stopping at the various towns and cities of interest over night.

It was their intention to travel through to Santiago de Cuba but the revolution stopped them. At Omaja in the Province of Oriente, they stopped to visit friends who own one of the largest fruit plantations in Cuba, located within a few miles of Omaja. It was while at this place that the revolution broke out and they were detained some time here. They had a lively trip to the coast, traveling most of the way on a hand car loaned them by friends.

On their trip to the coast they were stopped by the Revolutionists but on their being able to convince the men that they were only Americans stranded in a foreign country, they were allowed to proceed. They finally took passage on a small boat owned by a sugar corporation and, after a stormy passage at sea, arrived at Havana safe and sound.

Mrs. Hardy told many interesting things about Cuba, her people and customs. The school radiopticon, presided over by Supt. Reed. was presen[illegible] t-h -tu used to show the pictures. The pictures were interrupted during the lecture by the current being accidentally cut off and for half an hour the church was in darkness. An electrician was summoned who finally succeeded in getting light again and a few more pictures were shown.

It was a most interesting lecture and thoroughly enjoyed.

Obituary

WILLIAM J. WALDRON

Friday afternoon in the church that had been his religious home all his life and amid a bank of flowers lay all that was mortal of William J Waldron.

A friend to all, he was never to busy to speak to everyone young or old, ever ready to lend a helping hand to those in trouble or affliction

He was always pleasant, cheerful, never complaining through his long illness. Wm. J. Waldron was the second son of Aaron and Sarah M. Waldron who came to Michigan from New York in 1847 settling on a new farm 1½ miles west of Tecumseh. Mr Waldron passed away in April 1890, Mrs Waldron dying Dec. 14, 1913 having passed all their married life on the old farm

In a log house surrounded by the forest Wm. J. was born December 19, 1850. He passed his boyhood days after the manner of other farmer boys, burning brush, or driving an oxteam and attending district school. After leaving the district school he attended Tecumseh high school. He was a zealous member of the M. E church in which he was received into full connection Sept. 1, 1872. He contributed freely of both time and money to the church and was a member of the Grange and active in all Farmer's Club organizations.

They have spent their whole married life on the farm 2¼ miles west of town and where he departed this life March 21, 1917 and where his son Wilfred G. was born, who with his wife and mother will especially feel his loss. He is also survived by two brothers and three sisters and a circle of friends who will miss him.

Mr Waldron was a straight Republican and a firm believer in temperance

At the church his pastor the Rev Geo W. Jennings spoke words of comfort to the family and large company of friends using the text Rev 14 13 "That they may rest from their labors and their works do follow them." D. T. & I. EXPENDED $1,500,000 BETTERMENTS AND ADDITIONS.

With recent additional purchases of new rolling stock and other equipment, The Detroit, Toledo & Ironton Railroad has, in a little more than two years' time, expended approximately $1,500,000 on betterments and additions This fact is included in a recent statement of the auditing department of the road

Not only has a vast amount above the road's earnings been expended in the above time, but during the fiscal year every cent of the road's earnings was turned back into the property in the shape of new rails, rolling stock and betterments generally, calculated to meet the heavy demands for proper service in handling a greatly increased tonnage.

Appreciation of the service made possible by heavy expenditures is attested by the addition of 43 new industrial tracks and sidings during the last fiscal year, and an increase of more than one-third in the tonnage carried, over that of the previous year.

Passenger traffic on the road, while showing a substantial increase over previous years owing to additional accommodations, is still conducted at a loss of several cents on each passenger train per mile.

For the Family Medicine Chest

Green Bay, Wis., Mrs. Wm. F. Bubolz says, "I always use Foley's Honey and Tar for our children as it quickly breaks up their colds with no bad after effects, and they like to take it."

In this season of coughs, colds and croup, every family medicine chest should be supplied with a good cough medicine that can be relied upon when needed.

Such a family cough syrup is Foley's Honey and Tar Compound. This standard medicine has been on the market for years and in many sections was found in every home in the days when doctors were not so handy and when money was scarcer. Foley's Honey and Tar Compound is an excellent medicine for coughs, colds, raw or inflamed throat, hoarseness, tightness and soreness of the chest, croup and whooping cough. It is an absolutely safe remedy, containing only healing ingredients, and free from any harmful drugs.

U. S. HAS COMPLETE DATA AGAINST SPIES

Many Germans and Sympathizers to Be Interned.

Washington, Mar. 26.—Every channel of government activity is working under pressure to provide "spy insurance" for the nation in the event of war with Germany. An army of secret service men and agents of the department of justice, spreading a dragnet from the Atlantic to the Pacific and from Canada to Mexican border, has under surveillance thousands of "spy suspects" and German sympathizers. A declaration of war between the United States and Germany, is is learned, will be followed immediately by wholesale arrests and internments.

Among the thousands under surveillance are a vast number of German reservists, caught in the United States at the outbreak of the European war and unable to get back to the German army. Every reservist is listed by secret agents, after a vast amount of labor, and a war declaration would be the signal for their immediate apprehension.

CHILD MOVIE STARS HURT

Woman, Paid for Being Reformer, Makes Ugly Charges.

New York, Mar. 26.—Sensational charges of cruelty to child movie actors were made here before the Conference on Child Labor by Miss Jeanie V. Minor, assistant secretary of the New York Child Labor Committee. She said:

"Would it add to the enjoyment of an audience witnessing a 'thriller' where flames spread rapidly and the actors barely escape cremation to know that in just such a picture a girl of twelve, trying to escape, struck her head on a board which in the dense smoke she failed to see, fell back stunned and burned. Does the high salary of $50 reimburse a mother whose small son shivers naked in the icy waters of the Hudson for twenty minutes when the doctor's bill for subsequent services is $150. Should it be possible to saturate an infant's crib with oil, set fire to it and rescue the frightened baby not a minute too soon."

Game of Pig Bones.

One of the pet games played by Russian children is known as babki, or pig bones. It is similar to the American game of tenpins, but the bones of a pig's leg are used. On the vast Russian estates, where the peasants make many of the toys for the masters' children, the bones from the legs of pigs are thus utilized.

"The following organizations which are now in the federal service will not be mustered out: Thirteenth Pennsylvania, A and B companies of the First Georgia."

12,500 More Men for Navy.

President Wilson has signed an order authorizing the increase of the navy to 87,000 men from the present authorized strength of 74,500. He took the step on the recommendation of Secretary Daniels under authority granted by congress in case of a "national emergency." The present actual strength of the navy is 62,000 men. The additional men will be used to man the reserve ships.

Division of the United States into six instead of the existing four military departments was anounced by the war department. The two new departments are the north-eastern, comprising the New England states, and the southeastern, comprising the states in the old South.

General Wood Transferred.

Major General Leonard Wood is transferred from command of the department of the East to the new southeastern department, Majojr General J. Franklin Bell from the western department to the eastern department Major General Hunter Liggett from the Philippines to the western department and Brigadier General Clarence R. Edwards from the Canal Zone to the northeastern department. Major General Barry of the central department and Major General Pershing of the southern department remain in their commands.

NO ALIEN RADIOS ALLOWED

U. S. Authorities Order German Ex-Officer to Demolish His.

Chicago, Illinois, March 26.—A former officer in the German navy, living in a Chicago suburb, who had erected a powerful wireless station, was the cause of federal agents giving orders to all aliens who have radio structures to dismantle them at once.

The local military authorities and the radio inspector directed the agents to warn aliens they would be placed under arrest if they again erect their stations. For several weeks the former German officer has been under the surveillance of secret service men. His neighbors first informed them that he would allow no one to come near his house, which had two arc lights in front of it.

OFFERS TO JOIN NAVY, FIRED

Employer With Teutonic Name Discharges Girl After Patriotic Display.

WOMAN AMBUSHED AND SLAIN

Husband Sought After Murder in Burlington, Iowa.

He is said to have quarreled with his wife a short time previously.

Present, but Misplaced.

A young matron who has been attending a cooking school proudly invited her brother to enjoy a spread which she had prepared all by herself.

"Do you still have your old failing of forgetting to put salt in things?" the brother asked.

"I don't think so."

"But really, sis, there isn't any salt in these potatoes."

"There must be."

"Taste them."

The young matron tasted the potatoes, assumed an attitude of deep thought, then cheerfully exclaimed:

"Oh, I know where I put it. I put it in the apple pie."—Youngstown Telegram.

The American relief commissioners will be placed as far as possible by members of a joint neutral commission largely under the supervision of Dutch military officials. Brand Whitlock will go to Havre, France, resuming his duties as minister at the temporary Belgian capital. In a statement the government says:

"For over two years it has been the single minded purpose of this government and the commission to see that these ten millions of civilians were fed, and with this end in view the Americans concerned have submitted to restrictions forced on them by the German authorities which under ordinary conditions would never have been tolerated."

U. S. LINER ST. LOUIS IS SAFELY IN PORT

Is First Armed American Ship to Go Out.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The American liner St. Louis, first armed American ship to cross the Atlantic, has arrived safely at her destination, Secretary Daniels announces.

What route the big shop took, the details of her passage and the port of destination were, of course, kept secret at the request of the administration.

In keeping with the voluntary censorship rules promulgated Saturday, no announcement will be made of a departure of the St. Louis on her return trip.

Information as to the arrival of the steamer came to the navy department from the offices of the American line in New York. The company wished to make known the fact to relieve the anxiety of those having relatives or friends on vessels. No details of the trip were given in the company's report.

GERMANY TREATY BREAKER

U. S. Note Declines to Reconstrue Kaiser's "Scrap of Paper."

WASHINGTON, D. C. — Practically accusing Germany of regarding treaties as scraps of paper, the United States government's note regarding reconstruction of the 1799 treaty informed Germany that further, "engagements" would be useless.

The note, made public in full, added that the government is seriously considering whether or not Germany's "flagrant violations" had not abrogated the 1785-1799 and 1828 treaties.

In conclusion the note says: "It would appear that the mutuality of the undertakings (the treaties) has been destroyed by the conduct of the German authorities."

HINDENBURG LINE IS HARD PRESSED

French and British Continue to Push Forward.

FORMER CAPTURE FOLEMBRAY

Forest of St. Gobain Periled—In French Hands It Would Mean Whole New German Line Would Have to Be Abandoned — Coal Mines of Northern France at Stake.

AMSTERDAM — The battle for the "Hindenburg line" in the west is in full swing. The initiative is still with the French. The Germans are yielding with increasing reluctance but still yielding. Teuton counter-attacks are growing in number and in violence, but thus far, according to the Paris war office, they have availed nothing. On the contrary, it is asserted in the Paris communique that these counter-thrusts have cost the Germans heavy sacrifices of blood.

Battering forward against the center of the La Fere-Soissons sector of the Hindenburg line, the French pushed beyond Folembray, south of the Forest of Coucy, half way between La Fere and Soissons. They are thus within reach of the forests heights around St. Gobain. These in French hands will mean the abandonment of the Germans of La Fere and therewith of the whole front called "Hindenburg line." It will mean the abandonment of the valuable French coal district around Lens and the establishment of a new German front running north and south from Laon, east of Soissons, to the west of Lille.

Teuton Line at Crisis.

The next forty-eight hours are expected to reveal whether the Teutons propose to stand on the St. Quentin-La Fere-Laon-Soisson line, or are willing to retire further to the eastward. The time has come, military critics agreed, when—if they propose to hold their present line—they cannot allow the French to advance any further.

Wherever the Teutons endeavored to hold the French sweep by furious counter-attacks they were thrown back with heavy losses, Paris asserts.

Five German aeroplanes were shot down by the French.

Lagnicourt Captured by British.

LONDON, ENG. — The British attacked and captured the Village of Lagnicourt, according to the official report from British headquarters in France.

Furnishing food at cost has proved a successful experiment in the high school lunchroom at Pontiac. The school authorities opened the room nearly two years ago to provide noonday food for students at or as near cost price as possible.

The butchers and grocers of Grand Rapids are holding a food show this week and Deputy State Pure Food Inspector William J. Mickel each night is explaining to the women visitors the various tricky and fake weights and false measures that have been used.

The naval bill, which makes the Michigan naval militia conform to the requirements of the United States government in the public defense act of 1916, was introduced into the legislature by Representative Charles Culver of Detroit, chairman of the military committee.

Chicago land speculators, who are accused of buying up worthless tracts in Northern Michigan and selling them to prospective settlers, were attacked during the debate in the house on the Wiley bill which provides for a scientific soil survey of all unimproved agricultural lands.

For the first time in the history of Kalamazoo, a mayor who has held the office two terms will seek re-election. Mayor J. B. Balch, refeated for renomination, has announced, after petitions signed by about 2,000 voters had been tendered to him asking him to enter the race, that he would make the run.

In case the United States goes to war, General Robert Bates, of the Soo, former brigadier-general commanding the Michigan national guard, and later a major in the British army, will not only offer to raise a new regiment of Michigan troops, but he will bring from Canada a number of trained "N. C. O." drillmasters and instructors.

MANN READY TO QUIT IN SPEAKERSHIP RACE

Willing to Withdraw in Favor of Clark He Says.

WASHINGTON, D. C. — Congressman Mann, Republican leader, upon his return from Haiti said he was willing to withdraw from the race for the speakership in the interest of unity if the house could be organized on bipartisan or nonpartisan lines.

"I understand the Republicans have sufficient votes to elect me if they desire to do so," Mr. Mann said, "but I do not think this is a time for a partisan struggle. We should go forward united.

"Of course, if the Republicans insist that we make the fight, with me as their candidate, I will go along with them, but just now, before I have seen any of the Republican leaders, I want to say that I favor a bipartisan or nonpartisan organization of the house.

"I am willing to withdraw in favor of Speaker Clark if the Republicans are agreeable to this. If we are to have war we do not want a partisan struggle in the house to delay important business. Neither do we want delay if we are not going to have war."

CONGRESS CALLED APRIL 2

President Will Recite German Acts of Aggression.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The United States of America is in a state of war and all of the resources of the nation are being called upon to prosecute the hostilities to a successful conclusion. All patience and forbearance with Germany exhausted by the continued death of American men and women and the continued destruction of American ships in the war zone, President Wilson called on congress to hurry to Washington and aid him in protection of the nation's honor. By a proclamation advancing to April 2, the date for the extra session of congress oridinally called for April 16, the President brought to an end the period of suspense and anxiety throughout which the country has watched with growing impatience the results of German ruthlessness directed against American shipping.

GREAT DRIVE TO PREPARE

Three Important Steps Are Taken in One Day.

WASHINGTON — Three moves were made in the navy's drive to put America's "first line of defense" in a state of complete preparedness. They were:

First—The "hornet squadron" of small, fast patrol craft was heavily reinforced.

Second—The marine corps was ordered recruited to strength of 17,400 by executive orders.

Third—The great campaign to raise 25,000 more men for the fleet and relieve a threatened shortage of officers got under way.

Interned Germans Start for Camp.

PHILADELPHIA — Guarded by 500 extra policemen and 200 marines, interned German sailors from the cruisers Kronprinz Wilhelm and the Prince Eitel Friedrich were loaded aboard trains here and started for their internment camps at Forts Oglethorpe and McPherson, Ga.

Recognition by Four Nations.

LONDON, ENG. — The British French and Italian ambassadors in Petrograd conveyed to the minister of foreign affairs an official recognition by their governments of the Russian provisional government, says a Reuter telegram from Petrograd.

Says 76 Ships Were Sunk.

BERLIN, GER. — The sinking of twenty-five more steamships, fourteen sailing vessels and thirty-seven trawler, with an aggregate gross tonnage of 80,000, in the last few days, is announced by the admiralty.

Arthur Cook, four year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Asa Cook, was drowned in Maple river at Pellston when he coasted down the embankment and out over the river into swift current.

Fifty-five students of Kalamazoo college refused to continue the study of the German language following announcement at the institution that U-boats had sunk three American vessels.

Aid to France Finds Great Favor.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Representatives Flood, Harrison and Ragsdale, members of the house foreign affairs committee, discussed the international situation with Secretary Lansing. Espionage and censorship measures were among the legislation for the new congress that were considered.

During the conference Secretary Lansing indicated that one plan to aid the allies is to help France finance the war and that another under consideration involves the sending of a military force to the French front. The President's conclusions were not made known definitely and it was said he had not made determined what to recommend in his message to congress.

Large Bond Issue Planned.

Secretary Lansing made it very [illegible] probably [illegible] authorization [illegible] to be devoted [illegible] purchase of French bonds. What amount [illegible] whether a billion dollars, more or less, Secretary Lansing suggested was a matter within the province of Secretary McAdoo.

After a session between the executive committee of the Michigan Beet Growers' association and the heads of the various sugar beet factories of Michigan, called to settle, if possible, the growers' strike over the price for 1917 beets, it seemed apparent that there was little chance of the two factions getting together.

Williams hall, the scene of many of the most hotly contested battles ever fought at the Michigan Agricultural college and the former home of a large number of the graduates of the college will be torn down to make room for new college buildings, according to Secretary A. When you see Doan's Kidney Pills recommended in this paper you most always find the recommender a Tecumseh resident. It's the same everywhere—in 3,800 towns in the U. S. Forty thousand people publicly thank Doan's What other kidney remedy can give this proof of merit, honesty and truth? Home testimony must be true or it could not be published here. Read this Tecumseh recommendation. Then insist on having Doan's You will know what you are getting.

Mrs W. W. Shurtz, W. Kilbuck St., Tecumseh, says: "My kidneys acted irregularly and I had dull, nagging backaches. I felt dull and languid and had dizzy headaches. My feet and ankles became swollen, too. Doan's Kidney Pills relieved the backaches and put my kidneys in good order. The swellings left me and I felt better in every way."

A Good Recommendation

The business man has confidence in the boy or other employee with a bank account. He knows that any one who can save for himself can save for him, and that the money saved stands for character.

It does not mean how much you have saved, but the fact that you have shown a determination to do a certain thing; that a savings bank book is in itself a good recommendation.

You can have this kind of a recommendation by coming to the Lilley State Bank and opening an account. One dollar will do to start and you can add more whenever you have it.

In this season of coughs, colds and croup, every family medicine chest should be supplied with a good cough medicine that can be relied upon when needed.

Such a family cough syrup is Foley's Honey and Tar Compound. This standard medicine has been on the market for years and in many sections was found in every home in the days when doctors were not so handy and when money was scarcer.

High School Notes

Spring Vacation This Week

All of the Tecumseh schools are closed this week for the usual spring vacation. Oh, isn't it joyful!

Miss Armstrong was kept at home last week by "pink eye" so none of her classes met. We who have had this aggrevating disease can readily sympathize with her in her distress.

Evidently Mr. Brisbin does not have a very good opinion of "Heinies," if he was telling the candid truth in his English class.

A beautiful young lady came to Chemistry class Tuesday, but, upon removing his coat we were disappointed to find that it was "Cuffy."

Mr. Hayden in English X class, attempting to state an originla syllogism, turned to a young lady and said "All deer can run,....I can run.... Therefore, I am a deer (Dear)."

An Appropriate Example

In the study of Keats' "Ode on a Grecian Urn," Mr. Lowry was arguing that people do not remain the same, and not get what they want.

"Why," said Harold, "take this example, 'Fond lovers will never get that kiss' ....I would rather never try than not get it."

Pretty slushy school, ain't it?

Miss Armstrong and Miss G. Miller made their weekly departure from the Vendoma midst cheers and water from a leaky eavestrough. Miss M. Miller left on a later train.

What has happened to "Shorty?" Is it early Spring fever or Patriotism that causes our brilliant Morris to refuse to recite German, preferring instead to study Cicero or be critic?

The English XII class are very enthusiastic over the letters they have received from Burke, Idaho.

Fred. in Chemistry class: "First they pour the glass onto a table and then go over it with a hot roll" (breakfast?).

From remarks in English class we are led to believe that "Cuffy" does not find night melancholy but, in fact, rather enjoyable.

In German II "Shorty" has a new position as short-stop between Brown and Smith.

The Chemistry class are enjoying a ten-weeks exam.

Miss Boyd and Mr. Hayden, who were discussing a subject in loud whispers, were interrupted by Miss Armstrong's entreaty, "Please defer that conversation till a later (date.)"

Leslie Johnson tells us to prepare arsenic by "roosting" it in the fire. He shan't prepare ours, shall he?

Miss McConnell has discovered that morning glories bloom at night. At least that's what she told her Botany class.

The Botany class had a good laugh over this question, "Why is a wall flower sweetest at night?"

Harold Blesing was taking his afternoon snooze the other day when Mr. Reed asked him, "When did the farmers first emigrate to the West?"

Our Harold awakes, rubbing his eyes, "Since when?"

Mr. Reed, "Since you woke up."

Miss Voag, a former teacher here, and Miss Armstrong have arranged for an exchange of letters between the two English classes, and they are proving interesting as well as instructive to all of us.

As we find that "David Copperfield" cannot be secured for the date we wish, Mr. Mark has written to see if we can get "Romeo and Juliet," a moving picture, very educational as well as extremely thrilling. Whatever show we do get will be put on under the auspices of the T. H. S. Athletic Association.

FIFTY MORE SHIPS SUNK BY U-BOATS

Berlin Reports Auxiliary Cruiser Among Victims.

Berlin, April 2.—In addition to the submarine successes in March already published, says an official statement by the German admiralty, thirty-four steamers, two sailing vessels and fourteen fishing craft, aggregating 90,000 gross tons, were sunk by German submarines. Of the total, twenty-four were British vessels, one of which was an auxiliary cruiser, displacing at least 8,000 tons.

Fourteen of the vessels sunk were Norwegian and two were Dutch.

The names of seven ships sunk could not be ascertained. They were a British auxiliary cruiser of at least 8,000 tons, an armed steamer of about 2,500 tons sunk after an artillery duel; an army transport of about 4,000 tons, a loaded steamer of about 4,000 tons, two steamers of 2,000 tons each, one flying the Dutch flag, and a loaded steamer of about 1,500 tons.

"Pinsetters" Shoot Students.

Urbana, Ill., April 2.—Because they urged negro pinsetters in a bowling alley to "pep up," Miner Chapin of Twin Lakes, Colo., and Robert Perry of Urbana, University of Illinois students, were attacked by the pinsetters. Chapin was shot through the thigh and Perry's face was slashed with a razor.

"SUBMARINE KISSER" IN GOODSPEED TANGLE

Witness Says Millionaire's Wife Called Pastor "Daarle".

GRAND RAPIDS, April 2.

Mrs. John W. Goodspeed, named with the Rev. Francis R. Godolphin, of Chicago, as the originator of the "submarine kiss," was accused of other things by a witness who testified in the trial of Mrs. Goodspeed's suit for divorce from her millionaire husband.

Miss Eva Walter, who swore that the pastor and Mrs. Goodspeed practiced underwater kissing while bathing, testified that Mrs. Goodspeed called the Episcopal rector "dearest Francis" over the phone and asked him if he loved her as much as she loved him. The millionaire's wife was also accused of having given Rev. Godolphin a diamond ring.

Miss Walter further testified that Mrs. Goodspeed carried on love affairs with a musician, a Chinese chop suey restaurant owner, a traffic cop, a Muskegon capitalist and a New York theatrical producer, whose names were not given.

Pastor's Daughter Weds.

ELK RAPIDS, April 2.

Miss Apal Rayle, daughter of Rev. J. P. Rayle, pastor of the M. E. church of Elk Rapids, and Orville Moody, recently of Indiana, were married at the M. E. parsonage.

A new world's record for all breeds for butterfat production in the seven day division was established by the purebred Holstein Friesian cow, Segis Fayne Johanna 114658, in a test ending January 8, 1917. This remarkable cow produced 50.68 pounds of butter in seven consecutive days, and the official test was conducted by supervisors from the New York State Agricultural College, Ithaca, N. Y.

Segis Fayne Johanna, by her wonderful achievement, is now the most talked of cow in the world, and her sensational record marks a signal triumph in the forward march of the Holstein-Friesian breed.

She was bred by A. A. Cartelyou, of Somerville, N. J., and her present owner is Oliver Cabana, Jr., proprietor of Pine Grove Farms, Elma Center, N. Y., at which noted establishment four other world's record holders have been developed during the past six months.

The new world's record holder freshened at the age of 8 years, 2 months and seventeen days. She is four-fifths white weighs about 1450 pounds. [illegible] sired by King Fayne Segis 16761. [illegible] dam is Vikina Johanna 64385, a daughter of Johanna Rue 3d's Lad [illegible] Viatna Clothilde.

The test was made under perfect conditions, absolute quiet, systematic feeding and a roomy stall constructed of clean white enameled walls.

Segis Fayne Johanna's seven day production of over 50 pounds of butter surpasses that of Hester Aaltje Korndyke, the previous world's record holder, by 3.91 pounds. In their present warranted state of elation, enthusiastic Holstein Friesian breeders over the dairy world at large now marvel at the accomplishment of what was almost impossible and ask, "Where will it end?"

President Wilson has asked Congress to declare war on Germany and, if Congress acts upon his judgment, it will be only a few days before we will be actively engaged in the greatest war in history.

That it would come to us few have doubted. Congress will act and act promptly, giving to the President the authority he asks.

In his message he says that the recent course pursued by the Imperial Government of Germany has been in fact nothing less than war against the government and the people of this country. He advises the extension to the countries now at war with Germany liberal credits and to co-operate with them in bringing the war to an end.

"There is no other way, we will not choose the path of submission. Property can be paid for but lives of peaceful and innocent people cannot be. Armed neutrality is now worse than ineffectual. We must engage actively in putting down Germany and bring the war to an end. We have no quarrel with the German people. It was not their impulse that their government acted in entering the war."

He advises the raising of an army of 500,000 men, chosen upon the principle of universal liability to service and also the authorizaton of subsequent additional troops as soon as they may be needed and can be handled in training.

Congress and the people of the country will back up the President. These are grave things that he is asking Congress to do and they mean everything to the people of this nation, but, if the call comes, he will find the nation ready.

OPENING DAY

Aldrich & Son Have a Fine Opening in Their New Store Saturday

Big Crowd Present Through the Day

The new store of Aldrich & Son presented a fine appearance Saturday morning and the wonder was how they had been able to bring order out of chaos in so short a time. But everything was in place and a full corp of clerks were in readiness to serve the customers who came in crowds all day long.

The large display window was full of spring dainties which were quite inviting to all observers.

The store lately occupied by Heesen & Heesen had been repainted and decorated and made ready for this occasion. The arrangement of the store is quite noticeable. Across the center is a new silent salesman with marble base and plate glass sides and top. Back of this is a square of counter room for the doing up of packages. Shelving and bins on the west side for canned and bulk goods and on the east side shelves of bottled goods made a fine display where one could see and know what there was in stock. Tables for fruit occupied the center of the store in front.

The lighting was fine and the store just shone throughut with its coat of white enamel.

A partition across the rear makes a large stock room. This week they are installing a freight elevator.

It is estimated that between 700 and 800 visited the store during the day and it was far the biggest day they ever had, and if this opening day is any proof, we feel sure that the coming year will be a profitable one for Aldrich & Son. We congratulate the firm on their successful opening day which was certainly all that could be desired.

"THE MYSTERY OF THE RAISIN"

By William B. Hartzog

CHAPTER V.

A Letter from the East

The beautiful autumn weather had given place to the chill of winter. On the fifteenth of December a blinding snow storm swept over Southern Michigan. The wind howled through the dense forests and piled the snow in great drifts. The storm continued for three days and was especially severe at Monroe, where the wind swept in, unobstructed from Lake Erie. About all the inhabitants could do was to keep their fires burning briskly in their huge fire places.

Mrs. Grove sat knitting at one end of the fireplace. Joe sat in front playing with his two little boys, Sherman and Findlay. Willard sat at the other end of the fireplace with his back turned to the fire. He was reading an old book.

"Willard, what are you reading?" inquired Mrs. Grove.

"The Life of George Washington. I borrowed it of Captain James Knaggs. It tells here about General Washington being encamped at Findlay Lake, New York, with a company of soldiers during the French and Indian War."

"That is where I came from," said Joe. "What does it say? Read it aloud, Willard."

He read the paragraph describing the march of General Washington through that country.

"I've been right there where the General camped. My father came in there in an early day. He and another man named Luke Barnes took up land from the government. They lived there on adjoining farms, about a mile and a half northwest of the lake. I've roamed all over that country. I used to go over to Sherman lots of times. My uncle had a farm near there. I us'to hear them tell of General Washington marching through that country."

"Of course that was before the white man occupied that country," said Willard.

"I named those boys Sherman and Findlay after them towns," said Joe.

"I heard you tell Mr. Evans that you had a brother living there."

"Yes, Nathan lives there. He is older than I am. I have not seen him since I left there fifteen years ago. I would like to visit that country again. There is one man that I would like to see. He us'to be a chum of mine. His name was Lemuel Barnes. He was Luke Barnes' son. He was a fine young feller. He was a little older than I."

Mrs. Grove noticed Willard's countenance change and tears trickle down his cheeks. Willard turned a leaf down in the book, arose and walked to the window.

"Joe, I think we ought to write to Nathan. We have not heard from him for a long time," said Mrs. Grove.

"Willard, you get your quill and paper and I will tell you what to write, and we will do it now," said Joe.

Joe dictated the following letter:

Monroe, Michigan, Dec. 17, 1823.

Dear Brother Nathan:

It has been a long time since we have heard from each other, so I thought I had better write. We live at Monroe, Michigan, on the bank of the Raisin River. It is not much of a town. Most of the people who live here are French. I have been a trader and a scout for the government for several years. I trade with the Indians and ship my stuff to Buffalo. Our two boys, Sherman and Findlay, are four and six years old. I have a young man with me by the name of Willard Briggs. He came here from the East about the first of September. He is quite a help to me. He has a better education than I have.

The weather is bad now. The snow is about eighteen inches deep. It is the biggest snow I ever saw in this country.

I wish you could come out and visit us this spring. I suppose Clara is a young lady now. Is she married yet? Tell her if she is not I've got a fine young feller here that I could recommend. Give my best to Lemuel Barnes. I suppose his boy Luke is a young man now.

Hoping to hear from you soon, I am
As ever your brother,
Joe Grove.

After the letter was addressed and sealed, the conversation continued.

"Willard, I notice your little finger is off at the joint on your left hand. What happened to you?" inquired Joe.

"When I was a small boy a dog bit me and the doctor had to amputate my finger at the joint."

"Amputate! Say, that's a pretty big word for a backwoodsman to swallow. I suppose hat means 'to cut it off?'"

"Yes, that is what it means."

The next morning Willard concluded he would try spearing fish. He took a small tent, set it up on the ice, cut a hole and began operation. While he was fishing that day Mrs. Grove accidentally picked up one of Willard's garments and a note book fell out. She picked it up and opened it, but being unable to read, she could make nothing out of it.

"Joe come here. Here is a little book that dropped out of Willard's pocket. I am curious to know what it contains. He never says a word about where he came from and I thought this might give us a little light on the mystery."

Joe looked over the writing.

The first name he noticed was sentence, "Lemuel and Nancy Barnes Findlay Lake, N. Y."

"Sold to Nathan Grove two cows $40.00."

"Committee to raise funds for the minister's salary. Clara Grove, Luke Barnes, Sarah Smith and Henry Whitmore."

"Laura, there is some mystery about that young fellow. I bet five dollars he is from Findlay Lake. Just keep quiet and we will dig it up. Maybe Brother Nathan will tell us something."

It took a long time to get mail back and forth from the east, especially in the winter time. Late in February, 1824, Joe Grove received a letter from his brother Nathan.

Willard was cutting wood some distance away in the forest.

"Laura, here is a letter from brother Nathan. I will read it to you.

Findlay Lake, N. Y.
January 19, 1824

Dear Brother Joe:

We were pleased to hear from you and find that you are doing well in the wilds of Michigan.

We are all well except Clara. She seems to be worrying about something. The doctor thinks we will have to send her away from here in the spring. I have about concluded that Mother, Clara and I will visit you when the vessels can run in the lake. Maybe it will improve her health.

You inquire about Lemuel Barnes. Poor Lemuel was killed three years ago by falling timbers at a barn raising. His wife Nancy died about a year ago. They had one fine son Luke Barnes. He became discouraged and did a foolish thing. He sold off everything and mysteriously disappeared. His uncle John Barnes over at Sherman, is renting his farm. It's the old Barnes farm just north of us. He is very anxious to get a clue as to Luke's whereabouts. He is twenty years old, has black hair, brown eyes, weighs about one hundred and forty pounds. His little finger on his left hand is off at the joint. If you should happen to see such a young man in your part of the country, let us know. We are all interested in Luke's welfare.

Hoping this finds you and your family well, I am,
Your brother, Nathan Grove."

"Willard is Luke Barnes that is all there is to it," said Joe. "We won't say a word about this letter and wait unil Brother Nathan and his family comes. We will take him by surprise," said Joe.

MANAGER ED MARK IMPROVES HIS EQUIPMENT

Manager Ed Mark of the Bradley opera house believes in being up-to-date and keeping his theater second to none. A short time ago he added a new Powers moving picture machine of the latest type and enlarged his booth so that he would be able to operate two machines. Yesterday he installed what is known as a Velvet Gold Fiber Screen, the latest that money can buy, and such as is now being used in the large city theaters. The New Madison in Detroit has installed one of the same make.

Mr. Mark states that the new screen brings out the pictures much clearer than the old, gives backing to them and is a big improvement in every respect. This screen was installed at an expense to Mr. Mark of $180.00.

A Good Recommendation

The business man has confidence in the boy or other employee with a bank account. He knows that any one who can save for himself can save for him, and that the money saved stands for character.

It does not mean how much you have saved, but the fact that you have shown a determination to do a certain thing; that a savings bank book is in itself a good recommendation.

U. S. WITHDRAWS ITS ENVOY FROM AUSTRIA

Refusal to Recognize Tarnowski Is Cause.

Washington, April 2.—It is not expected in official circles that Austria-Hungary will regard the action of the United States against her ally as reason for the immediate withdrawal of her embassy and the dismissal of the American embassy and the acceptance of a state of war with her.

Ambassador Penfield has left Vienna, the American embassy being confided to the charge of the first secretary.

It is not true that Mr. Penfield has been called for the purpose of advising Secretary Lansing. He was withdrawn because the American government is in the position of having an ambassador at the Austrian capital while at the same time refusing to receive the Austro-Hungarian official, Count Tarnowski, of an equal rank, at Washington.

Taken from Declaration Toward Mexico in 1846.

Washington, April 2.—Democratic members of the foreign affairs committee following a suggestion by Secretary of State Lansing that the President was "prepared to act" have gone ahead and drafted a resolution declaring a state of war with Germany. The resolution is a part of a phrase of the Mexican war resolution of 1846. It reads:

"Whereas, by the act of imperial government of Germany of March 16, 1917, and of several acts subsequent thereto a state of war exists between that government and the government of the United States therefore,

"Be it enacted by the house of representatives of the United States of America in congress assembled, the senate concurring, that for the purpose of enabling the government of the United States to prosecute said war to a speedy and successful termination, the President be and he is hereby authorized to employ the militia and the naval and military forces of the United States."

STATE OF WAR, SAYS PRESIDENT

German Challenge Is Accepted.

HUMANITY WARRED ON

Hostilities Thrust Upon Us Says Wilson.

AID TO ALLIES IS URGED

President, In Epoch Making Message to Congress, Recites Acts of Imperial Government—Armed Neutrality Worse Than Submission—Urges Lawmakers to Declare that Germany Is at War With U. S.—Asks Men and Money—In Preparing, U. S. Aid to Allies Must Not Be Lessened.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The full text of President Woodrow Wilson's message to the extra session of congress follows:

"Gentlemen of the congress: I have called the congress into extraordinary session because there are serious, very serious, choices of policy to be made, which it was neither right, nor constitutionally permissible, that I should assume the responsibility of making.

"On the third of February last I officially laid before you the extraordinary announcement of the imperial German government that on and after the first day of February it was its purpose to put aside all restraints of law or of humanity and use its submarines to sink every vessel that sought to approach either the ports of Great Britain or Ireland or the western coasts of Europe or any of the ports controlled by the enemies of Germany within the Mediterranean.

"That had seemed to be the object of the German submarine warfare earlier in the war, but since April of last year the imperial German government had somewhat restrained the commanders of its under-sea craft in conformity with its promise, then given to us, that passenger boats should not be sunk and that due warning would be given to all other vessels which its submarines might seek to destroy, when no resistance was offered or escape attempted, and care taken that their crews were given at least a fair chance to save their lives in their open boats.

Ships Sunk Without Mercy.

"The precautions taken were meager and haphazard enough as was proved in distressing instance after instance in the progress of the cruel and unmanly business, but a certain degree of restraint was observed.

"The new policy has swept every restriction aside. Vessels of every kind whatever their flag, their character, their cargo, their destination, their errand, have been ruthlessly sent to the bottom without warning and without thought of help or mercy for those on board, the vessels of friendly neutrals along with those of belligerents, even hospital ships and ships carrying relief to the sorely bereaved and stricken people of Belgium.

"The latter though provided with safe conduct through the prescribed areas by the German government itself and were distinguished by unmistakable marks of identity, have been sunk with the same reckless lack of compassion or of principle.

"I was for a little while unable to believe that such things would in fact be done by any government that had hitherto subscribed to the humane practices of civilized nations. International law had its origin in the attempt to set up some law which would be respected and observed upon the seas, where no nation had right of dominion and where lay the free highways of the world.

"By painful stage after stage has law been built up, with meager enough results, indeed, after all was accomplished that could be accomplished, but always with a clear view, at least, of what the heart and conscience of mankind demanded.

Warfare Against Mankind.

"This minimum of right the German government has swept aside under the plea of retaliation and necessity and because it had no weapons which it could use at sea except those which it is impossible to employ as it is employing them without throwing to the winds all scruples of humanity or of respect for the understandings that were supposed to underlie the intercourse of the world.

"I am not now thinking of the loss of property involved, immense and serious as that is, but only of the wanton and wholesale destruction of the lives of noncombatants, men, women and children, engaged in pursuits which have always, even in the darkest periods of modern history, been deemed innocent and legitimate. Property can be paid for; the lives of the peaceful and innocent cannot be. The present German submarine warfare against commerce is a warfare against mankind.

"It is a war against all nations. American ships have been sunk, American lives taken, in ways which it has stirred us very deeply to learn of, but the ships and peoples of other neutral and friendly nations have been sunk and overwhelmed in the waters in the same way. There has been no discrimination.

"The challenge is to all mankind. Each nation must decide for itself how it will meet it.

"The choice we make for ourselves must be made with a moderation of counsel and a temperance of judgment befitting our character and our motives as a nation. We must put excited feeling away.

"Our motive will not be revenge or the victorious assertion of the physical might of the nation, but only the vindication of right, of human right of which we are only a single champion.

NATION'S LEADER

President Wilson Asks State of War Declaration.

"When I addressed the congress on the 26th of February last I thought that it would suffice to assert our neutral rights with arms, our right to use the seas against unlawful interference, our right to keep our people safe against unlawful violence.

Armed Neutrality Impracticable.

"But armed neutrality, it now appears, is impracticable. Because submarines are in effect outlaws when used as the German submarines have been used against merchant shipping, it is impossible to defend ships against their attacks, as the law of nations has assumed that merchantmen would defend themselves against privateers or cruisers, visible craft giving chase upon the open sea.

"It is common prudence in such circumstances, grim necessity indeed, to endeavor to destroy them before they have shown their own intentions. They must be dealt with upon sight, if dealt with at all.

"The German government denies the right of neutrals to use arms at all within the area of the sea which it has prescribed, even in the defense of rights which no modern publicist has ever before questioned their right to defend. The intimation is conveyed that the armed guards which we have placed on our merchant ships will be treated as beyond the pale of law and subject to be dealt with as pirates would be.

"Armed neutrality is ineffectual enough at best: in such circumstances and in the face of such pretensions it is worse than ineffectual; it is likely only to produce what it was meant to prevent; it is practically certain to draw us into the war without either the rights or the effeciveness of belligerents.

"There is one choice we cannot make, we are incapable of making: "We will not chose the path of submission and suffer the most sacred rights of our nation and our people to be ignored or violated.

"The wrongs against which we now array ourselves are not common wrongs: they cut to the very roots of human life.

"Accept War Thrust Upon Us."

"With a profound sense of the solemn and even tragical character of the step I am taking, and of the grave responsibility which it involves, but in unhesitating obedience to what I deem my constitutional duty, I advise that the congress declare the recent course of the imperial German government to be in fact nothing less than war against the government and people of the United States; that it formally accept the status of belligerent, which has thus been thrust upon it, and that it take immediate steps not only to put the country in a more thorough state of defense, but also to exert all its power and employ all of its resources to bring the government of Germany to terms and end the war.

"What this will involve is clear. It will involve the utmost practicable cooperation in counsel and action with the governments now at war with Germany, and as incident to that, the extension of those governments of the most liberal financial credits, in order that our resources may so far as possible be added to theirs.

"It will involve the organization and mobilization of all the material resources of the country to supply the materials of war and serve the incidental needs of the nation in the most abundant and yet the most economical and efficient way possible.

"It will involve the immediate full equipment of the navy in all respects, but praqticularly in supplying it with the best means of dealing with the enemy's submarines.

"It will involve the immediate addition to the armed forces of the United States already provided for by law in case of war at least 500,000 men, who should, in my opinion, be chosen upon the principle of universal liability to service, and also the authorization of subsequent additional increments of equal force as soon as they may be needed and can be handled in training.

"It will involve also, of course, the granting of adequate credits to the government, sustained, I hope, so far as they can equitably be sustained by the present generation, by well conceived taxation.

"I say sustained so far as may be equitable by taxation because it seems to me that it would be most unwise to base the credits which will now be necessary entirely on money borrowed. It is our duty, I most respectfully urge, to protect our people so far as we may against the very serious hardships and evils which would be likely to arise out of the inflation which would be produced by vast loans.

Supply Allies as Much as Possible.

"In carrying out the measures by which these things are to be accomplished, we should keep constantly in mind the wisdom of interfering as little as possible in our own preparation and in the equipment of our own military forces with the duty—for it will be a very practical duty—of supplying the nations already at war with Germany with the materials which they can obtain only from us or by our assistance.

"They are in the field and we should help them in every way to be effective there.

"I shall take the liberty of suggesting, through the several executive departments of the government, for the consideration of your committee, measures for the accomplishment of the several objects I have mentioned.

"I hope that it will be your pleasure to deal with them as having been framed after very careful thought by the branch of the government upon which the responsibility of conducting the war and safeguarding the nation will most directly fall."

A GENERAL SURVEY OF THE WAR.

Thursday, Mar. 29.—The British army in Palestine defeated a Turkish army of 20,000 men, captured 900 men, including a general. The entire divisional staff of the Fifty-third Turkish division in Palestine was captured. British troops have advanced for a distance of fifteen miles along the southern Palestine coast of the Mediterranean.

The village of Neuville Bourjanval was captured by the British after a short fight, in which the Germans lost heavily. A few prisoners were taken.

British raiding parties entered the lines during the night east of Arras and in the neighborhood of Neuville, St. Vaast and Neuve Chappelle.

Friday, Mar. 30.—British troops have captured the village of Ruyaulcourt, about eight miles east of Bapaume: Sorel-Le-Grand and Fins, between Bertincourt and Roisel, on the front in France.

A German attack upon British positions south of Neuville-Bourjenval, was driven off with loss.

German lines east of Neuville St. Vaast were entered by the British troops, who inflicted casualties and took prisoners.

Differences of opinion as to whether the U-boat campaign is accomplishing the starvation of England are revealed in Berlin by statements on the subject, wide apart by Admiral von Capelle and Captain Persius, both competent critics.

Saturday, Mar. 31.—March went out in America as a raging lion, the dove and lamb having been chased away by enormous war meetings in Chicago and other cities of the country.

Eighteen U. S. senators declared for war while only three opposed; many refused to give views until Wilson has spoken.

Two Americans killed and eighteen are missing on unwarned British craft sunk by German submarine.

Senator Knox of Pennsylvania publicly pledged his support to President Wilson regardless of what step he takes toward war.

British forces in France captured eight more towns on the Somme front. Raids on German trenches near Ypres resulted successfully. Paris reports advances by the French.

British forces in Mesopatamia advancing to the north of Bagdad occupied the town of Kalaat Felujah and the areas of Deltawah and Sindiyah and Sheraban.

Sunday, April, 1.—Heavy fighting west of St. Quentin resulted in the capture by the British of the village of Savy. Later the British troops attacked Savy wood, about a mile from the village and only three miles from St. Quentin, and occupied that position. Captures of Vendelles, lying farther north, and Epehy and Peiziere, to the south of Heudicourt were announced.

In their operation to the southwest of Laon the French troops have advanced, capturing several German trench systems and reaching the outskirts of Vauxaillon and Laffaux.

Efforts made by Turkish troops to envelop a British force near Deltawah, thirty-five miles north of Bagdad, has failed and the Turks in that region now are in full retreat.

ARMED U. S. STEAMER AZTEC IS TORPEDOED

WASHINGTON, D. C.—French admiralty dispatches to the French embassy here announcing the sinking without warning of the first armed American merchantman, the freighter Aztec, by a German submarine, said apparently Lieutenant Fuller Graham and twelve American bluejackets constituting the armed guard of the vessel, had been saved, but that eleven of the crew were reported missing.

Divers Sink 50 More Ships.

BERLIN — In addition to the submarine successes in March already published, says an official statement by the German admiralty, thirty-four steamers, two sailing vessels and fourteen fishing craft, aggregating 90,000 gross tons, were sunk by German submersibles. Of the total, twenty-four were British vessels, one of which was an auxiliary cruiser, displacing at least 8,000 tons.

CONGRESS GETS DOWN TO ACTION

Fitzgerald Offers Huge Preparedness Measure.

WAR RESOLUTION IS DRAWN

Champ Clark and Entire Democratic List of Officers Re-elected in House. Measure Committing Country to Aggressive Hostilities With Kaiser Is Made Strong.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Within ten minutes after President Wilson had finished his address to congress, Chairman John Fitzgerald of the appropriations committee introduced a resolution which immediately was passed calculated to give millions of dollars to the administraton for war purposes. His resolution provides that within the next ten days the house shall, under the suspension of rules, take action on four great revenue bills—the sundry civil, general deficiency, army appropriation and military academy appropriation—all of which failed of passage in the Sixty-fourth congress.

Flat War Resolution.

The United States will accept Germany's "state of war" and will meet force with force if the amended resolution accepted by Chairman Flood of the house foreign affairs committeen prevails. The resolution is being considered by the house committee. This resolution in part followed the lines of the original resolution introduced by Mr. Flood earlier in the day but was amended to make stronger the indictment of German methods.

Clark Wins, 217 to 205.

WASHINGTON — The war congress was organized by the Democratic party and the way was cleared for immediate legislative action to support President Wilson in hostilities with Germany. The election of Speaker Champ Clark and other house officers, the adoption of Democratic house rules and the election of the house committees kept the house busy from noon well into the evening.

The defeat of Republican Leader James R. Mann for speaker was accomplished by the defection of three Republicans from his standard, and the division of the independents to give the house control to the administration. The vote for Clark was 217; Mann, 205; Representative Lenroot of Wisconsin, 2; Representative Gillette of Massachusetts, two.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the disease portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rubbing sound or imperfect hearing and, when it is entirely closed. Deafness is the result, and unless the inflamation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any ease of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

FLING OUT THE FLAG

At this time when the whole nation is pulsing with the notes of war, it becomes every loyal citizen to show his colors, to let Old Glory float upon the breeze as a token that the United States of America is loyal to the flag, and to the principles that it represents, and that our motto, "E Pluribus Unum" still holds good.

Several of our stores are making window displays among which is John Nyland who has the pictures of our War Presidents, some Spanish American rifles and a cartridge belt. The motto, "Old Glory still floats" was taken from the headlines of the Free Press published in 1898 at the time of the breaking out of Spanish American war. By an electrical device, Old Glory floats gracefully on the breeze.

In Gaston's window is a stand of arms and accoutrements with flags of various sorts on display.

The ladies of St. Peters Guild draped the window of the old post office building with flags Thursday for their sale, which presented a very pleasing appearance. We are all more or less patriotic, but we need some one to push us into the pool when the waters are moving. However when it comes to actual proof, each one is ready to respond with a hearty aye and a willing heart to the call of duty.

Why doesn't someone hand "Pompodour" Bob LaFollette his passports?

The politicians who want river and harbor money have kindly refrained from pressing their demands for a few days until Congress discusses WAR.

When they get all rigged up with short skirts, white stockings and black boots, many of our modest and shrinking girl friends come down town with calm confidence that no one is going to notice them.

The country is at high tension because of the nearness of war. The Senate has already passed the resolution asked by the President declaring the existence of a state of war between the United States and Germany and the House is debating the measure which is sure to pass by a large majority vote.

It is a great responsibility that the Government is assuming and it is a grave step. That there is good reason for making the step but few deny. The officials of this Government have much data and many facts relating to our strained relations with Germany that they probably have not made public and they should be in far better position to judge than we back at home. So we accept their judgment believing that it is our duty to enter this great war to uphold our rights.

We must all take this matter seriously and make up our minds that whatever our call to duty shall be we must do it loyally as true red-blooded Americans should. It may be to serve under arms for a large army and a larger navy will be an absolute necessity, and if this call should come to us, we must be prepared to answer it, no matter what the sacrifice shall be. No true American can say "It will not or cannot mean me, let the other fellow go." We must make a personal matter of it and plan to make the sacrifice for the Government which has shielded and protected us all of these years.

No one can tell how long the war will last. It may end before Uncle Sam can get ready, for it will take some months to get the army in shape for service and the immense war making machinery in running condition for action. We all hope against hope that conditions in Germany will develop to such a stage we shall be drawn far into it. that peace will be declared before However the die has been cast. We must push forward with every ounce of energy that we possess to bring the war to a successful ending. This great nation is awake and her people are ready to answer the call whatever it may be.

Patriotism is running high. Thousands have offered their services to the Government and are ready to answer the call. The Nation will strike and strike hard.

CLASS REMEMBERS TEACHERS BIRTHDAY

The regular meeting of Miss Kyle's class was held Tuesday evening with Mrs. Sanford Cutting. After the business session came a program of Easter songs, two splendid Easter readings by Mrs. Sam Boyce and Miss Kyle, an instrumental duet by Mrs Hobart Mitchell and Mrs. James Cupples and at roll call each responded with an Easter thought from the beautiful cards which Miss Kyle gave each member.

Somehow the fact had reached several that Tuesday was Miss Kyle's birthday so they had a little spread in her honor and she was given a big birthday cake which was covered with marshmallow flowers and pink candles, the work of two of her devoted pupils, Mrs. Willis Smith and Mrs. Lynn Butrick. We counted those candles (woman's curiosity, again!) and found 16. We judge the ladies must have found out the correct age but it was some surprise.

It was the best attended of any of the regular meetings so far and every one had a pleasant evening and enjoyed the surprise as well as Miss Kyle.

OUR REV. REX GETS A WRITE-UP IN A DETROIT PAPER

The following write-up in Sunday's Detroit News-Tribune shows our Friend Rex is getting some fame around the state:

The pastor of the Tecumseh Presbyterian church, Rev. W A. Rex, say members of his flock, has proven his ability as an executive in the repairing of the church. The congregation lacked the money necessary to make extensive alterations and Mr Rex called for volunteer from the pulpit. Seventy-five men responded and they were organized by the pastor into gangs of about a dozen, each gang being assigned to work on the church one evening a week. Mr. Rex was on hand all six nights, and not only directed, but also helped in the building. A similar organization was perfected among the women, who were on hand to cook meals for the workers. The completed church will be reopened about the first week in May.

LYCEUM COURSE 1917-18

By the Men's Clas of the Presbyterian Church

The Men's Class of the Presbyterian church has just contracted for an entertainment and lecture course for next season. There will be seven numbers and they will sell for the same popular price as last year, $1.00 for the course.

NEEDFUL KNOWLEDGE

Tecumseh People Should Learn to Detect the Approach of Kidney Disease.

The symptoms of kidney trouble are many. Disordered kidneys often excete a thick, cloudy, offensive urine, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding. The back may ache, headaches and dizzy spells may occur and the victim is often weighted down by a feeling of langour and fatigue. Neglect these warnings and there is danger. Delay often proves fatal.

You can use no better endorsed kidney remedy than Doan's Kidney Pills. Here's Tecumseh proof of their merit.

Dell Hubbard, E. Chicago St., Tecumseh, says: "Kidney complaint had troubled me for a long time. My back ached and I was sore and lame. I could do no stooping or lifting work and my kidneys acted irregularly. A friend advised me to use Doan's Kidney Pills and I bought some at Wright & Son's drug store. They soon strengthened my back and rid me of all signs of kidney complaint."

Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Hubbard had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.

FULL CITIZENSHIP IS DENIED TO GERMANS

Fourteen In Detroit Fail to Obtain Final Papers.

DETROIT, April 9.

Detroit residents of German nationality will be unable to take out final United States naturalization papers as the result of a ruling by the bureau of naturalization at Washington, received by County Clerk Milton Oakman. Final papers were refused to fourteen Germans in the county clerk's office since war was declared by the United States.

"It is the view of the bureau of naturalization," reads the instruction in part, "that said section 2171 or revised statutes prohibits the actual naturalization of an alien enemy during the period of war with the country of his birth, but that it does not prevent the filing of a declaration of intention or petition for naturalization of such a person."

There has never been a uniformity of ruling in the courts upon the question. Federal Judge Mayer of New York granted final papers Friday to Jonas Meyer with the understanding that the action would be contested by the government.

Old flaws and the irregularities of record keeping in the pioneer days are unfolded in many of the lawsuits thus brought up. Mortgages which have been paid but not discharged are the chief causes of trouble. The title to a large share of Oakland real estate has thus been cleared up within the last two or three years.

ins of Spies" Is Arrested in New ork—Many Are Taken into Custody in Chicago—Huge Conspiracy o Poison Meat Supply at Chicago ards.

Chicago, April 9.—An invitation to True Americans to participate in new war game, "Hunting the y," was issued by United States ttorney Charles F. Clyne. He assert the authorities needed all the aid itizens could give them in apprehending traitorous residents.

"Among the millions of Teutonic escent within our borders are a large umber of persons whose loyalty to e fatherland is greater than their yalty to the United States," said r. Clyne. "Most of them will content themselves with condemning their country of adoption for entering the war. These have been warned not to go too far in their utterances; if they do they probably will be interned for the period of the war.

May Do Great Damage.

"Then there are a considerable number of persons whose weak minds can be expected to give way under the stress of great public excitement.

"This class is extremely dangerous. Working alone and without consulting anyone such a person could cause tremendous damage to certain properties by the use of explosives.

"It has been said there are several thousand citizens of the central empires now in the United States who are suspected of being part of an espionage system. They are desperate men, who face death to carry on their work.

"They will be found in every large community. Federal agents know and are watching quite a number of them but those under surveillance probably are but a small per cent. U. S. IS WARNED OF RAIDING SHIP

British Vessel Reports Marauder Off Nantucket.

SUSPECT DESTROYED, REPORT

Second Radio In Twenty-four Hours Tells of Mysterious Craft in Atlantic Commerce Lanes—No Report of Vessels Being Sunk Has Been Received.

Boston, April 9.—A suspicious vessel off Nantucket lightship was reported to the Boston navy yard by a British vessel.

The radio message, as announced by Lieutenant Edward G. Blakeslee, district communication superintendent of the New England radio district, said:

"Sight suspicious vessel or object forty-five miles south, six degrees west true, from Nantucket light vessel at 3:15 a. m. today.

"(Signed) BRITISH VESSEL."

Later the position of the mysterious vessel was given as latitude 40.15 north, longitude 69.28 west, almost due south from the Shoals.

Second Report In Day.

The report of a mysterious craft in the steamship lane to Europe was the second to be announced officially within twenty-four hours.

Saturday the lightship sent word of "a commerce raider" of 10,000 tons burden passing west. Whether the craft sighted Sunday was the same one, naval attaches declined to state.

The censorship, which was lifted momentarily to allow shipping to receive warning of danger, was at once clamped down tightly.

Conditions Sunday, however, were much more favorable for observation than they were the day before, when the war-gray "raider" loomed out of the fog for a moment and then vanished in the thick mist.

The air has been clear and shipping men expressed the opinion that any enemy ship playing a game of hide and seek with the coast patrol fleet would be on the losing end.

Raider Reported Sunk.

The Nantucket shoals are only eighty-five miles east of the naval base at Newport, and commerce raiding could hardly be carried on with the boldness that characterized the operations of the German submarine U-53 last October, when she did not have a swarm of enemy destroyers to reckon with. The U-53 sank six ships during her day's work.

Whether because all the chances were against an enemy ship playing a lone hand at the war game now or whether there exists a foundation of truth, there were reports from widely separated sources that a raider had been sunk off Nantucket.

One rumor had it that the raider had been sunk by a destroyer. Another had it that she had been sent to the bottom by one of the American submarines.

To queries on all such stores naval men had only one answer:

"We can say nothing about it."

Sink U. S. Trawlers, Rumor.

Boston, April 9.—Persistent rumors along the water front declare the Boston steam fishing trawlers Tide and Swell had been sunk by a German raider 100 miles out from this city.

Gain on Front of 3,000 Yards Along Capaume-Cambral Road.

London, April 9.—British forces report considerable progress in the neighborhood of the Bapaume Cambrai road on a front of 3,000 yards north of the village of Louvevarl. The capture of prisoners was reported near Ypres.

Several successful bombings by aircraft were also reported. Several hangars were said to have been destroyed.

Good Points of the Arabs.

Travelers [illegible] to the Arab many virtues, says a bulletin of the National Geographic society. They are a proud and earnest people, sharp witted, courageous, temperate and hospitable, but when wronged are bloodthirsty and vengeful. One of their most striking characteristics is their great love for poetry. The children of the nomads as well as the offspring of the fellahs are early taught to read, write and calculate, as might be expected of the descendants of that race which gave us our Arabic numerals.

One of the most common of errors is that of confusing happiness with the means of happiness, sacrificing the first for the attainment of the second.—Lecky.

Markham's Ruse

He Learned That He Was Not Married For His Money.

By ELINOR MARSH

Warner Markham, a young American, rich, was very much afraid that, if he married, the girl he chose would place a much higher value on his money than on himself. He went abroad thinking that he might meet some girl with whom he might have a real affair of the heart. To conceal his wealth he traveled in second or third class railway carriages, stayed at pensions (boarding houses) instead of hotels and otherwise curtailed his expenses.

In Florence, where art is the principal attraction, he was one morning looking at the pictures in the Uffizi gallery when he came upon a young girl copying a picture by Titian. The copyist was seated at a window, glinted on her head of wavy hair the exact shade of that belonging to a girl represented in the painting she copied. Of the real girl and the painted one Markham greatly preferred the former. Indeed, his heart went out to her with one of those sudden unaccountable impulses that are common in young persons.

Standing behind her, he pretended to be examining her work, but his eyes were fixed on her. A friend passed her, and she spoke a few words of salutation in the English tongue without the British accent. Markham judged that she was an American, and Americans abroad need no introduction. Our country seems very far from them, a distant land sunken far below the western horizon, from which they are cut off and from which they hear very little. This makes them all akin. Markham, who was a fine judge of pictures, did not hesitate to express his approval of the way the copyist was doing her work and call her attention to some differences between her copy and the original. She looked up at him, saw admiration in his eyes and turned hers back upon her work with a flutter of the heart that she had never felt before. Markham told her that he was an American and she admitted being from the same land. After chatting awhile he passed on.

She was Miss Nina Trevor. Having [illegible] ability, and the necessity of making her own living, she had used a little money left her in a legacy to study art in Florence. Her funds had been used up, and she was now endeavoring to keep body and soul together by copying masterpieces for such Americans as would give her an order. Markham made up a story about himself to fit his being in Florence. He had come abroad on a venture to find pictures of great artists to sell to wealthy Americans at home on commission. He had been disappointed in not finding such pictures for sale, and those that were to be had were not acceptable in the American market. He let drop a hint that he was near the end of his rope and had not money enough to take him home.

He was looking at Miss Trevor when he said this and saw by her expression that he had touched a sympathetic chord. So he followed it up with a show of resolution to conquer adversity which excited admiration. Sympathy and admiration are two effective weapons with which to attack a woman's heart, as Markham very well knew, and by the time the first interview ended he congratulated himself that he had made a beginning.

The next morning Markham passed through the gallery again, and when he stopped to take a look at Miss Trevor's work she received him with a smile. Again he gave her some points as to her copy and let drop the information that he had had a very poor breakfast. There was no untruth in this, for no one on the European continent takes anything but rolls and coffee at breakfast, and it would be impossible for him to call any coffee to be procured there good. Indeed, it is all bad. But the girl conceived the idea that Markham was hungry on account of his poverty, and this excited pity. Markham added to the fact of the poor breakfast that even if he came to eat sawdust he would not flinch.

His confidence drew forth confidence from Miss Trevor, and she, too, at times confessed to hunger. This very nearly spoiled Markham's game, for it was all he could do to keep from inviting her to dine at the best hotel in Florence. He restrained himself for the time being, but the next day joined her, radiant. Claiming to have made a commission of 100 francs ($20) on the sale of a picture to an Englishman, with true bohemian weakness he filled Miss Trevor with viands so expensive that they used up all his pretended commission. For this he received a lecture from her on his shortsightedness and his generosity; but, since that generosity was expended on her, it only bound her closer to him.

Markham began his lovemaking by a fit of despondency. When asked the cause he intimated that he had met with a change of heart. He no longer looked upon his poverty with unconcern. It was not long before Miss Trevor wrung from him the cause of this change. He was in love, and in love with her.

This set her to thinking. She [illegible] done very wrong to permit him to become so chummy with her. Poverty added to poverty makes misery. A marriage between them would be suicidal. Markham lugubriously admitted the fact. He told her that he loved her and was only prevented from asking her to be his wife by the misery that such a union would bring upon her.

Markham noticed that there was no statement from Miss Trevor on this matter to match his own. She did not say, "Would that I had a fortune—how happy we could be together!" He wondered, if she had a fortune, whether she would throw herself away on a poverty stricken man with bohemian instincts. He feared not. He had given her to suppose that he was only prevented from being a spendthrift by [illegible] money to spend. [illegible] for him should she be[illegible] triumph over common sense.

While Markham appreciated common sense [illegible] more stress upon Miss Trevor [illegible] him. He wished that he [illegible] a windfall a few hundred [illegible] dollars, that he might learn whether she loved him well enough to permit him to make ducks and drakes with it. This set [illegible] the fortune without her knowing that it came from him.

One day Markham went to Miss Trevor very much agitated. He said that he had discovered an original Murillo. It had been taken from a part of a house that had been bricked up for several hundred years and was now being torn down. The surface was covered with dirt, and if there were a name in the corner it did not appear. When Miss Trevor asked him how he knew the picture was a Murillo he said that he relied entirely on his knowledge of the great artist's other works, this painting bearing the same individual characteristics.

Markham told her that what troubled him was that the work could be bought for a song and he hadn't enough money to buy a cigar, which in Italy may be had for a fraction of a cent. He begged Miss Trevor to try to raise 30 francs, the price asked by the finder of the picture. She happened to have the money, having just been paid 50 francs for copying a painting, and offered to lend it to her lover. But Markham would not listen to such a proposal. If she took a risk in his opinion she should reap the benefit in case he was right. She gave him the money to invest for her, and he brought the picture to her studio.

All depended on whether when the accumulated dirt was removed from the corner the magic name would appear, which, like a Midas touch, would turn the picture into gold. Markham had brought with him cleaning materials and, setting the picture on an easel, began to rub. The first letter that appeared was an "L," then an "l," then another "l" and an "o." Then, working the other way, he exposed the word "Murillo."

Miss Trevor was too much excited to take an unbiased look at the picture, and if she had done so it would have availed nothing, for it was all, except the name, covered with dust. Markham took it away, promising to let her see it when it had been cleaned, but before the dirt had been taken off he reported to her that the painting had been snapped up by an American pork packer for 400,000 lire.

So it was that the impoverished American copyist was suddenly enriched by $80,000, an amount which invested at 5 per cent would yield $4,000 a year. To one who could not always afford an Italian breakfast of coffee and rolls this was wealth indeed. Markham expected—at least hoped that the possessor would throw her arms around his neck and say, "Now we can be happy together." Instead she asked:

"When shall I get the money?"

"I am to go to the bank tomorrow where the purchaser will draw on Chicago. The draft will be cashed by the bank, and I will receive a certificate of deposit in your name."

Markham wondered if she would offer to divide. She said no more. He was curious to know if anything more to his satisfaction would be said on payment of the money.

The next day he brought her a certificate of deposit for 400,000 lire. She looked at it, feasted her eyes on it, and a pleasant smile came over her lips.

"Don't you think," she said, "that I ought to give you some of this for finding the picture—and—doing it all?"

"Not a cent. You risked your money and are entitled to the profit."

"I suppose now"— she began and paused.

"Now what?"

"If you feel the same"—

"I do."

"There's no objection to"—

Markham was about to embrace her when she motioned him to desist.

"I'm afraid you'll spend the money and we'll be in poverty again. You must expect to leave it in my keeping."

"I promise."

"Your promise isn't enough. You must sign a paper waiving all a husband's rights to his wife's money."

This was a backset to Markham's happiness, but he consented. She produced a contract which she had had prepared by her attorney. He signed it, and they were married.

Markham had hired the picture painted for 30 francs, had put the artist's name on it himself and smeared it with dirt. He was the wealthy packer who had bought it.

When Mrs. Markham discovered that she had married a multimillionaire she felt a bit troubled about having required her fiance to resign all rights to her fortune, but not for long.

"I don't think you treated me fairly, dear," she said to him.

"In what respect?"

"Why, if I had known how rich you are I would have required a settlement."

Mayor Bowers, of Mount Clemens, paid his fine of $5 imposed by Justice George W. John for contempt of court in the now famous "bedbug" suit. Refusing to pay a week ago, the mayor was sentenced to the county jail for ten days, but he was released on a writ of habeas corpus.

Monroe's second and briefest breach of promise suit in which Berlin township is concerned is one in which Miss Eva Baumia of Monroe, sued Henry Bladel for $10,000 for breach of promise, because after frequent postponements of the marriage day he had married Miss Labeau, of Berlin township, was settled out of court. Miss Baumia accepted $125 for her damaged affections.

Moslem Divorce.

Moslem writers and their supporters in this country frequently emphasize the [illegible] status of the women of [illegible] in comparison with their western sisters. Some recent divorce court proceedings bring to light the fact at least that when a dissolution of the marriage relation is desired in Moslem lands the husband is the only one possessing the right of divorce. The woman's only recourse appears to be to change her religion, by which means she automatically disposes of her husband.—Literary Digest.

Two Good Reasons.

Two men on the street car were talking about a third man.

"Ever get Jim out to visit you?" the first man asked.

"Nope, never can," was the reply. "Been tryin' for eight years to get him out, and he just keeps promisin' and promisin', but he never comes. Always says when he's a-workin' he can't afford to lay off to come, and says when he ain't a-workin' he can't afford to take his savin's to come on, so I've about give up gettin' a visit out'n Jim."—Indianapolis News.

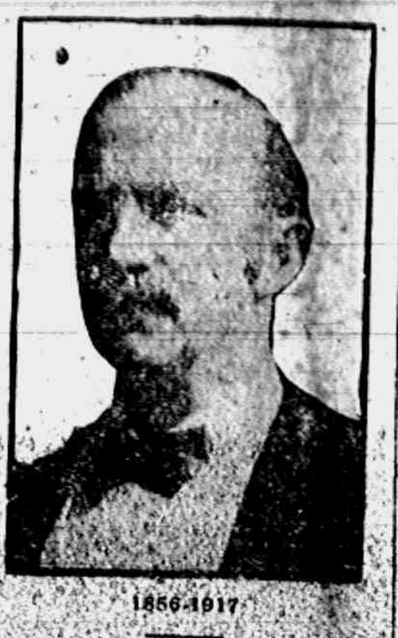
REV. G. W. JENNINGS



1856-1917

Rev. Geo. W. Jennings, pastor of the Tecumseh Methodist church, passed away Saturday afternoon April 7, at 3:30 o'clock. The end came as he slept and was marked only by the cessation of his easy breathing and the quieting of his enfeebled pulse.

With Rev. Jennings at the end were his wife, his son Ben. D., his daughter, Winnifred, his daughter-in-law, Mrs. Roy W. Jennings and the nurse, Miss Elizabeth Satterthwaite. He left besides, a son Roy W., who had been at the home for several days, but had suddenly been summoned to Flint; a son, George, jr.; two brothers, William and John, in Norwich, O.; and two sisters in Zanesville, O.

The funeral was held Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock from the Methodist church of Tecumseh, and interment will be Wednesday at 3:30 o'clock in Glenwood cemetery, Flint, where his daughter, Miss Lelia, was laid to rest September 15, 1915.

Rev. D. H. Ramsdell, district superintendent, of the West Detroit district of the Methodist confreence, officiated at the funeral in Tecumseh, the members of the official board of the church acting as pall bearers to convey the body to the train. The casket was not taken to the church, but an invitation was extended that all who desired could see it at the home.

The six Methodist ministers of Flint acted as pall bearers in that city.

For 34 years, Rev. Jennings has been a pastor in the Detroit conference of the Methodist church. He was exceptionally proud of this record and in each of the eight cities in which he preached during that time, he could number many among his close, personal friends. He possessed the faculty of making warm friends, and retaining them, to an exceptional degree and in cities where he had not been in many years he was still repeatedly invited back for weddings, funerals and for addresses.

As a preacher and public speaker, there is no Methodist minister in the state who had a more enviable record.

Rev. Jennings was born in Charleston, W. Va., in 1856. He would have been 61 years old on July 2. After graduating from Muskingum college and Western Reserve University, he was ordained in the Detroit conference and was given Almont as his first appointment. He preached there three years and was called to Port Huron, where he preached for five years. He was five years in Flint, five in Saginaw, seven in Pontiac, three in Owosso, three in Mt. Clemens and was on his third year in Tecumseh.

Always fond of the outdoors, his recreations have been hunting and fishing. Rev. Jennings had hardly ever been ill a day, until November 7, when he was stricken during Sunday school service with an apoplectic stroke. He seemed to recover within a couple of months and for the two months preceeding his death had filled his pulpit once a Sunday. He seemed to be progressing very well until Tuesday, April 2, when he suffered a relapse following a church gathering. His death Saturday was five months to a day after his initial illness.

Rev. Jennings never preached in a city where he enjoyed his congregation more than in Tecumseh. He counted some of his best friends in the town and repeatedly told his family that "kinder, more considerate people never lived."

No man, no woman and no child ever came to Rev. Jennings for help, kindly advice, anything which he had at his command - - that they did not receive it and cheerfully. It can truthfully be said of him, that,

"He added to the sum of human joy and were every person for whom he had done a loving kindness, to bring a blossom to his grave, he would sleep tonight beneath a wilderness of flowers."

MRS. GEORGE SISSON

Mrs. Almira M. Sisson passed away at her home on North Evans street Sunday evening, April 8th, 1917, after a short illness of pneumonia. She has been in failing health for several years and was too weak to withstand the attack.

She was born May 7, 1840 and has always been a resident of Tecumseh. She is survived by her husband, three sons, Edward of Detroit, Otis on a farm west of town, and Gustine of Tecumseh and a daughter Mrs. Alice Beneway of Nebraska.

The funeral will be held at the home Wednesday at 2 p. m., Rev. W. A. Rex officiating.

DANCING

Clyde Mangus had a birthday, Friday and in the evening, about 100 neighbors and friends gathered at the home for a dancing party. A potluck supper was served at midnight, and the dancing continued until nearly morning. John Wells and M. Bauchman furnished the music.

POLITICAL MEETING

TO BE HELD IN TECUMSEH, SUNDAY, NEXT AT 3:00 O'CLOCK

Under the Supervision of the Patriotic League of Lenawee County

BRADLEY'S OPERA HOUSE HAS BEEN DONATED FOR THE USE OF THE MEETING

Arrangements are being completed in Tecumseh for a patriotic meeting to be held at Bradley's opera house Sunday, April 15 at 3 o'clock. This meeting will be held under the supervision of the Patriotic League of Lenawee County. The object of the meeting is to organize our people and to unite them with some central body that they may do their part as they may be called upon either through State or National headquarters.

As a nucleus for such an organization, the Adrian Business Men's Training Battalion have taken the matter up and on Wednesday, April 4th, it was merged into the Patriotic League of Lenawee County. A meeting of the League was held Sunday, April 8th, at the armory in Adrian which drew a crowded house and much enthusiasm was shown.

In order to get the known spirit of the County working through a central organization so as to be able to perform our duty just that much more efficiently, it has been decided by the committee in charge to hold similar meetings throughout the county.

A local committee is at work and it is expected that some local speakers as well as some from Adrian will be on hand to address the audience.

There is nothing to this organization as we understand it that will obligate any person to enlist under arms in our Country's service, but it will offer an opportunity for service to those who will not be called on for active service.

The plan will be fully explained at the meeting Sunday and it is also expected that at this meeting the formation of a Chapter of the Red Cross for the county will be fully explained and everyone will be invited to become a member of that organization as well as the Patriotic League of Lenawee County.

CROCHET CLUB

Friday afternoon Mrs. M. Smeltzer very pleasantly entertained the members of the Crochet Club and their guests, about thirty being present. The afternoon was spent in social visiting, crochet work and games. A happy afternoon was enjoyed. At the close the hostess served light refreshments.

MONDAY CLUB

The closing meeting of the Monday club was held Monday afternoon with 100 members and guests present. A paper was read by Mrs. Stuckey on "Wanderers" which was very interesting. Mrs. Jenny C. Law Hardy followed with an illustrated talk on Cuba, which proved of intense interest to all.

The meeting was a very pleasant one and it was with regret that the ladies parted until their opening meeting of another year. At the close of the meeting refreshments were served by Mrs. James Smih's committee.

STEINHOFF—GRETSHEL

A quiet marriage occurred in Adrian Saturday when Fred Steinhoff was united in marriage to Miss Louise Gretshel of El Paso, Texas. They were attended by Mr and Mrs. Geo. Scott the latter being a sister the bride.

REPUBLICS FIGHTING FOR RIGHTS OF MAN

President Sends Message to Head of France.

Washington, April 9.—In response to President Poincare's congratulation upon the entrance of the United States into the war, President Wilson sent this message:

"In this trying hour, when the destinies of civilized mankind are in the balance, it has been a source of gratification and joy to me to receive your congratulations upon the step which my country has been constrained to take in opposition to the relentless policy and course of imperialistic Germany.

"It is very delightful to us that France, who stood shoulder to shoulder with us of the western world in our struggle for independence, should now give us such a welcome into the lists of battle as upholders of the freedom and rights of humanity.

"We stand as partners of the noble democracies whose aims and acts make for the perpetuation of the rights and freedom of man and for the safeguarding of the true principles of human liberties. In the name of the American people I salute you and your illustrious countrymen."

A FORMER TECUMSEH BOY ENLISTED IN THE NAVY

We see by an article in the Burlington (Iowa) Gazette that Cairnes Shephard, son of Fred and Dora Shephard, former Tecumseh residents, has enlisted in the Naval Reserve Force Class 4, U S N., at DesMoines, Iowa. Three other schoolmates enlisted with him. The boys would have graduated in June, but they freely gave up the prospect of receiving their diplomas for their country's service. Many in Tecumseh will remember young Cairnes especially his old schoolmates.

The bake sale of the churches Saturday proved a great success. The Ladies Aid of the Presbyterian church cleared over $29 and the Methodist ladies over $12 with their baked stuff. ENTERTAINED

The ladies passed the time with needlework and a social good time. Supper was served later, covers being laid for ten. A very enjoyable time was reported by those present.

EASTER

CELEBRATED IN THE CHURCHES

Baptist Church

Easter services were held at the Baptist church at 5:30 p. m. with a large attendance The church was beautifully decorated with potted plants, cut flowers and smilax. A trellis across the front of the platform with an arbr in the center was decorated with the smilax and flowers. At the west side of the platform was a bubbling fountain and in front of the choir stood a beautiful cross.

The exerises opened with a processional led by Marian Wiliiamson bearing a cross. She was followed by twelve little girls in white, and the choir.

A chorus by the little girls was accompanied by Miss Greta Wixom on the piano, solos by Mrs. Moore, John Taylor and Lester Waring and duet by Miss Edna Taylor and Harold Lowry with a number of chorus selections were given with Miss Halladay at the organ. Tre exercises were much enjoyed by all present.

Mrs. Moore had charge of the music and Lester Heesen decorated the church.

St. Peters Episcopal Church.

Sunrise services were held at St. Peter's church at 7 a. m. on Easter day. There was a large attendance. Special Easter music was rendered by the choir and the usual Morning Prayer service was read.

At 4 p. m. Evening Prayer service was conducted by T. W. Mingay and special music rendered.

The death of Rev. Geo. W. Jennings cast a gloom over the Methodist church and the church was not opened through the day.

Presbyterian Church

The New Royal Theater was never more beautiful than Sunday, thanks to J. Wesley Clark who with the plants and flowers provided by Miss Kyle's class, made the rear of the theater a lovely place. Before a background of purple stood a white cross with the sheaf of Easter lillies gracing it and on either side were banked the flowers and greenery. As usual the Presbyterian services were held here.

The little people of the Primary and Junior Departments gave a pleasing concert at 10 o'clock. This was followed by a splendid sermon by Rev W. A. Rex on "The Place Called Calvary."

He ended his discourse by bringing up the matter of subscriptions for the improvements at the church. A circular letter had been mailed to each member of the church last week stating that the minister would call personally for their subscription this week. The minister stated that he would start out early and call upon every member present on this, the morning of the first day of the week. The surprised audience responded most liberally. Out of the 174 families on the church roll 84 pledges were received, but the amount will not be made known until after the remaining families are seen. Beside the pledges by the members a goodly number were received from friends of the church.

At 7 o'clock the choir, assisted by Mrs. J. M. Mulvaney, Mrs. Dale Hodges, Mrs. Sam Boyce and Miss Marjory Boyce, gave a musical entertainment which was a treat. The songs were all glad tidings of Easter and the concert was a grand climax to the beautiful music with which we were regaled on the Easter Sunday

The day was a delightful one, and the services at the different churches were much enjoyed.

"THE MYSTERY OF THE RAISIN"

By William B. Hartzog

CHAPTER VI

The Mystery of the Raisin revealed.

"Did you ever hear from your brother Natham"? inquired Willard one day late in April.

"Yes, we got a letter. He said he was glad to hear from me and that he would like to visit me some time, and little things like that. I guest he is kinder prejudiced against this country like most eastern people are.

This reply seemed to satisfy Willard and he never referred to the matter again.

Joe replied to Nathan's letter immediately, telling him to be sure and come, and if possible to let him know about when he would start. He closed with this remark, "When you get here I will show you the greatest surprise you ever had."

When Nathan received Joe's letter he read it to his family.

"Oh, let us go," said Clara.

"I think we owe Joe a visit," said Mrs. Grove.

"Very well, we will go. I will write to him and tell him that we will start the fifteenth of June. We will plan to stay a month."

Clara was delighted and cheerful her appetite improved and the burden seemed to have passed from her mind. Her cheeks became rosy. She went about her work singing.

"Daughter, you are feeling better and you are looking better. Would you mind confiding in your mother and telling her what burdened your mind?"

"Mother, it was just this. I have felt all along that I was the cause of the mysterious disappearance of Luke. I allowed myself to be deceived by Mr. Warner. Luke and I were lovers. I know he loved me and I loved him. He was true gold. I ought to have stood by him in the midst of his troubles. Poor boy, he needed my sympathy. I forsook him at the very time when he needed me most. I did not mean to do it. I have shed many bitters tears over this matter. But somehow I believe it is going to come out allright yet. I asked God to forgive me and bring Luke back. I believe he will do it."

"I believe it too, Clara

The fifteenth of June arrived and it found them going abroad a vessel at Buffalo.

Five days later Joe said, "Willard, I look for a vessel in from Buffalo today. I am expecting some friends on it and I want you to be at the landing with me to receive them."

About ten o'clock they saw a vessel hooving in sight.

Joe and Willard were arrayed in their best clothes. Mrs. Groves and the children were dressed in their best.

A large number of people seeking a home in the new country landed. At length they saw a man with his wife and daughter walked down the gang plank.

"There is Nathan and his family," shouted Joe. "Welcome to Michigan, Nathan!"

Joe greeted them in the most cordial manner. "Here is my family and this is Luke Barnes. I told you I would have a surprise for you. The mystery of the Raisin is revealed."

Willard was taken by surprise, but he quickly recovered.

"I suppose I might as well admit it but I don't see how Joe found it out."

"Why, Luke," said Clara, as she grasped his hand. "How well you look. I am so glad to see you."

"Well Clara, this is very unexpected, but, I am glad to see you. I will carry your baggage."

The large room which served as a dinning room and sitting room was the scene of a joyful conversation and a big dinner that day. Joe had hired a cook so Mrs. Grove would be free to visit with their guests. The weather was fine and after dinner they gathered under a large tree in the front yard and continued their visit. Luke and Clara strolled down to the river bank.

"Have you got a boat, Luke"

"Yes, it is not a very nice one, but it is safe. Would you like to take a ride?"

"That would be delightful."

They went up the river to the edge of the forest where the giant trees stood like sturdy sentinels keeping watch over the little village. Ferns were growing profusely and wild flowers perfumed the air. The hugh grape vines hung from the limbs over the river

"What a wild country this is. Are there any wild beasts and Indians?"

"Lots of them. The wild animals are dangerous. The Indians are harmless except when they are drunk. Here is a good place to rest and talk," said Luke as he threw the chain over a large grape vine that hung near the water.

"Clara, did you know I was here?"

"Indeed, I did not. Did you know we were coming?"

"No. I never was so surprised in all my life."

"Well, you were not more surprised than I was. But I am glad it has turned out this way."

"What do you know about my farm, Clara?"

"Your uncle John has rented out the fields to the neighbors. I saw him about a week ago. I told him we were going to visit Uncle Joe, and he said he would give anything to see you. I told him I would, too."

"Well, I may have done wrong, but I could not help it"

"Just at that moment they heard a noise in the brush."

"What is that noise?" said Clara.

"We are near an Indian trail. It may be a band of Indians coming into the village to trade."

"Luke, loosen the boat and go back. I will be scared to death if the Indians come near me."

They started down stream. Presently an unearthly yell resounded through the solitude of the forest. Clara dropped down into the bottom of the boat much to the amusement of Luke.

"Don't be alarmed Clara. They always dash into the village yelling like fiends. They enjoy scaring people."

Just as they reached the edge of the forest, the band of Indians came dashing along, their ponies running at break-neck speed.

"I wonder what your father and mother will think when they see them riding into town?"

"They will be terrible frightened, I know," said Clara.

"Have you been among the Indians?" she inquired.

"Yes, we have gone up this river sixty miles or more. The first time we went up Joe and I slept among them. One of those Indians riding there is Chief Yellow Hand. His daughter is my sweetheart," said Luke with a smile.

"Why Luke Barnes! Are you making love to the Indian squaws?"

"Why shouldn't I? The white girls don't want me."

"Luke Barnes, how you talk. What would your uncle John think, if I would go home and tell him that you were making love to an Indian squaw?"

"I suppose he would think I was crazy."

"I think as much," said Clara.

When they got back to the house they found Clara's father and mother greatly excited over the presence of the Indians, much to the amusement of Joe. Luke tried to coax Clara to go down to the tavern and see the Indians but she declared she had seen enough Indians to do her a life time.

As the days passed Luke and Clara had an opportunity to renew their acquaintance. One day Luke proposed that they go boating again. Clara declared she would never go into the forest again. He then proposed that they go down toward the lake. To this Clara consented.

They went down the winding channel to a point where they could look far out across the broad expanse of water. He cast anchor in the shade of an old tree that had withstood many a storm, but like a battle scarred veteran had lost some limbs.

On the previous night, Luke had laid awake for hours, thinking the matter over, and had made up his mind to once more declare his love to Clara. He reasoned that he had nothing to loose and he might possibly gain a bride.

"Clara, since Providence has brought us together in this strange way, and in view of the fact that you will soon be returning to your distant home, I have made up my mind to ask you if you would be my wife providing I would return to Findlay Lake?"

"Luke, I don't see how I could ever leave you here. I did not come here to find you, but now that I have found you, I want you to go back with me. I will be your bride."

"What do you thing your father and mother will say about it?"

"It will be all right with them I know. Father and mother both think well of you."

"I will go back with you and we will be married in your home."

That evening they laid the matter before her parents. Nathan Grove said, "Mother and I will not only give our consent, but we will do everything in our power to make your life happy. You have a fine farm to go to and Clara wil be near us. It will be ideal. Besides, we know your Uncle John will be overjoyed to have yon return to Findlay Lake," we know your uncle John will be overjoyed to have you return to Findlay Lake."

In a few days they boarded a vessel and sailed away.

It was a beautiful July day, when the neighbors and relatives of both families gathered at the home of Nathan Grove. On that day Luke and Clara were united in the holy bonds of matrimony and received the best wishes of their many friends. The evening of that day found them domiciled in their own home.

"This is better than being in the wilds of Michigan."

"That is right, Clara, no more of Michigan for me. Thanks to you for rescuing me."

The End

The Finer the Better

Finely pulverized limestone dissolves quickly into the earth. Every single particle of the carbonates of lime and magnesia works to sweeten sour soil. Maximum fertility is quickly created. Coarsely pulverized stone—which costs just as much to haul and spread—takes longer to work in, and your crops get only partial benefit. It pays, therefore, in crop quantity and quality, to use the most finely pulverized limestone obtainable on your land.

SOLVAY PULVERIZED LIMESTONE

Solvay guarantees that 95% of its Pulverized Limestone passes through a 50-mesh screen, making it as fine as flour. Guarantees that it contains 94% total carbonates, that it is furnace-dried, that it is always shipped in box cars. Solvay Pulverized Limestone is shipped from a point South of Detroit, which means that you get your shipment without delay.

High School Notes

Brewers vs. T. H. S.

Tuesday afternoon at the Athletic field a hotly contested game of base ball was held. The final score Brewers 6, High school 3 was not as bad a one from the view point of the H. S. as was anticipated considering the amount of practice they have had and the team which they faced. The line up of the two teams was as follows, at the beginning of the game.

High School—VanValkenburg, c; Cuthbert, p; Hanham, 1 b; Satterthwaite, 2 b; Blesing, 3 b; Haviland, s s; Moore, l f; McLain, c f; Brisbin, r f.

The mechanics started in the first inning with an infield hit, aided by two errors, giving them two runs. After the first inning the students settled down and played steady ball. Inability to crack the horse-hide with men on bases was the chief fault of the students. Cuthbert on the mound pitched a good ball, getting ten strike-outs. The mechanics were good hitters, which fact aided them considerably in winning the game.

With more batting practice our High School team will be able to hold their own with the Hudson team which plays here Saturday afternoon at 2:30.

The Saturday game between T. H. S. and Hudson which bids well to be a good game is the first of the County Schedule.

Come Out and Boost Your Home team Saturday. Admission to adults, 25c; to minors and pupils, 15c.

To keep down the High Cost of Living the Agriculture Class have planted an extensive truck garden on the "West Forty" of our corner lot. We expect some excellent fruit (onions, radishes, etc.) in a short time.

"What time is the 3 o'clock train due?" Miss Hardenburg caused no little merriment when she asked, 'How long did the '100 years war' last?"

We are glad to see our students so patriotic these days. Nearly everyone is wearing the good old "Red, White and Blue."

Notice to the Public

After no little effort on the part of High School Financial committee, we have at last succeeded in getting an excellent motion picture play, "The Prince and the Pauper", featuring Miss Margaret Clark. This show, with several extra features, will be given at the Bradley Opera House Monday April 23, for the benefit of our Athletic Association. Further particulars will be given in next Friday's paper Tickets can be secured of any high school student any time now.

The Sophomores are debating these days. It is proving very interesting as well as educational to all the pupils The propositions which were debated this week were:

1. Resolved that military training should be compulsory in every high school.
2. Resolved, That no pupil should be allowed to carry more than four subjects in any one school year.
3. Resolved, That the government should control the railroads.

In the first two debates the negative sides won. The paper went to press before we heard which side won the third proposition.

The High School jumping standards were brought to light again this week and have been used continually.

It is rumored that the Juniors will put on a play at Tipton the latter part of next week. Kenneth Davidson has been appointed superintendent of stage construction.

WOMEN'S WAGE ACT VALID

Supreme Court Upholds Oregon Law Fixing Minimum Scale.

WASHINGTON, D. C. — Oregon's law, fixing the minimum wages for women, the first compulsory minimum wage statute ever before the supreme court, was upheld as constitutional by an equally divided court. Similar compulsory laws of Washington, Colorado, Wisconsin, California, Utah, Minnesota and Ohio, likewise were sustained.

The supreme court also upheld as constitutional the Oregon law, limiting labor of men in mills, factories and manufacturing establishments to ten hours a day, but permitting thirteen hours' labor if paid time and a half for overtime. It was the first general hours of labor state law ever before the supreme court.

ETIQUETTE OF THE FLAG

Rule Governing the Use of the Star Spangled Banner

There are many citizens who are not familiar with the rules governing the use of the stars and stripes. To them the following hints on flag etiquette will be of interest.

The Flag should not be hoisted before sunrise nor allowed to remain up after sunset. It should not be displayed upon stormy days.

When the flag is displayed at half staff for mourning it is to be lowered to that position from the top of the staff. It is afterwards hoitsed to the top before it is finally lowered.

When the flag is formally raised all present should stand attention, with hand raised to the forehead ready for the salute.

When our national flag and state or other flags fly together or are used in decoration together our national flag should be on the right.

When used on a bier or casket at a funeral the stars should be placed at the head. In no case should the flag be allowed to touch the ground.

It is an unwritten law in the navy that the flag is never to be washed: it is always to be considered immaculate.

For indoor decorations the flag can only be used as a drapery; it cannot be used to cover a bench or table. desk or box where anything can be placed or set upon the flag, nor used for any advertisement.—Daughters of the American Revolution Magazine.

A Much Used Bible.

When we turn to the Supreme Court, instead of many Bibles we find but one small volume, now celebrated as the Justice' Bible, used continuously during the one hundred and sixteen years since 1800 for the installation oaths of all justices and the pledging of allegiance of all the attorneys who have practiced before that court. No wonder that an average for about every decade of this period a new or extra oustide cover of black leather has been required to keep the red morocco binding of the little book in such freshness as it still possesses. This Bible is five and a half inches long and three and a half inches wide, and tradition says that it formed one of twenty thousand which Congress imported in the early days of the republic to relieve the Scriptural dearth of the country. The title-page shows that it was printed at Oxford in 1799. This Bible has always been in the care of the clerk of the Supreme Court.—The Christian Herald.

BRITISH CAPTURE 5,800 GERMANS

Vimy Trenches Taken after Heavy Fighting.

CANADIANS WIN STRONG RIDGE

British Advance Two to Three Miles Along a Twelve Mile Front in Arras Region—Three Towns Fall—Drive Is Strongest Offensive of the War. Prisoners Still Pour In.

LONDON, ENG. — The official British report says the British troops advanced from two to three miles along a front extending twelve miles in the vicinity of Arras. Up to 2 o'clock in the afternoon German prisoners numbering 5,816, including 119 officers, had come in, but many more remained to be counted.

The famous Vimy ridge, which has been the scene of many hard battles since the beginning of the war, was captured by Canadian troops.

The German official report says that heavy fighting took place on both sides of Arras and admits "the enemy has forced his way into parts of our positions."

Important Posts Seized.

The war on the western front, which has been moving more rapidly in the last five weeks, broke into full swing Monday. Widening the attacks that they have been directing against the retreating Germans in the sector of the Somme, the British struck still farther north, and in a series of assaults in a broad front, with Arras more or less the pivotal point, they drove the Germans from scores of important positions, penetrated far into the German lines and inflicted heavy casualties.

A visit to corps headquarters indicated that the number of prisoners taken in the last twelve hours will exceed 5,000.

Prisoners' "Cages" Crowded.

The barbed wire "cages" or compounds built to receive prisoners that were expected to be taken were overcrowded long before noon, although the principal attack did not begin until shortly after dawn.

The heaviest fighting developed along a line a few miles southeast of Arras in a northerly direction to the neighborhood of Lens, but the actions extended far in the direction of St. Quentin.

In the territory captured was the famous Vimy Ridge, which had been fought over time and time again ever since the war was ten months old. The French had fought desperately and valiantly in an endeavor to wrest this vantage ground from the Germans, the battles costing both belligerents untold casualties.

Back of the northern end of Vimy Ridge lie the principal coal fields of France, which are still in German hands.

Canadians Take Ridge.

The fighting on Vimy Ridge was carried out by the Canadians, who had retained a footing on the ridge all winter, but always higher up was the enemy. On either side of the Canadians were English and Scottish battalions, and in the day's battle there was glory enought for all. The irrepressible "tanks" also shared in the honors of the successful assault.

WILSON THANKS GEORGE V.

President Replies to King's Congratulatory Message.

LONDON, ENG. — Thanks to King George for his "inspiring words" in greeting America's entry into the war, was expressed by President Wilson in the following message received by the king:

"Your eloquent message comes to me at this critical moment in our national life as proof of a community of sentiment among the free peoples of the world, now striving to defend their ideals, maintain the blessings of national independence and upholds the rights of humanity.

"In the name of the American people and the government to which they look for guidance, I thank you for your inspiring words."

Great Anxiety Felt Over American Refugees in Beirut if Turkey Follows Lead of Teuton Masters—Bulgarian Envoy Ignorant of His Country's Intentions.

RIO JANEIRO — An early rupture of relations between Brazil and Germany is expected. The break probably will be followed by the seizure of German ships in Brazil. Dr. Lauro Muller, foreign minister, has refused to receive the German minister. Dr. Muller then gave urgent orders that a steamer in Rio Janeiro be made ready at once for a mission abroad.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Austria has ranged herself beside her ally, the Imperial German government, against the United States. Relations between the United States and the dual monarchy have been broken, and a practical state of war between the two nations exists. Within a few hours after the state department had been formally notified that Austria had withdrawn her diplomatic representative, federal officials seized all of the Austrian-owned ships war-bound in American harbors. Official Washington declares that the ally of Germany will undoubtedly accept these seizures as an "act of war" and that an actual clash between the two countries is apparently inevitable.

No Minister of Munitions.

From the highest administration source the definite statement is forthcoming that President Wilson's cabinet will not be further increased to include ministers of munitions and transportation. The administration will rely for such technical aid as it may need upon advisory boards of highly specialized men in their respective fields.

Denials came from the war department that Major General Leonard Wood, assigned to command the newly created department of the southeast, would remain in charge of the defense of New York. The present plan is for General Wood to take charge of the new department about May 1, as originally ordered.

War Declared on Good Friday.

WASHINGTON — America's decision to war for humanity came on Good Friday—anniversary of the day on which Christ died for humanity. While a storm raged outside, the wind whipping about the Capitol and rain pouring down through the darkness, members of the house solemnly voted that America should take up the cross of war.

CONSCRIPTION IS OPPOSED

Texas Governor Wires "Texas Boys Want Texas Officers."

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Congressional opposition sufficient to delay but not to defeat the administration's plans for the enlistment of the army and navy by conscription instead of by adherence to the volunteer system has developed. Chairman Dent of the committee on military affairs of the house told President Wilson that strenuous opposition existed in his committee against the administration plan.

Texas was the first state of the union to exhibit recalcitrancy in the matter of the proposed conscription law. Governor Ferguson telegraphed to Representative Garner that Texas boys must have officers from the Lone Star state, and Garner at once laid the dispatch before the military affairs committee then in executive session.

RICHARD OLNEY DIES SUDDENLY AT HOME

Former Secretary of State Won Enviable Fame.

BOSTON, MASS. — Richard Olney, secretary of state under President Cleveland, died at his home here.

Mr. Olney, who was eighty-two years old, had been ill several weeks, although it was not until Sunday that his condition became serious. In an announcement issued by the family it was stated that he died suddenly at 8:45 o'clock Sunday night. Mrs. Olney and their daughter, Mrs. George R. Minot of this city, were with him at the end. Mr. Olney's other daughter, Mrs. C. H. Abbott, is residing temporarily in Paris.

Recently while unable to leave his bed, Mr. Olney had displayed very deep interest in the international situation. It was said that he warmly commended the action of the government when members of his family informed him on Friday that President Wilson had signed a proclamation of war.

Mr. Olney served successively as attorney-general and secretary of state during the administration of President Cleveland, and although at the head of the state department for only one year and nine months, he won reputation as a statesman of commanding ability and force. His greatest triumph was his successful insistence upon arbitration of the boundary dispute between Great Britain and Venezuela. He was regarded as the strongest man of the Cleveland administration.

FUNERAL OF REV. GEORGE W. JENNINGS

Funeral services for the late George W. Jennings, pastor of the Tecumseh Methodist church, were held at the church Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock. The church was filled with friends from every denomination, for he was a friend to all. Many from former charges were also present to pay silent tribute to him whose memory they loved and cherished. No pastor ever occupied the pulpit of the Methodist church in Tecumseh, who was more universally loved and respected than the Rev. Jennings.

Dr D H Ramsdell of Ann Arbor, District Superintendent of this district, preached the funeral sermon and paid high tribute to the sterling qualities of the departed, and eulogized his life work in the church. Strong in mind and body, he was a power for good in every community where he had served. One of his characteristics was his great ability to make friends and to keep them. He was equally at home in the home of wealth as in those of the humbler walks of life, and while the former appealed to him, yet given his choice, he liked best to mingle with the unfortunate, and to aid and comfort them in their trials, emulating the Master in going about doing good.

Dr Ramsdell was assisted by Dr. W. B. Hartzog, who read the Scripture, and by Rev J E. Somers, who offered prayer. At the close of the service Dr Ramsdell read a telegram received by the family from Dr Elliott, pastor of the M E church at Mt Clemens, which consisted of a set of resolutions passed by the church board, which was a loving tribute to their former pastor and full of words of comfort to the sorrowing family.

The casket was not taken to the church, but an invitation was extended to all those who wished to take a last look at their departed pastor and friend, at the Parsonage. Wednesday morning the remains were taken to Flint for burial the members of the official board acting as bearers to the train.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the disease portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rubbing sound or imperfect hearing and, when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflamation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any ease of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

PATRIOTIC MEETING

Plans Maturing for the Big Meeting Sunday Afternoon at the Opera House

The local committee in charge of the Patriotic Meeting to be held Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the Opera House, are working on plans for a rousing meeting. Major John S. Bonner and Stuart H. Perry, editor of the Telegram, will be here from Adrian and address the audience and outline the object of the associations which are planned for Tecumseh. Local speakers will also be arranged for but at this time we are unable to announce their names.

Tecumseh people are loyal and we feel that they are anxious to aid the government so far as their means will permit, in helping to prepare this great nation for the coming strife.

Organizations of this nature such as are being planned for this county are being formed everywhere throughout the length and breadth of the country, and, as we understand the movement, it is a plan which has been outlined by the Department at Washington. It is hoped that there will be a large attendance at this meeting Sunday afternoon. Plan to attend so that you may know something about this movement.

The Wisest Housewife

Is she who devotes the most care to the selection of the supplies for her table. She recognizes that in this particular she is the custodian of the health of the family.
She sees to it that all doubt about quality is removed.
In short, she enforces a pure food law of her own framing. This explains why so many wise housewives have got into the habit of depending upon this store.
They have learned that our claims for high grades is more than talk.
We invite a test from every overseer of a family's eatables.
We promise to give each one all that there is to be had in the way of eatable surety.

Aside from the goods pertaining to his business, are many other features that claim the attention of the passerby, not the least of which are the photos of Villa and the Mexican country. For the Family Medicine Chest

Green Bay, Wis., Mrs. Wm. F. Bubolz says: "I always use Foley's Honey and Tar for our children as it quickly breaks up their colds with no bad after effects, and they like to take it."

In this season of coughs, colds and croup, every family medicine chest should be supplied with a good cough medicine that can be relied upon when needed.

Such a family cough syrup is Foley's Honey and Tar Compound. This standard medicine has been on the market for years and in many sections was found in every home in the days when doctors were not so handy and when money was scarcer.

Foley's Honey and Tar Compound is an excellent medicine for coughs, colds, raw or inflamed throat, hoarseness, tightness and soreness of the chest, croup and whooping cough. It is an absolutely safe remedy, containing only healing ingredients, and free from any harmful drugs.

"Come on Over, See My Corn Fall Off!"

"I Put 2 Drops of 'Gets-It' on Last Night—Now Watch—"

"See—all you have to do is to use your two fingers and lift the corn right off. That's the way 'Gets-It' always works. You just put on about 2 drops. Then the corn not only shrivels, but loosens from the toe, without affecting the surrounding flesh in the least. Why, it's almost a pleasure to have corns and see how 'Gets-It' gets them off in a hurry and without the least pain. I can wear tight shoes, dance and walk as though I never had corns."

"Gets-It" makes the use of toe-irritating salves, bundling bandages, tape, plasters and other things not only foolish, but unnecessary. Use this wonderful discovery, "Gets-It," for any soft or hard corn or callus. It is the new, simple, easy, quick way, and it never fails. You'll never have to cut a corn again with knives or scissors, and run chances of blood poison. Try "Gets-It" tonight.

GOODSPEEDS NEVER WED, RULES COURT

Dirtiest Divorce Case in Michigan Practically Over.

GRAND RAPIDS, April 16.

"This is the worst case I have ever had to do with, and I feel dirtied. I would like to suggest, now it is all over, that the court and attorneys and others interested take an antiseptic bath," said Attorney Stuart Knappen, ending his argument for the defense in the divorce case of Mrs. Maude Irene Goodspeed against John W. Goodspeed, local capitalist, in Judge Dunham's court.

Judge Dunham ruled that there never has been a legal marriage uniting the two contestants in matrimony. The question of whether the subsequent cohabitation of the couple following their marriage in 1906 in Indiana, the bride assuming a fictitious name before being divorced, constitutes a common law marriage is a matter on which the attorneys on both sides will submit briefs. They have been given twenty days in which to prepare them.

Judge Dunham also announced that he would not award the custody of John Goodspeed, the son, to Mrs. Goodspeed, saying that the father was the fit person to have the care of the child.

WORK PLENTY, FEW WORKERS

Y. M. C. A. Employment Bureau at Detroit Can't Get Men.

DETROIT, April 16.

Where are the job hunters of yesteryear? There is one man in Detroit, at least, who would like to get the answer to the question. He is H. A. Wegener, employment secretary of the Y. M. C. A.

Requests for men are coming in faster than ever before, according to Mr. Wegener, while the supply of men has dwindled down and in some lines of work the available job fillers are so few as to be almost negligible. One year ago and two years ago at this time the employment offices were filled with job seekers. Today it is comparatively empty. The men are not seeking the jobs. It is the jobs that are seeking the men, and they are good paying positions, too.

WEST MICHIGAN IS BEHIND

GRAND RAPIDS, April 16.

According to the returns on enlistments from Michigan which have been received by Captain V. M. Elmore, in charge of the Grand Rapids army recruiting station, the eastern half of the state is outdoing the western.

The report shows that 301 recruits have been sent out from the Detroit headquarters and 119 from the Grand Rapids station through which all the recruits from the western part of the state must pass.

TRAVERSE CITY, April 16.

Ours by inheritance, ours by allegiance, ours by affection—long may you float on the free winds of heaven, the emblem of liberty, the hope of the world!—Anon.

LENS CAPTURED IN HAIG'S DRIVE

Canadians Sweep Germans from French Coal Fields.

REJOICING ALL OVER FRANCE

Terrific Losses Inflicted on Germans in Counter Attack—1,500 Dead in Front of British Lines Are Counted After Fierce German Counter Attack Fails.

British Headquarters in France, April 16.—The civil population of Lens was removed Friday. The Germans then seized three months' rations gathered in Lens by the American relief commission.

London, April 16.—Fifteen hundred German dead were left in front of the British positions after the unsuccessful attack delivered by strong German forces along a six-mile front on the Bapaume-Cambrai road, according to the official report from Field Marshal Haig.

London, April 16.—Lens, the pride of France's coal mining industry, has fallen to the British.

Soon after dawn on Sunday morning the Canadians ushered in the seventh day of the terrific battle of Arras by crushing the Teuton defenses guarding the city in Sir Douglas Haig's great "nutcracker." Its loss means the first great material blow to the Germans who since October, 1914, had extracted from the "black country," as the Lens district is called, hundreds of thousands of tons of coal, tiding the fatherland over the gravest economic crisis in the early stages of the war.

First word of the capture of Lens was flashed to London by the correspondent of Lloyds News, who telegraphed that British patrols entered the city between four and five in the morning. The war office, waiting for the bulk of the beleaguering forces to penetrate to the city's heart, contented itself with announcing in its early bulletin that "our troops are pushing on in the direction of Lens." It reported the capture of the German defenses east of Lievin from Piaumont wood to the eastern corner of Cite St. Pierre, both of which positions are virtually suburbs of Lens.

Causes Joy Through France.

From Paris at night came dispatches reporting unbounded joy throughout France, mingled with deep gratitude for the Canadians who reconquered for the republic its richest coal mines which before the war produced fifteen millions tons of coal every year.

The fall of Lens came as a climax of a double defeat of the Teutons. For the latter, after a terrific all-night drumfire, launched a formidable counter offensive upon a front of more than six miles, astride the Bapaume-Cambrai railroad.

It was a furious, though vain, attempt to bend back the irresistible tide of the British. Everywhere Hindenburg's picked troops were hurled back except at one point, Lagnicourt, where they managed to gain a grip upon some British trench elements. Sir Douglas Haig's troops, however, promptly threw them back again in a vigorous counter attack which besides inflicting heavy losses in killed and wounded, netted more than 300 prisoners.

Canadians Clinch Their Grip.

While this battle raged in its most desperate stage—and it was still under way at night—the Canadians contracted their iron grip upon Lens. From the north, west and south they smashed forward until the last loophope of escape for the Teuton defenders became so small that further resistance was suicidal and the garrison withdrew, the rear guards still hitting back furiously as yard by yard the British lion laid his claws upon the coveted ground.

French scouting parties have put out many "feelers" on the St. Quentin front, which is now virtually the center of the German line. They "revealed the enemy trenches everywhere strongly occupied," says the war office bulletin.

Berlin, as if to prepare the German public for the loss of Lens, announced officially a "removal" of the Teuton line north of the Scarpe river. It is asserted that as the result of this removal, minor engagements developed "in which the enemy suffered heavy losses."

Paris announced successful raiding operations around Maisons de Champagne and the repulse, with heavy losses, of two Germans attacks on the Verdun front.

German Flyers Shot Down.

Twenty-one German machines were shot down in aerial combats Thursday, Friday and Saturday, and four others were driven down in a damaged condition, the Paris war office reported. Important depots behind the German lines were effectively bombarded by French flyers who dropped altogether 5,360 kilograms of projectiles upon the Teuton works on Friday alone.

Lake Navigation Opens.

Chicago, April 16.—Navigation opened officially on the great lakes Sunday. There will no rush of boats for several weeks as the Straits of Mackinac are still blocked with ice.

U. S. PATROLS COAST SOUTH TO PATAGONIA

British and French Admiralty Body Completes Its Mission.

Washington, April 16.—The British and French admiralty commissions, headed respectively by Vice Admiral Browning and Rear Adirmal Grasset, have concluded their duties here and left to take ship.

Their conferences with high naval officials and directors of the state department have resulted in a complete accord with the United States navy being established. Not only is this government taking over completely the work of patrolling the North and South Atlantic from Canada to Patagonia, but other joint means of combatting the German submarine and raider menace have been agreed upon. For the time these decisions are held secret by the navy department. Only the putting into effect of the policies determined upon will indicate what the real results of the conference were.

GERMAN IS TAKEN AS SPY

Capt. Wm. Othmer, of German Army, Suspected of Dock Plot.

Galveston, Tex., April 16.—Captain William Othmer, an officer in the German army, who has been under surveillence of the department of justice for three years, has been arrested here.

H is charged with being one of the heads of the German spy system in the United States. He only recently arrived in Galveston from New York. He is suspected of plotting the destruction of docks and vessels in this harbor.

WILSON URGES UNITED ACTION

President Appeals to All to Render Nation Aid.

FARMERS HOLD NATION'S FATE

Everyone Is Urged to Aid in Effort Not Only to Produce But to Conserve Food—Those Who Serve Nation as Workers at Critical Time as Effective as Soldiers.

Washington, April 16.—The whole nation was called upon for war service in a formal proclamation issued by President Wilson. Declaring that "mere fighting will be fruitless," the President demanded the active support and co-operation of men and women in every walk of life—"a great international service army." From the farmer to the housewife, each individual was called upon to do his or her share in conserving and making available for war use the vast resources of the nation.

"The supreme test of the nation has come," said the President, "we must all speak, act and serve together."

Tells Greatest Needs.

The President declared that while the navy is rapidly being placed on an effective war footing and a great army is about to be created and equipped, "these are the simplest parts of the great task to which we have addressed ourselves." He declared that the first great thing to be done was to supply abundant food and not only for the United States and its fighting forces but for a large part of "the nations with whom we have now made common cause."

The imperative need for American ships was emphasized by the President, who declared that they must be built by the hundreds to carry vast quantities of supplies across the sea, "submarines or no submarines."

They must, he declared, carry to the people of England and France and Italy and Russia the things with which "they have usually supplied themselves but cannot now afford the men, the materials or the machinery to make."

Aiders as Effective as Soldiers.

"It is evident to every thinking man," said the proclamation, "that our industries, on the farms, in the shipyards, in the factories must be made more prolific and more efficient than ever and that they must be economically managed and better adapted to the particular requirements of our task than they have been, and what I want to say is that the men and women who devote their thought and their energy to these things will be serving the country and conducting the fight for peace and freedom just as truly and just as effectively as the men on the battlefield or in the trenches. The industrial forces of the country, men and women alike, will be a great national, a great international service army—notable and honored host engaged in the service of the nations and the world."

The President called on the farmers of the nation for an immediate increase in the production of food stuffs asserting that "upon the farmers of this country in large measure rests the fate of the war and the fate of the nation." He urged young and old alike to turn to the farms. He appealed particularly to the farmers of the south to plant abundant food crops as well as cotton.

Pledges U. S. Aid for Service.

The proclamation pledged the co-operation of the government of the United States and the several state governments in the campaign for service. It declared that they would assist the farmers to get adequate supplies and fertilizers. The President declared that the government would see to it that there was no manipulation of the nation's food supply, and that trade would continue as "unhampered as possible."

The middlemen of the nation were warned to forego unusual profits and to render patriotic and efficient service. The railroads of the country, managers and men, were urged to prevent any obstruction of the transportation facilities of the nation.

The motto "Small Profits and Quick Service" was prescribed by the proclamation for the merchant, and it called upon the shipbuilders, the miner and the manufacturer to give the best service in their power. The cultivation of food gardens was outlined by the President as one way to help. He called upon the housewives of the country to practice strict economy and to prevent waste.

DEATH TAKES W. C. THORNE

Strain of Overwork Fatal to Head of Montgomery Ward & Co.

Chicago, April 16.—William Cobb Thorne, for years general manager of Montgomery Ward & Co., and until recently its president, died of pneumonia at his residence, 4815 Drexel boulevard. He was fifty-two years old.

As chairman of the board of directors of Montgomery Ward & Co. three years ago he was instrumental in the reorganization and expansion of its policy and became its president. The strain of the business operations, however, was too much for him and he became the victim of a nervous breakdown from which he never fully recovered.

LANSING, April 16.

The house defeated the anti cigarette bill for the second time. The vote was forty-eight to twenty-one in favor of the bill, but the proponets lacked three votes of the necessary number to pass it. The action kills the bill for the session.

The time for thinking ourselves safe from foreign foe is past. The time of saying that the war will be over before we have had time to enter it or raise an army for foreign service is past. We are already in it. We are at war.

Our President cannot carry our burdens alone. He is working almost to the breaking point with the mass of detailed duties before him. His cabinet and department heads are working night and day speeding up their war machine ready for action. Congress is speeding up laws and passing bills [illegible] importance such as the war credit of $7,000,000,000, the largest yet passed by any nation at one time. The Universal Service bill to provide for an army is before Congress and will be disposed of in a few days. These are days of action and service. Uncle Sam expects every citizen to do his or her duty, not only expects it but demands it. Tecumseh people will be found in the fore-front and all we need is to know what and how we can help.

If you are a true American citizen you will do your duty to your country, no matter what that duty may be. It may be to serve under arms and may perhaps cost your lives; for thousands of lives have been sacrificed already and will yet before peace is declared. It may mean a sacrifice of money, labor or strength, but work we all will have to do. "Old Glory" has been carried to victory in every war we have yet entered and this, the biggest war of all times, will be no exception. We have answered the call, we are ready.

MOBS IN ARGENTINA MENACING GERMANS

Editor Hurt and Consulate Attacked in Outbreak.

Buenos Aires, April 16.—The German legation and consulate here have been attacked by a mob, as have the newspapers Deutsche La Plata Zeitung and La Union.

The windows of the buildings were broken. The police dispersed the manifestants, making numerous arrests. The editor of the German newspaper was wounded as were several of the demonstrators. The crowds stoned the chief of police when he endeavored to deliver a speech urging that they disperse.

There were repeated attempts to sack and burn German-owned property. Following an attempt to burn the newspaper Union the mob started for other property. As the gendarmes arrived the crowd retreated, but still shouting and singing "The Marseillaise."

The entire force of police and gendarmes in the city was on duty. The gendarmes drew their swords. They drove the mobs before them by using only the flat of their weapon, however. The scenes were probably the wildest ever witnessed in Buenos Aires. Streets were packed by wildly clamoring throngs.

The government has issued a statement denouncing the anti-German demonstrations and announcing that stringent measures would be taken in case of recurrence.

FRANK ROCKEFELLER DEAD

Younger Brother of Oil King Was Latter's Foe to End.

Cleveland, April 16.—Frank Rockefeller, brother of John D., died at his apartment in the Hollenden hotel here. Death followed an operation performed several months ago.

Frank Rockefeller's life was punctured by an intense hatred for his multimillionaire brother. From the beginning of an estrangement in 1898 over money matters until the end he refused to entertain a charitable attitude toward John D. "There's not the slightest possibility of a reconciliation," he said no later than last September. "I said I'm through in 1898 and I mean it. I'm through."

"DAYLIGHT SAVING" COMING

Congress Will Be Urged to Set Back the Country's Clocks.

Chicago, April 16.—"Daylight saving," setting back the country's clocks, has become more than a probability. Joseph H. Defrees, vice president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, announces that he is completing the personel of a committee to urge the immediate passage of such a measure by congress. Practically nearly every business organization in the country has approved the plan according to Mr. Defrees.

CLARA KIMBALL YOUNG IN "THE FOOLISH VIRGIN"
SELZNICK PICTURES

AT THE BRADLEY OPERA HOUSE, FRIDAY, APRIL 20

MISS CLARA KIMBALL YOUNG IN "THE FOOLISH VIRGIN"

Many of our readers will remember with pleasure the exceptionally fine photoplay "The Common Law" in which Miss Clara Kimball Young, the charming Michigan screen star, appeared at the Bradley Opera House, last New Year's Day. This week Friday, April 20th, our readers will have an opportunity of seeing this same charming screen star in her latest production "The Foolish Virgin" direct from its run at Detroit.

Miss Young's new photoplay is an exceptionally strong drama and contains some of this artist's best work. As in "The Common Law" Miss Young has been aided in making the production a splendid example of motion picture art by the masterly direction of Albert Cappellani, her director, and the presence of a superlative cast of immensely popular screen stars. Conway Tearle, who made such a decided hit in the role opposite Miss Young in "The Common Law", will be seen to particular advantage in the leading male part in this new production.

"The Foolish Virgin" is taken from the well known book of that name by Thomas Dixon. Mr. Dixon has international repute as the author of some of the most stirring novels in modern literature and is particularly well known to motion picture patrons as the author of "The Clansman" from which "The Birth of a Nation" was taken.

"The Foolish Virgin" is expected to prove a worthy successor to Miss Young's former offering and is well worth an effort to see. "The Foolish Virgin" will be presented at the Bradley for the one night only, Friday (this week) April 20. Continuous show, all the evening.

ANNUAL PARISH MEETING OF ST. PETER'S CHURCH

The annual parish meeting of St. Peter's church was held Monday evening in the Parish House. There was a good attendance and much interest was manifested.

The new rector, Rev. James D. Widdefield, opened the meeitng with prayer.

The reports of the treasurers of the various departments of church work were very encouraging and showed that good progress had been made during the year, despite the fact that the church had been without a rector for six monhs.

The church treasurer's report showed that all bills to date were paid $200.00 had been applied on the church indebtedness and there is still a balance on hand of about $75.

The report of the Sunday-school showed a good enrollment and attendance and a nice working balance in the treasury.

The Ladies' Guild report showed that they had been active during the year. They have paid up all their missionary money, conributed to the church and had a tidy balance on hand.

The Altar Guild report was the banner report. They started the year with 68 cents in the treasury, have kept up all usual expenses, contributed $100.00 toward wiping out the church indebtedness and still have a good balance in the treasury.

The election of a vestry resulted as follows: T. C. Harris, T. W. Mingay, W. E. Bly, Lester Rogers, C. A. Barber, C. F. Patterson, E. T. LeBaron, I. C. Hayden, Floyd Freeman, Geo. B. Hines, L. E. Temple and B. J. Slater.

Warden Otto Rohm of Ann Arbor [illegible] Merlow Packard Leonard Kemp, [illegible] Bartholomew and Arthur [illegible] spearing fish on the Quaker Mill Pond. The boys had had splendid luck and had a number of the finny tribe already landed.

The warden arrested the men and they were taken before Judge Hosmer this morning. Five black bass weighing from 2 to 2½ lbs apeice were exhibited in court as evidence. The judge fined the men $10.00 and costs amounting to $3.45 apeice or the alternative of 30 days in the county jail. The men will pay the fine. The fish were turned over to Deputy John B Smith with instructions to deliver the to the sick and needy of our village. m

Leon Fagan, who has been seriously ill with scarlet fever and has undergone several operations on his throat, is reported as somewhat better.

[illegible] Lenack & Co. have quite an unique window for the times, made up of articles they have for sale in the store. A length of stovepipe mounted on hose reel wheels and brush hooks, with flags flying, makes a good representation of a cannon. A stand of small guns and other weapons make up quite a warlike scene.

WIT AND WISDOM

There was a large attendance of the Wit and Wisdom club and their guests, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. F. S. Turner, Monday evening, this being "President's Night" and the closing meeting for the season.

The meeting opened with singing "America."

The subject for the evening's program was "Our National Parks." and some eight o ften had papers on the subject. It was quite wonderful to hear and know that we had so many places of unusual beauty and interest in our United States, and it was impressed upon all, that the sightseer does not need to cross the water for beautiful scenery.

Several musical numbers were given: Piano solos by Mrs. Wilfred Waldron and Miss Gertrude Turner, a vocal solo by Mrs. Eugene Rosacrans accompanied by Mrs. Ella Hodges. Mrs. Rosacrans responded to an encore in a very pleasing manner. Music in the grafonola filled in the intervals.

At the close of the program ice crea and cake was served, after which came roll call with suggestions for topics for the next year's program. These were many and varied, and if all were considered would furnish food for thought for several years instead of one.

A test of memory followed. Each one to supply missing words in the much used proverbs of the day.

At a late hour the crowd dispersed; each feeling that the eveinng had been a very interesting one.

The club banquet will be held Friday evening, May 11 in the parlors of the Baptist church.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the disease portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing and, when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflamation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

PATRIOTIC MEETING

BRADLEY OPERA HOUSE FILLED WITH TECUMSEH PEOPLE EAGER TO LEARN WHAT THEY COULD DO TO AID THEIR COUNTRY

300 Pledges for Membership signed by Tecumseh People, Which is the Largest Number Received at any Patriotic Meeting yet held in Lenawee County.

Major John Bonner and Stuart Perry outline organization, which is being perfected in Lenawee County.

Tecumseh people turned out en masse Sunday afternoon to attend the Patriotic Meeting and to answer their call to duty. Our people were anxious to learn what this organization starting in our county seat really is and what was expected of them. When it was made clear, they answered the call almost to a person. There is no question about the loyalty of Tecumseh people. They stand back of our President and expect our Government to do its full duty and in return pledge themselves to do all in their power to assist in carrying on the war and defeating the Imperial German Government.

Before the meeting a drum corp with Levi Hayden in charge marched up and down the street playing martial music. "Old Glory," fluttering to the breeze, was carried proudly by one of their number.

The meeting was called to order by Gen. F. B. Wood. Upon the stage, seated behind the committee and speakers, were twenty members of the G. A. R. In the background was a picture of President Wilson upon which were printed the words, "Stand by Our President." About this picture was draped "Old Glory."

The meeting opened with the singing of "America" led by Mrs. R. S. Moore with Mrs F. B. Wood presiding at the piano.

Rev. W. A. Rex next offered a prayer invoking Divine blessing upon our President, our Country and the meeting to follow.

Gen. Wood made a rousing introductory speech in which he appealed to the loyalty of Tecumseh people, stating that few people realized we were really a nation at war... "Old Glory" is just a little piece of bunting, but the thing it stands for is sacred to the American people. He also enumerated what the different colors stand for. At the close of his remarks he called upon Chas. Burridge, president of the Tecumseh Commerce Club to preside as chairman of the meeting.

Chairman Burridge stated that he did not wish to take up any time by making a speech himself for others were present with a message to the people. He first called upon Major John Bonner of Adrian.

Major Bonner told of the movement which is sweeping Lenawee county and known as the Patriotic League of Lenawee County. The object of the League is to enroll the citizens for service for the Government and the pledge that members are asked to sign reads as follows:

"I hereby apply for membership in the Patriotic League of Lenawee County and pledge my allegiance to the Stars and Stripes and my unreserved support to the President of the United States and will do all in my power to assist in carrying on the war and defeating the Imperial German Government."

A few months ago there were no less than twenty patriotic societies throughout the United States, all working for a common cause, but working at cross purposes. This the Government is planning to do away with by making the one do the work of the twenty. The League has as its head the Commander-in-Chief of the United States Army, the President of the United States. Next in authority are the army and navy heads, next the divisional heads of the army who command the [illegible] army departments throughout the United States, Chicago being the headquarters of our army department.

The object of the League is to aid the Government in every way possible and to take our orders from the department heads through our local League officers. This does not mean that all members are to enlist in actual service but rather to do the citizens' work at home to aid in carrying on the war. The army will be raised by such means as the Government will determine, the department plan before Congress being selective conscription.

An executive committee composed of nine will be chosen who will have charge of the work of the League and a central committee will also be chosen to take care of the details. This committee will consist of one member from each voting precinct in the county.

Major Bonner devoted himself to the work as exemplified in the Patriotic League and said that the Government only recognized three organizations, the Patriotic League, the Red Cross and the Y. M. C. A., the latter two being entirely separate from the former.

Pledge cards were circulated and it was announced later that 300 were signed; the largest number received at any meeting yet held in the county. Every man living in the county will be asked to sign and if he does not his reason for not doing so will be ascertained.

Stuart H. Perry, editor of the Adrian Telegram, was the next speaker. Mr. Perry's speech was a ringing appeal to Americans to do their duty. He pointed out the magnitude of the present struggle and why it was our duty to aid the Allies in conquering our common enemy, the German Government. He likened this war to a hurricane such as he had once witnessed in the Carribean Sea. Telling of how it appeared first in a gentle ripple on the surface of the waters which lasted for days, the sky being clear and apparently pleasant, then through various stages until the waters were piled mountain high and a gale which swept everything before it except the strongest built buildings, how it would suddenly abate and be still again only to commence later with renewed fury and finally, after it had spent itself, die gradually away. These hurricanes only appear once in about 100 years, and so it is with this great war across the waters.

He took for his text the pledge that appeared upon the cards which had been passed through the audience and discussed the sentences. He appealed to his hearers to stand by the President and suggested that this community get busy and wire their senators and representatives in Washington to support the Selective Conscription Bill now pending in Congress. He also paid his respects to Senator LaFollette and his kind in Congress, called them "wooden heads," etc., but claimed that they were to be pitied rather than condemned.

It would need a great army and navy organised in this country and all of the resources at our command to conquer Germany and it must be done. He pointed out some of the dangers which would befall us if we don't do our full share in this war. The troops in Europe have been fighting our battles, shedding their blood for us and holding them back until we should arrive to take our part in the war. We must organize and mobilize our patriotism. Get busy!

J. D. Shull was next called upon and in a short speech ringing with the patriotism of the '60s pledged his services to his Country and President, also to the principles of universal service which seemed to be the best plan of raising an army.

Rev. W. A. Rex was the closing speaker of the afternoon and exploded a little fireworks in denial of certain rumors which had come to him in regard to his attitude on the war. He rounded out his standing in a clear unmistakable way which left no doubt in the minds of his hearers that he was a true red-blooded American and had little use for the Kaiser and his bunch. He expressed his admiration for President Wilson and his faith in the pilot at the helm. His remarks were received with a burst of enthusiasm.

The meeting closed with the singing of the "Star Spangled Banner" and the Benediction by Rev. Rex.

RED CROSS

Dr. F. A. Perry of Adrian Addressed Meeting at the New Royal Theatre, Sunday 6 p. m.

Much Enthusiasm Shown.

Tecumseh people are becoming aroused, and are eager to assist the Government in any way possible. This fact was demonstrated by the meeting at the New Royal theatre, Sunday evening.

Dr. F. A. Perry, managing head of the Red Cross movement in Lenawee county, was present and gave a stirring talk in the interest of the work.

Dr. Perry stated that the United States is far behind other nations in respect to the size and work of the Red Cross. Germany, with whom we are at war, has long been strong in this direction and had a membership of 1,125,000 at the breaking out of the war. Japan's membership is to-day about 1,800,000. and the other great countries are largely in excess of ours, which numbered 250,000 at the time war was declaired with Germany.

Dr. Perry announced that the President, who by virtue of his office is head of the Society in America, has sent out a call for 1,000,000 members. The department heads of the organization, feeling the great necessity of the work, are planning to double and trible the number.

The Red Cross work is entirely seperate from all other work and its field and scope is world wide. It does emergency work in times of peace and in times of war is indispensable, for its field and hospital work is most necessary to the army.

Lack of time and space prohibit us from further details in this issue, but we will deal more largely with the object and activities of the work in a later issue.

Dr. Perry has promised that old Lenawee will roll up 2,000 members and thinks she will do far better than this. It is hoped that Lenawee will give the largest per cent of members in ratio to her inhabitants of any county in the state and perhaps the nation.

A local organization under the head of the Lenawee Chapter was organized as follows:

Mrs. B. J. Pulver, Chairman; Mrs. G. A. Rathbun, 1st Assistant chairman; Charles Burridge, 2nd assistant chairman; Guy E. Nemire, Secretary; H. S. Temple, Treasurer.

The committee went to Adrian Monday to look into the matter more thoroughly and get in closer touch with the work. A meeting was called Monday evening and plans were discussed for an active campaign. The old Post Office building was secured for headquarters. Dr. Hartzog was chosen capmaign manager with Rev. W. A. Rex, assistant.

EASTER SERVICE AT M. E. CHURCH

At 10 a. m. the program planned for Easter was given under the supervision of Dr. E. D. Brown Superintendent of the Sunday school. A very interesting morning was enjoyed by those present.

WHAT'S THE REASON

Many Tecumseh People in Poor Health Without Knowing the Cause.

There are scores of people who drag out a miserable existence without realizing the cause of their suffering. Day after day they are racked with backache and headache; suffer from nervousness, dizziness, weakness, languor and depression. Perhaps the kidneys have fallen behind in their work of filtering the blood and that may be the root of the trouble. Look to your kidneys, assist them in their work—give them the help they need. You can use no more highly recommended remedy than Doan's Kidney Pills—endorsed by people all over the country and by your neighbors in Tecumseh.

Mrs. Alex Reid, Maiden Lane, Tecumseh, says: "My kidneys were weak and acted irregularly and I felt dull and languid. I tired easily, too. My back ached. I used Doan's Kidney Pills, procured at Pulver's Drug Store, and they relieved the backaches and helped me in every way."

Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Reid had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y. adv

LAWRENCE ELLIS

Lawrence the little son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Ellis while visiting with his mother and sister with relatives near Grass Lake, met with sudden death Friday afternoon from the discharge of a shot gun. He had been left with a cousin while their parents went into Jackson, with strict orders not to let him go to the barn for fear of accident. Later he went to the barn leaving Lawrence alone. Hearing the discharge of the gun he rushed to the house where he found Lawrence dead upon the floor, the gun lying near. He instantly called the neighbors and a doctor, but all too late, as death must have been instantaneous.

The little lad was but seven years old and the wonder is how he found the gun and how the accident occurred unless he was dragging the gun by the barrel and the lock got caught on the floor.

The body was brought to his home Saturday. The funeral was held Monday at 2 p. m., Rev. W. B. Hartzog officiating. Burial in Brookside.

I spent a couple of hours the other day in a shoe factory.

"Sometimes not less than $20," he replied.

What the Peon Likes.

The peon of southern Mexico has various appetizers that are unknown to the peons of the north. One of the queerest is "water wheat," which is not exactly what its name suggests, but the eggs of a kind of fly. The "water wheat" fields are ponds in which the peon places bundles of reeds a few feet apart so that their tops are just above the surface. On these reeds, or rushes, the insects deposit their eggs in incredible numbers. The peon then removes the rushes and shakes off the crop.

The Mexicans make the eggs, which resemble fine fish roe, into small cakes and sell them in the markets. The purchasers eat them either as we eat cheese or mixed with cornmeal and the eggs of fowls. The peons also eat the insects, which are about the size of our houseflies. Their method of preparing them is to pound a quantity of the flies into a paste and boil them with cornhusks.

Christmas After All

And a Very Happy One

By CLARISSA MACKIE

The old farmhouse snuggled against the side of the hill as if for warmth and protection against the driving snowstorm. The wind howled among the bare branched locust trees and whistled down the wide chimneys.

Inside the house the low ceiled kitchen was warm from the glowing stove and from the big lamp on the supper table. James Drayton and his wife, Hannah, had finished the evening meal and were sitting quietly before the uncleared table. They were listening for the sound of sleighbells and the shrill whistle of the R. F. D. man. Tonight they should receive letters from their married children telling them whether or not they would be down to the old home nest for Christmas. Bob lived in New York with his wife and one child, while Ellen, the only daughter, lived at Sheerbrook, only twenty-five miles across the island from her parents.

Jingle, jingle, jingle!

"There he is!" cried Hannah, nervously pressing the gray hair back from her temples. "Oh, James, I hope they are coming!"

Presently her husband's form emerged from the flying flakes. He stamped his feet on the doorstep and came into the house, his broad shoulders powdered with white. In his hand were two letters.

Hannah began fitting on her glasses and tearing at the envelope in her hand. As she read the letter her chin trembled. "Ellen can't come, father," she quavered. "She says Asa's folks expect them all over there and they're sending a box to us and hope we won't mind very much." Tears were falling fast now.

"Bob—Bob—says they can't come either," said Hannah at last. "Louie's folks are coming to spend Christmas with them, and she don't know how to entertain them all in her little flat, either. He says they are sending a box down. Oh, James," she suddenly cried, "I don't want their boxes! I want them, the children I raised. It will be so lonesome without them. It won't be Christmas!"

James Drayton tried to comfort her, but his face worked strangely. He told her that it would still be Christmas, but that the selfishness of others might mar it a little. For should not these children have planned so that their parents should not be left alone on this day of days?

The next day would be Christmas eve, and there was much to do in preparation for the holiday, for James Drayton insisted that the usual preparations be made for the day. He had spent a sleepless night, but in the morning there was a look of stern determination on his face.

"Well, Hannah, do you feel like entertaining a bunch of children today?" he said. "Children that ain't got no folks—that is, no folks to make Christmas for them."

"Who in the world do you mean, James Drayton?" she demanded. Before he could answer she added quickly, "You mean the Flecks?"

He nodded, watching her face.

"And you know we haven't been on speaking terms with Cousin Peter Fleck's folks since—since—he cheated you out of that forty acre pasture?" she asked breathlessly.

"I know it, Hannah. I know that Peter lost it all before he died and that Ada Fleck is having a hard time trying to bring up those four children They're nice children too. The oldest girl—Beatrice—makes me think of Ellen," he added reflectively.

"Ada's been doing sewing," said Hannah, "and I heard she was taking home work from the bag factory. I expect it will be a poor Christmas for them all."

"I met little Fred, and he told me that they didn't expect Santa Claus to stop at their house this year."

"Will you go after them, James, or shall I go?" asked Hannah.

James Drayton smiled down at her, and, suddenly stooping from his tall height, he kissed her lips. A warm blush invaded her faded cheeks.

"We will both go after them," he decided. "I'm going out now to harness up."

The door slammed after him. Hannah gave one glance out into the snowy world outside. The sun was coming out, and everything was a-sparkle with reflected glory. She hastily banked the fire in the stove, dressed herself warmly and, locking the door, went out to the barn, where old Gray was harnessed to the double cutter.

"You'll have to cut a Christmas tree, father," she said gayly.

"I'll go out before dark and do that," he said as they started off.

Little Fred saw them coming and ran to open the door for them. There was a little embarrassment at first, for the Draytons and the Flecks had not been on speaking terms for many years. But James Drayton's kindness and Hannah's sympathy soon bridged the gap, and when the invitation came for the whole family to pack themselves into the sleigh the children broke into excited clamor.

"Oh, mother, please!" they coaxed.

Ada Fleck smiled through her tears.

"It's real good and forgiving of you Hannah and James," she sobbed. "After all that's happened we couldn't expect anything of you at all. I'm trying to impress upon the children that they must work hard to pay back what their father"—

"Tut, tut!" warned James. "Let's not talk about past mistakes now. Now, who is coming to spend Christmas with us?"

"All of us," cried Ada. "Run now, all of you, and get ready."

"We will stop for you on our way back," said James. "Hannah and I have got to do some Christmas shopping. We will stop along about 1 o'clock."

That was a very exciting Christmas eve for the Draytons after all. Down in the village they had to buy little gifts for all the children, and Hannah's motherly eye had rapidly appraised the wardrobe of the family, so that they could remember them with substantial gifts as well as toys. It was long after 1 o'clock when old Gray and the double cutter drew up before the Flecks' cottage once more. The little family was waiting, dressed in their best—a rather shabby best indeed.

It was a pleasant ride home indeed, and they did not know until afterward that the villagers noted and commented upon the reconciliation.

When Ada was in the pleasant sitting room watching the cedar log blazing on the hearth and sending up little blue spirals of fragrant smoke she fairly cried. Later Hannah, tiptoeing into the room, found her fast asleep in the big Boston rocker before the fire. The two younger children were coasting down the hill behind the barn. They had found Bob's old sled in the attic. Dan, the oldest boy, helped Mr. Drayton put up the horse and sleigh and feed the chickens and then went forth on that mysterious errand of "cutting the tree."

Inside the kitchen Beatrice, the girl who was "like Ellen," helped Hannah Drayton prepare the chickens for the next day's roast and cook the hearty supper that they were all hungry for. Beatrice pretended not to notice when Mrs. Drayton called her "Ellen," for she knew that the elder woman was reliving past Christmas eves spent with her own daughter. Mr. Drayton also forgot and called Dan by Bob's name.

It was quite late before the children went to bed, and finally the whole house was asleep with the gayly decorated tree in the dark sitting room waiting for the first peep of day to come in order to reveal its pleasant surprises.

On the floor were two boxes unopened. The station agent had brought them the night before. One was from Ellen and the other was from Bob. Hannah had cried a little in secret at the thought that this was to be the first Christmas without her children. But she chided herself for being selfish and tried to look forward to next year when it might be their turn to have a family reunion.

Still, talking the next morning in their bedroom, while the happy shouts of the children from the sitting room testified to their delight in the tree and its gifts, they agreed that if Ellen and Bob had come home for Chrismas they would never have dreamed of inviting the Flecks, and there would not have been this reunion and this happiness all around.

In the afternoon the children were to have the kitchen in which to make molasses candy and pop some corn. In the meantime there were sleds to try out on the hill, new clothes to try on and new books to read. Mrs. Drayton and Mrs. Fleck cooked the dinner and Beatrice set the long table.

They were just about to sit down when there came the rumbling sound of the station stage. The wheels creaked over the crusty snow and came to a stop in the yard.

The whole family streamed out on the front porch to see who had arrived. James Drayton and his wife pressed eagerly forward when a woman emerged, a woman who proved to be Ellen, and a man who was none other than Ellen's husband, and there followed Bob and Louie, his little wife, and their little one.

"Merry Christmas!" cried Ellen as she flew to her father's arms.

"Merry Christmas!" shouted Bob as he picked up his little mother. "Why, we got to thinking about it, and I telephoned to sister, and we agreed that it was going to be a pretty mean trick to leave you here all alone at Christmas, so we stole away for a few hours to spend it with you. Who are all these folks?"

"Come inside, and I'll tell you all about it," said James Drayton, leading the way into the dining room.

That was a never to be forgotten occasion. For the Draytons it was an unexpected joy coming after a great disappointment. They had resigned themselves to a Christmas spent without their dear ones, and now the children had come, after all, to round out the perfect day.

As for the Flecks, it marked a change in their lives. Ellen's husband became interested in Dan and offered him a place in his store at Sheerbrook, and it was arranged that Ada and the other three children were to spend the rest of the winter in the Draytons' home Bob and Ellen talked together before they parted that night. "Next year," said Bob gravely, "we mustn't wait until the last minute before deciding. We've got to see that all the fathers and mothers on all sides of the family are provided with a happy time before we think of ourselves."

"And by that time," smiled Ellen, "We will be quite happy ourselves."

That Christmas proved to be the beginning of many new things for many people, which is as it should be, for Christmas was a beginning—and always will be.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Hot Drinks and Cancer.

A conclusion now rather universally accepted is that drinking hot drinks and eating hot food are causes of cancer. When fluids are taken into the stomach they do not mix with the other stomach contents, at least not completely. There is a tendency of fluids to pass along a track called "the gastric gullet." This gullet is a track from the left or cardiac end of the stomach along the lesser curvature to the right or pyloric end. This has been termed the "highway for fluids." When a man drinks hot coffee the fluid travels along this "highway for fluids." Seventy-nine per cent of the cancers of the stomach are located along this "highway for fluids."

The drinking of whisky also is a cause, since it, too, burns the tissues along this "highway for fluids."

Cancer of the "highway" is less frequent in women, because they sip their coffee and soup, whereas men gulp them down.

THE RED CROSS

W. B. Hartzog.

This article is prepared to help those who are uncertain as to the obligation they assume when they enroll as members of the Tecumseh Branch of the Lenawee County Red Cross Chapter. It is very proper that you should be fully informed as to what to do and what is expected of you. There are very few people who will hesitate for a moment to enroll and contribute a dollar or more to this important cause if they understand it.

1. The Red Cross society has its headquarters at Washington City. The President of the United States is the president of the Red Cross society. Wm H. Taft is vice president The official staff consists of some of the most eminent men and women in our county.

2. While the American Red Cross society will be chiefly employed in relieving the needs and sufferings of Americans, it should be remembered that it is a friend to all and an enemy to none. The Red Cross badge is not a hostile emblem. If a wounded soldier of a hostile nation should fall into the hands of our troops, our Red Cross members would give them kind care and careful attention.

3. The Red Cross society does a vast work in times of peace as well as in times of war. Had it not been for the Red Cross society, the victims of the Dayton, Ohio, flood would have suffered vastly more than they did. The same could be said of the victims of the San Francisco earthquake. Since 1915 the American Red Cross has aided in 86 disasters and expended more than $15,000,000 in money and relief supplies. It is a work of love and mercy.

4. The Red Cross society enrolls members in three classes:

Class A—Those who especially desire to go wherever the American army goes. If troops are sent to back the Allies in France or Belgium, those enrolled in Class A would accompany the army to those lands.

Class B—Those who are to serve anywhere in this country with the army or in case of some great disaster, to be sent to any part of our land.

Class C—Those who desire to be members by paying the membership fee and remain at home and help. Comparatively few enroll in Class A or B, but thousands enroll in Class C. Those in Class C cannot be called into field service. They bind themselves to nothing except their membership fee and such home work as they can do. No one need have the slightest fear of being summoned to unexpected service.

5. No one is allowed to do Red Cross service but Red Cross members. The government will not permit any volunteer help. Your name must be received, sent to Washington, approved, accepted and enrolled. The reason is that relief work in the army is responsible work, a sacred task, and no meddling is permitted. There is too much opportunity for treachery in indiscriminate service.

Lenawee County Chapter cannot be recognized until it has an enrollment of 3,000 members. We have a local branch office at Tecumseh located in in the room formerly occupied by the postoffice. It will be open most of the time. You can enroll there any time.

The local official staff is as follows:

Chairman—Mrs B. J. Pulver
1st Vice Chairman—Mrs. G. A. Rathbun
2nd " " —Chas Burridge
Secretary—Guy E. Nemire
Treasurer—H. S. Temple
Campaign Manager—W. B. Hartzog
Assistant—W. A Rex

The chief work before us now is to secure a large membership. Surely no patriotic citizen will srand aloof from this urgent cause We do not know how soon some of our sons or immediate friends will be in need of our assistance.

The following are the classes of membership:

Annual member, $1.00

Subscribing member, which includes one year's subscription to the Red Cross Magazine, $2 00

There are three other classes concerning which you can inquire at the office.

You can make as large a donation as you like. Half of the annual membership fee goes to the National Headquarters, the other half remains with the local Chapter.

TRAINING CAMP FOR OFFICERS

General Fred B. Wood, local chairman of the Military Training Camps Association, was notified Monday morning by the State Secretary that training camps will be opened by the government, beginning May 8th, for the training of candidates for non commission warrants and for commissions in the Reserve Corps of the new army.

The Association was organized by the government, for whatever purposes of aid it might render in preparation for war. Its first duty was to obtain recruits for camps that the government then intended to maintain this summer for all citizens, desiring training on the so-called Plattsburg plan. As soon as Congress had declared a condition of war existing, the plans for these camps were abandoned, as, in the organization of the enlarged army, the officers of the regular army could not be spared for instruction in the training camps.

However, because of the urgent necessity of using civilian appointees as officers in the new army, the government has arranged for camps for the training of prospective officers, commissioned or non-commissioned, as above stated.

Within a day or two the local chairman will have full and official information, and all young men of this locality, who are desirous of commissions or non-commission warrants will have an immediate opportunity for training at the expense of the government.

COMMUNICATION

The following letter is received by the Editor from Representative Mark R. Bacon and alludes to a set of our resolutions which were sent him last week in the interest of the universal military training bill now before Congress. The resolutions were signed by some 28 prominent citizens of Tecumseh:—

My Dear Mr. Turner:—

Resolutions from citizens of Tecumseh, favoring universal military training, were duly received.

Kindly inform the signers that I presented the same in the House of Representatives, and they were referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

I was much pleased to hear from you and your Tecumseh friends. With best regards, I remain,

Sincerely Yours,
Mark R. Bacon.

MASS MEETING

Those in charge of the Red Cross work in Tecumseh announce that there will be a mass meeting of the citizens of Tecumseh and the country round about Sunday evening, April 29th, at the opera house at 7:30 o'clock Dr. F. A. Perry and Judge Harry Larwell will speak. A Red Cross quartette from Adrian will sing.

On Monday morning following, a large force of workers will make a complete canvass of the town and township for membership in the Red Cross society.

The Tecumseh branch of the Lenawee County Red Cross society is well under way. Headquarters have been opened in the old Post Office building and a committee of ladies are in charge there at all times, to receive applicants for membership and to answer all questions about the work. It is reported that the movement is well started and that people everywhere are showing a willingness to help. Without any great effort 106 members have been secured. Later an active campaign will be started to comb Tecumseh township with a fine tooth comb. The organization needs 1,000 members in the township and we believe when the final round is made it will be near this number.

A great army will be raised in this country and when the army is ready for action, the Red Cross must be ready to follow it to the front. There is work for all of us to do and our efforts directed along the lines laid down by the Red Cross will count much in aiding our boys at the front. During the Spanish American War our Red Cross was weak and gave very little assistance to the army. We don't want this to happen again.

The Red Cross is under Government control in times of war. No person not a member is allowed to do any work for the society. Orders are sent to the various chapters throughout the country from Washington and all work is conducted with military precision.

We have today about 25 base hospitals in the United States, two being located in Detroit. These hospitals require about six acres of ground and costs about $40,000 each. Each has 500 beds, a corps of 300 doctors and a large number of Red Cross nurses. Each bed is equipped with springs, mattress, 6 pairs of sheets, comforts, blankets, pillows and pillow cases, bath robes, 3 sets of pajamas, slippers and many other things necessary for the comfort of the sick, injured and convalescent soldier. Medicines, surgical instruments and, in fact, everything used in a modern hospital must be provided.

Twenty-five base hospitals are now ready but the department are calling for forty and many more will be needed. The number is regulated by the size of the new army and from every indication this army will be numbered by the millions.

The above is only one example of the work of the Red Cross. The work to be carried on locally will be recruiting members, a portion of the membership fee staying here for our local work and the balance going to Washington for National work. If our army goes to the front there will be plenty of work for our local society, such as sewing, preparing bandages, collecting supplies, etc. and many hands will be called into service.

Practically all of our members will enroll under Class C which entitles them to work locally only.

While the greatest needs for service will be to aid our army, still the Red Cross holds out a helping hand in all local emergency cases, such as caring for sufferers in times of railroad wrecks, fires, accidents, etc.

We are all a little hazy in regard to the general plan for work of the Red Cross. We have known of its work in a general way but lack many particulars. We do know that the Red Cross is a mighty organization which has spread to every country on earth and is today one of the greatest agencies for good that the world knows of. Information is to be secured from headquarters as fast as the department can get it in shape to send it out and later our local branch will be able to answer any question that may arise.

Your time and money will not be wasted if given to the Red Cross. Boost it for they need your help. Every nook and corner of this great country are getting behind this movement and "Old Lenawee" is prepared to make a big showing.

BRAZIL SEIZES BIG LINERS

46 Lying in Ports Are Taken by Government.

RIO JANEIRO — The seizure Rio Janeiro, April 18.—The seizure of forty-six German ships has been completed without incident.

The vessels aggregate 240,779 tons, ranging from the Hamburg-American liner Blucher, 12,500 tons, formerly in the American transatlantic service, to a vessel of 1,103 tons. At Rio de Janeiro there were fifteen vessels; at Pernambuco, twelve; Santos, five; Bahia, four; Paraiba, three; Para, two; Rio Grande, two, and at Santa Catarina, Paranagua and Maranham, one each. Thirty three of the vessels are more than 4,000 tons each.

Our Modern Factory Spoon.

For our modern factory made spoon the stock is first rolled and cross rolled to get the graded thickness that is needed. The spoon outline is then obtained by means of cutting out dies. The blanks thus formed are struck up by another set of dies, which ornament the front and back and even bend the spoon into its proper shape, at the same time stamping the required "sterling" and the maker's mark. If a spoon is made by this latest of processes the sterling mark can be found raised on the surface instead of incised, as was the case when the marking was done separately.

GARLINGHOUSE GARAGE MAKES EXTENSIVE IMPROVEMENTS

Business has Outgrown Present Accommodations.

When Complete it will be One of the Finest in this Section of the State.

A great many of our business houses have made extensive improvements this spring and, not to be outdone by others, the Garlinghouse Garage have commenced to enlarge and improve their place of business.

They have long felt the need of more room for their rapidly increasing business and auto service and have decided to do away with the 10c hitch and devote all of the space to autos. The sheds back of the brick Livery barn are being torn away and will be opened up into the garage. The south opening to the Garage will be closed and this space will be remodeled to be used as a show room and office, the present entrance to the 10c hitch will be used exclusively for autos. The office and display room will have a frontage of about 60 feet and extend back well into the building. A feature of this department will be the rest room which will be installed for ladies. Toilet rooms will also be provided.

A much larger line of auto accessories will be carried to take care of the ever increasing demands in this department.

When complete the Garage proper will have a depth of 140 ft. by a width of 95 ft. A cement floor will be laid to cover the entire space.

Mr. Garlinghouse will also install several private auto lockers thus securing absolute security to auto owners. The Garage will be equipped with several wash racks and a steam heating plant will be installed so that the plant will be heated thoroughly in the winter.

Free automatic air will be on tap at all times. When completed, the garage will have storage room for 100 cars over winter.

In the rear a large space will be set aside for repair work of all kinds and this department will be in charge of Albert VanDoren, who will be equipped to handle all of the ills of the auto game. Competent help will be employed to give prompt service to the public.

A new feature will be the Willard Service Station for the repairing, charging and overhauling of all makes of batteries. A complete vulcanizing plant will be added with all modern and up-to-date equipment for the repairing and vulcanizing of both tubes and casings.

One of the useful features of the business has been their auto livery service, which will be carried on as usual. Prompt attention will be given to day and night calls.

French Capture 10,000 Men in Opening Smash.

BATTLE IS ON 300-MILE LINE

Nivelle on First Day of New Drive Advances on 25-Mile Front from Soissons to Rheims—Also Enters Second Line Trenches in Alsace—Hindenburg Prepares Retirement.

PARIS — The French began an attack after several days' artillery preparation between Soissons and Rheims. Several German lines were carried and more than 10,000 Germans were taken prisoner.

The official announcement of this success, issued by the war office, describes the fighting as being of the utmost violence.

The attack was on a front of more than twenty-five miles, every inch of which was fortified to the limit of German military science and caution.

Between Soissons and Craonne the whole German first position fell into the power of General Nivelle's forces. East of Craonne the French occupied the enemy's second position south of Juvincourt. Farther to the south the advancing French carried their line as far as the outskirts of Bermericourt and up to the Aisne canal at Loivre.

Battle on 300-Mile Front.

LONDON, ENG.—At dawn Monday, just as the battle of Arras was a week old, the whole rest of the 300 mile front from the North sea to the Swiss border which had more or less complacently looked on the great struggle between Lens and St. Quentin, leaped suddenly into life. At this hour a general Anglo-French offensive along the whole line is in full swing.

British Take Villages.

Further progress toward Lens was reported by British headquarters as was the capture of the village of Villerat, southeast of Hargicourt on the St. Quentin front, which was thus straightened out considerably.

Both Lens and St. Quentin are in flames.

The advance northwest of St. Quentin brought the British to within a mile and a half of the St. Quentin-Cambrai line. Among the positions taken by the attackers in the last twenty-four hours is one known as the "three savages" east of Gricourt, the name being particularly appropriate in view of the character of the fighting there.

TRAITORS: TAKE WARNING!

President Wilson Proclaims That Severe Penalties Await Them.

WASHINGTON, D. C. — President Wilson issued a proclamation through the state department pointing out what treason is and the penalty as provided by the constitution, the criminal code and court decisions.

In closing his proclamation Wilson says: "I hereby proclaim and warn all citizens of the United States and aliens owing allegiance to the government of the United States, to abstain from committing any and all acts which would constitute a violation of the laws herein set forth, and I further proclaim and warn all persons who may commit such acts that they will be vigorously prosecuted therefor."

House Passes Huge War Bill.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Eight hours of debate on the $7,000,000,000 war revenue bill in the house Friday developed so little opposition that passage of the measure which followed when congress reassembled by an unanimous vote became a certainty. Action in the senate will follow at once.

Death Takes W. C. Thorne.

Pay of Bank Presidents.

John Skelton Williams, comptroller of the currency, in an official report says the national banks with a capital of $5,000,000 or more pay their presidents an average salary of $44,400 a year, while the presidents of national banks with a capital of $50,000 or less receive on the average a salary of only $1,008 a year.

There are 7,578 national banks. Most of them have a capitalization of less than $50,000. It may be soothing to the twenty dollar a week clerk to know that so many bank presidents get an average of only $19.38 a week, yet there is no pronounced movement on the part of bank presidents to retire from office and enter the field of clerkdom. Possibly the poor bank president finds ways of adding to his modest salary. If he does not he must find it hard to keep up appearances in these days of high costs of living.—New York Mail.

The following Telegram was received by the local head of Military Training Camps Association from the State Chairman requesting that it be printed in the local paper.

Fred B. Wood:

Governor wired Senator Townsend today in part, "I conveyed to you ideas given me, not my individual ideas. I am with the President and Government and his military and naval authorities in whatever they may deem for the best end."

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the disease portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rubbing sound or imperfect hearing and, when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflamation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any ease of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

HELP THE BELGIAN CHILDREN

Of the 2,500,000 starving children of Belgium, Michigan is to feed 138,000 for two years. In order to do this, it requires that we raise $4,666 per day to give them a biscuit and cup of soup or milk or their equivalent.

Every little helps. But a steady systematic giving is the only hope. Prof. Kelsey of Ann Arbor has devised the Dollar a Month Club. This seems little when we think of our plenty to their starving, homeless millions. The Commission for relief inform us that of all the supplies sent, but 2 per cent. have been lost and this is fully insured.

Mrs. F. B. Wood and Mrs. R. N. Lowe are in charge of subscriptions in Tecumseh and plead for the help and co-operation of all.

D. T. & I. RY. TO USE WEST JEFFERSON STATION AT DETROIT FOR TRAINS NO. 3 AND 4

A comunication from the D., T. & I. Railroad Co. states that on and after April 28th the company will continue the use of the M. C. passenger terminal for train No. 1 leaving Detroit at 8:00 a. m. and No. 2 arriving in Detroit at 6:40 p. m. Trains Nos. 3 and 4 will arrive and depart from the D., T. & I. station on West Jefferson Ave. This change is made necessary by the congestion caused by the increasing amount of milk to the creamery companies of Detroit.

The traveling public will not be inconvenienced in taking these trains from West Jefferson Ave. as the time consumed by street cars is about the same from the City Hall as is required to the M. C. depot. Three car lines, the Fort-West Jefferson, Fort-South Deaborn and Wyandotte Trenton Interurban cars pass the West Jefferson Ave. station.

HOW'S THIS FOR A MAN 81 YEARS OLD

John E. Loomis is the oldest harness maker in Lenawee county. He celebrated his 81st birthday in his shop April 13, 1917, and earned $3 00 stitching old heavy tugs. The man was well pleased with the work, also the price, and said he had found the place where he could get good work and would come again Bring on your work and have it done right.

Mr. Loomis says: "I do my work by hand, do not handle any machine work

"I stopped into Satterthwaite's hardware store when I came down from dinner and they wanted me to ring the old school bell that hangs in their window, so it could be said I rang it when I was 81 years old"

Never Put a Croupy Child to Bed Without Giving a Dose of Foley's Honey and Tar

Mothers know it stops croup because it cuts the thick choking mucus, clears the throat of phlegm, stops the hoarse metallic cough, eases the difficult breathing, then quiet sleep.

Mrs. T. Neureuer, Eau Claire, Wis., writes: "Foleys Honey and Tar completely cured my boy of a very severe attack of croup. We know from experience that it is a wonderful remedy for coughs, colds, croup, whooping cough."

WHAT'S THE REASON

Many Tecumseh People in Poor Health Without Knowing the Cause.

There are scores of people who drag out a miserable existence without realizing the cause of their suffering. Day after day they are racked with backache and headache; suffer from nervousness, dizziness, weakness, languor and depression. Perhaps the kidneys have fallen behind in their work of filtering the blood and that may be the root of the trouble. Look to your kidneys, assist them in their work—give them the help they need. You can use no more highly recommended remedy than Doan's Kidney Pills—endorsed by people all over the country and by your neighbors in Tecumseh.

Mrs. Alex Reid, Maiden Lane, Tecumseh, says: "My kidneys were weak and acted irregularly and I felt dull and languid. I tired easily, too. My back ached. I used Doan's Kidney Pills, procured at Pulver's Drug Store, and they relieved the backaches and helped me in every way."

Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Reid had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y. adv

"Kie-Yie-Yie! Get Me 'Gets-It' Quick!"

2 Drops Make Corn "Fall" Off!

"I've Joined the Never-Again Club. Never again will I use anything for corns but 'Gets-It.' Put 2 drops of 'Gets-It' on, and from that second the corn begins to shrivel,

"Oh, Don't Touch It! It's So Sore!" Use "Gets-It" and It Will Never Be Sore!

instead of swelling up like a little white sponge. Then it loosens from your toe—and, glory hallelujah! the corn comes off as though you'd take a glove off your hand!"

Yes, "Gets-It" is the corn discovery of the age. More "Gets-It" is sold by many times than any other corn remedy in existence. Try it and you'll know the reason why. It takes two seconds to apply it, and it dries at once. That's all. Don't experiment—follow the experience of millions and use "Gets-It."

"Gets-It" is sold everywhere, 25c a bottle, or sent on receipt of price by E. Lawrence & Co., Chicago, Ill.

GERMAN SHIPS ATTACK CALAIS

"Mosquito" Flotilla Fires 100 Shells Into City.

DUNKIRK IS RAIDED FROM AIR

German Sea Attack on Dover Thwarted With Loss of Two Ships at Least. Many Civilians Lose Lives by Raid on French City—Twelve Wounded.

Calais, France, April 23.—German torpedo boat destroyers fired 100 shells in the region of Calais. Some civilians were killed. Twelve persons were slightly wounded.

Admit Loss of Two Ships.

Berlin, April 23.—"After a naval en-
Berlin, April 24.—"After a naval engagement Friday night to the east of Dover," says an official statement issued by the German admiralty, "two German torpedo boat destroyers, the G-85 and G-42, are reported to have been lost."

Fifty Dead at Dover.

London, April 23.—Reynolds' Weekly newspaper says that at Dover twenty-eight German and twenty-two British dead lie in the market hall. The crowds hooted the German survivors from the sunken destroyers when they landed on account of the sinking of hospital ships by German submarines.

Army Supplied Via Calais.

Calais is the western terminal of the main railroad artery that supplies the British armies on the Lens-Arras battle front in northwestern France.

The town lies directly opposite the British channel port of Dover, near which place five German destroyers attempted a raid on British shipping Friday night, with the result that two German ships, and possibly three, were sunk by British patrol vessels.

It has been suggested that the object of the Teuton naval raid was to interrupt the voyage of Premier Lloyd George across the channel from the continent, where he had been in conference with the French and Italian prime ministers.

Bombard Calais on Return.

It is possible that the German destroyers which escaped in the darkness from the Dover battle were the vessels which bombarded Calais, directing their shells on the town while skirting the coast on their return to the naval bases at Zeebrugge or Antwerp.

The German destroyer G-42 was one of eleven vessels of this type built at the Krupp-Germania yard in 1914. The vessel displaced 620 tons, and carried a complement of seventy-three officers and men. She was an oil burner and had a normal speed of 32½ knots. The G-85 was a destroyer of a still later type.

MEXICANS HISS U. S. ENVOY

German Minister Is Cheered In Meeting of Congress.

El Paso, Tex., April 23.—American Ambassador Henry Fletcher was hissed in the chamber of deputies when he appeared for the opening of the Mexican congress, according to a report received here from Mexico City by government agents.

The report stated that German Minister Von Eckhardt was escorted to his seat by a delegation of six deputies and that the German minister when he appeared was given an ovation which lasted more than thirty minutes and another when he left.

BERLIN DENIES USING BODIES

Indignant Over Stories of Fat Rendered from Carcasses.

London, April 23.—Indignant denial that Germans are using human carcasses from which to render fats, lubricating oils and fertilizers, was made in a Berlin wireless dispatch intercepted here.

The story of a German factory where the dead were thus reduced had been in circulation here for several weeks.

THE STAR SPANGLED BANNER

Oh! say, can you see, by the dawn's early light,
What so proudly we hailed at the twilight's last gleaming,
Whose broad stripes and bright stars thro' the perilous fight,
O'er the ramparts we watch'd, were so gallantly streaming?
And the rocket's red glare, the bombs bursting in air,
Gave proof thro' the night that our flag was still there.
Oh, say, does that star spangled banner yet wave
O'er the land of the free, And the home of the brave.

On the shore, dimly seen thro' the mists of the deep,
Where the foe's haughty host in dread silence reposes,
What is that which the breeze, o'er the towering steep,
As it fitfully blows, half conceals, half discloses?
Now it catches the gleam of the morning's first beam
In full glory reflected, now shines on the stream;
'Tis the star spangled banner: Oh, long may it wave
O'er the land of the free, And the home of the brave.

Oh! thus be it ever when freemen shall stand
Between their loved homes and wild war's desolation;
Blest with vict'y and peace, may the heav'n rescued land
Praise the pow'r that hath made and preserved us a nation.
Then conquer we must, when our cause it is just,
And this be our motto,—"In God is our trust!"
And the star spangled banner in triumph shall wave
O'er the land of the free, And the home of the brave.

But if the war department does not want him New York certainly does. Colonel Roosevelt can have any commission he will accept."

CAPITAL CHEERS BALFOUR PARTY

Crowds Greet British Commission at Washington.

HISTORIC OCCASION SOLEMN

Band Playing Eliminated from Reception of Distinguished Envoys and Nothing Permitted Giving Color to Festal Event — Lansing Receives Party on Arrival—Precautions Are Thorough.

Washington, April 23.—The American capital extended a simple but heartfelt welcome to the British minister for foreign affairs, Arthur J. Balfour, and the other members of the British commission, which has come to Washington, as Mr. Balfour himself expressed it "to make co-operation easy and effective between those who are striving—with all their power—to bring about a lasting peace by the only means that can secure it, namely, a successful war."

Everywhere bunting flew in the light breeze, mainly the American colors. The British union jack and the French tricolor were in evidence in many places, but the local flagmakers had been unable to meet the public demand for them.

No Other Decorations.

There were no other decorations, and even at the Union station the only touch of color was lent by three large flags, the American, British and French, which were hoisted on the three great masts adorning the plaza.

Nor was there any music to greet the visitors, the original plan, including the presence of the marine band, having been amended to conform to the view expressed by President Wilson and Secretary Lansing that this was a grave and serious event in American history and not to be treated lightly or regarded as a social and festive affair.

On the plaza and overlapping the great building at either wing were gathered some 5,000 persons waiting patiently for a glimpse of the nation's guests, restrained at a proper distance by hundreds of blue-coated policemen and by two troops of the Second cavalry, commanded by Colonel Fenton, part of the garrison at near-by Fort Myer.

Extra Precautions Taken.

Within the station lines had been drawn, separating the traveling public from the space at the eastern end of the concourse across which the visiting party was to pass on the way from the train shed to the President's room.

Two score newspaper men standing to the east of the concourse were the only unofficial persons permitted in this section of the station. Altogether the precautions taken to insure the safety of the nation's visitors exceeded anything ever known in the history of the district.

Exactly on time, at 3 o'clock, the train bearing the British commissioners and their attaches drew into the station.

Line Up for Photograph.

Representing the British government were Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, the British ambassador; Corville Barclay, counselor for the embassy; Thomas Spring-Rice, Mr. Hohler, Lieutenant Colonel Murrough O'Brien, Commodore Guy Grant, secretaries and attaches of the embassy.

The great mills of the Government are grinding slowly. It is now several weeks since, by vote of Congress, war was declared against Germany. After much delay the big war credit bill passed and is ready for use, but still Congress delays with a matter of vital importance, that of providing for a means of raising an army.

The President's bill is running against the rocks as many members of Congress favor the voluntary enlistment plan, paying no attention to the experience of other great nations who have tried the voluntary system and failed. The administration is firm for the selective draft bill and the President hopes to put it through Congress.

Little can be done with recruiting the Army until Congress acts and thus time is dragging on. Congress concedes that a great army should and must be raised but does not provide a way to raise it. Is this standing back of the President? Possibly if a German flyer should drop a bomb on the Capitol building, it might arouse some of our National lawmakers from their long nap and put a little snap into them.

American people have come to the conclusion that we as a nation must prepare. It matters little whether peace is declared before we get ready or not a large army and navy must be maintained in this country. We carry fire insurance on our homes and pay premiums year after year without a loss, still we all believe that we can't take a chance. We need the protection So long as the great nations of the world maintain a large standing army and a great navy, just so long must we carry the protection of a great fighting force. We are helpless today because we haven't had that protection. The American people are asking for it and still Congress "fusses."

CLAWS OF THE CANARY.

They Should Be Carefully Trimmed Every Few Months.

As a canary grows old it will be noticed that its claws get long and catch on the perches and wires as it hops about the cage. In a state of nature the activity of the bird as it moves about on the ground or among twigs and limbs keeps the claws properly worn down. Confined in a cage, the canary is less active, and, while the rate of growth of the claws remains the same, they are subject to much less abrasion.

It is necessary therefore to trim them with a pair of sharp scissors every few months. It is important to watch the condition of the claws carefully, as by catching they may cause a broken leg. In each claw a slender blood vessel extends well down toward the tip. This may be seen on close examination through the transparent sheath of the claw. In trimming cut well beyond this canal and take special care not to break the leg while handling the bird.

In cage birds the horny covering of the bill as well as the claws sometimes becomes distorted through growth without sufficient wear. If She Were Free.

A woman of criminal tendencies serving a prison term was asked, "If you were given absolution, freedom to spend one night in the great city wholly uncontrolled, where would you go—to the theater, dance hall or where?" She replied: "I would choose a warm night after a rainy day, a night when all the electric lights wore halos around their heads and everything was foggy. I'd go to the park and walk for an hour up and down the paths, where I could see the reflections of the misty lights in the wet stone pavements. Then I'd like to go to some quiet place where I could hear organ music for another hour. Then I'd go to bed satisfied. But before I got to bed I'd open and shut my door for five minutes steadily. I'd want to know that it wasn't bolted!" —Buffalo News.

Father Fails Again.

Did you ever watch the bright young man father has picked out as the man with a future and invited home for dinner?

The B. Y. M. has read somewhere in his youth that B. Y. men are supposed to fall in love with and marry the boss' daughter. And he sits and stares at her, nervous as the dickens because he can't decide which is worse—losing his job or following precedent.

And the daughter plays the tune she knows on the piano and wonders "Whatever possessed father to bring that around here?"—New York Evening Sun.

The Waiter-Guest

How He Gave Eclat to a Dinner

By ALAN HINSDALE

It was [illegible] Ned Willard sat in his bachelor rooms before a fireplace, on which he had lighted a blaze, and thought of the many Christmas eves he had spent in days gone by when he was one of half a dozen children growing to manhood and womanhood. There were a father and a mother who were interested in making the anniversary of the birth of the Christ Child a happy event. Then was the going to bed with visions of Santa Claus coming in his sleigh, drawn by reindeers, distributing gifts on the way.

What a change between then and now! The father and mother had passed away. Some of the children lay beside them, while those that were left were scattered. Ned himself had drifted to a city where he was unknown. Christmas had come, and he must spend it alone. Better his daily work than the crowding upon him of happy days that were gone forever. He would go to the office the next day and busy himself with end of the year accounts.

In the morning he woke up looking straight at the fireplace. The ashes were cold, not an ember left. No stockings hung there as of yore. Life seemed to him as desolate as these ashes on the hearth. He arose languidly, dressed himself and went out to a restaurant where he usually took his breakfast, then went to the office, where he stayed and worked most of the day.

Ned had been accustomed at home to put on evening dress for dinner, and the habit had become fixed on him. He would as soon have neglected to wash his face or brush his hair in the morning as to dine in his business clothes. So he went to his room and put on his "glad rags," then went out to dine alone at a restaurant where he had not dined before, a more expensive place than he thought he could usually afford. It was 5 o'clock and he was the only guest in the room. Having taken off his overcoat and hat, he was standing irresolute as to which of the many tables he would take when a waiter came in from the kitchen, looked at him and said:

"Are you the man who is to wait on the Vincents?"

Ned returned the man's glance without reply.

"If you are don't stand there gaping, but get a move on you. The dinner is at 6. You'll be half an hour getting there, and you'll be needed to help arrange the table."

It was evident to Ned that the man had mistaken him for a waiter. His self esteem was not tickled, but it flashed upon him that if he could not be one of a Christmas dinner party he might at least see one. Would not serving a joyous company be better than dining alone? It occurred to him to start out to fill the place of a waiter and decide on the way whether or not he would do so.

"Give me the address," he said.

The man told him where to go, and Ned jumped into a trolley car and, having on the way made up his mind, in due time rang the bell of the basement door of the Vincents. He was admitted by the butler and made himself known as the man who had come to wait at the table for dinner. He was admitted without a word and, having laid aside his coat and hat, was led up to the dining room, where he found the lady of the house arranging flowers on the dinner table.

"This is the man sent from Kniseley's, mem," said the butler.

Mrs. Vincent looked up at Ned. She was evidently pleased with his appearance.

"What's your name?" she asked.

"My name? Giovanni."

"Oh, Italian. Go into the pantry, where you will find the Little Neck clams, and bring them in here."

Ned brought in the clams and placed them on the table. This was all that was required of him then, for the dinner hour had arrived. The lady went into the drawing room, telling him to follow her and announce dinner.

How he wished that he could be one of the persons assembled there! They were nearly all young, and there were many [illegible] girls among them. Each man [illegible] sought his dinner companion, and they all went into the dining room in pairs. Ned was reminded of a picture in a book given him when he was a boy of the animals going into Noah's ark.

Ned and the butler were the only waiters, and they had all they could do to serve the viands. Nevertheless, the dinner was not hurried, and a long interval between courses was permitted. During a lull when the company were sipping a sherbet Ned stood against the wall pretending to stare at vacancy, but really observing a very pretty girl opposite him. Several times he caught her darting a glance at him, and it occurred to him that here was a chance for him to fall into one of those cases where a rich man's daughter elopes with a menial.

When the dinner was finished and the company had gone back into the drawing room the hostess remained behind and said to Ned:

"As soon as the table is cleared come into the drawing room and play for them to dance."

Ned met this order with an expression of astonishment.

"You play the piano for dancing, don't you?" she said. "I told Mr. Kniseley that I wanted a man to wait on table and play dance music on the piano after dinner. He said he would send one."

"Yes, ma'am," replied Ned, pulling himself together. "I play the piano for dancing."

This satisfied the lady, and Ned was much pleased that he could fill the bill. He had played for boys and girls to dance at home and, though he feared he would be a trifle rusty, had no doubt that he could acquit himself fairly well. When the table was cleared and the dishes turned over to a scullion Ned went to the drawing room, where a crash had been laid and some of the furniture removed. He was received by the hostess and led to the piano.

At this time modern dancing had just been introduced, and some of the men had not learned the dances. Con-[illegible] men dancers. Ned not only knew all the dances in vogue, but had learned one that had just been brought out. Having played the music for the turkey trot and the fox trot, he began to play for the hesitation waltz.

"What's that?" asked the girl who had cast glances at Ned during the dinner.

Ned told her that it was a new dance just out. She asked him if he could dance it, and he said he could. She told him to show the step, which he did, and nothing would do but she must try it with him. One of the guests had caught the air for the dance and essayed to take Ned's place at the piano.

A number of years ago the bare suggestion that a lady should dance with a waiter would have excited disgust. Nowadays, when men are hired for partners in cabarets, a woman may dance with a chimpanzee provided the chimpanzee knows the steps. Ned and the girl sailed away. Ned was a beautiful dancer and the girl a natural one, so she caught the step at once and with so admirable a partner danced remarkably well. Meanwhile the others stood looking on and when Ned and his partner had finished several other girls insisted on having a turn with him. While this was going on the hostess was called out and when she returned brought a man with her carrying a violin case.

"There has been a mistake," she said. "I inquired at Kniseley's restaurant if they could send me a man to wait on table and to play dance music besides. They said they could. Giovanni came and has filled both positions. Now comes another man, who says that he was engaged to play dance music. It all comes very handy, for now Giovanni can teach us the new dance, while this man gives us the music."

Where there is a similarity as to refinement barriers in social standing are easily got over. Ned's services were called into requisition by every girl guest, and it was not long before he forgot the role he was playing. And for that matter, the others forgot that he was an Italian waiter. When about midnight Mrs. Vincent stepped up to him and told him that he was wanted without to bring in refreshments it was like a box on the ear.

Nevertheless, he arose from beside Miss Merriwether—the girl who had been the first to ask him to dance with her—and in another minute was passing napkins and plates among the guests. When all were served he coolly helped himself and resumed his seat beside Miss Merriwether.

The fact that he had just been serving the viands caused this act to ruffle the equanimity of the company. The eyes of every one were fixed upon him. It was one thing for him to teach them to dance, another to assume a right to eat with them, though why this is so is unintelligible, for when a man hands a lady a dish he doesn't touch her; when he dances with her he holds here in his arms. Mrs. Vincent, who was appalled at the waiter's familiarity, confronted him.

"Giovanni," she said sternly, "go into the kitchen. The butler will pay you for your work."

This was too much for Ned. It drew forth a confession. He told the hostess and the company of his lonely Christmas eve and that to keep off the blues he had spent the day at work in his office. He gave an account of his being mistaken for a waiter at Kniseley's and the man that was to serve at Mrs. Vincent's dinner; how he had preferred to wait on those who were happy to dining alone in an empty restaurant.

The moment he had finished every one present clustered about him sympathetically, both men and women vieing with one another for a clasp of his hand. When this was over Miss Merriwether asked the newcomer to play a waltz and, advancing to Ned, said:

"Giovanni, I claim the first dance with you as a guest."

The rest of the evening was not only a happy one for Ned, but the incident appealed to all the others, and Mrs. Vincent thanked her waiter-guest for having given a zest to her Christmas dinner party that would never be forgotten.

In these days, when servants are so hard to get, young ladies of refinement who are obliged to earn their own living might do well to hire themselves out to serve at dinners. If they are expert dancers they might be called on at times to act as partners. And why not secure husbands in the same way that Ned Willard secured a wife?

TESTING SUBMARINES.

It Is an Easier Task Now Than It Was a Few Years Ago.

Vessels built to navigate under water require particular care in their construction, for when they are submerged they have to withstand the pressure of water from all sides without showing the slightest leak.

The newest submarines must be able to sink to a depth of 150 feet or more. At such a depth the pressure is tremendous, and if the joints are not perfect water squirts in as though through a hose pipe. Ten years ago testing a new submarine was a dangerous job. She might not be watertight. Her balance might not be perfect, or, again, the [illegible] system might not be equal to blowing out the water from her tanks. [illegible] accidents have occurred in [illegible] under water boats during actual submergence, but today all that is a thing of the past. A testing dock is used, which was invented by an Italian engineer, Major Laurenti. It is a huge cylinder, into which the submarine is floated. A caisson at the end is closed and hermetically sealed. The cylinder is built so as to stand tremendous pressure, and pressure is slowly applied until it equals something far greater than the submarine herself will ever be called on to endure.

"A Heart Bowed Down," Etc.

ALPHONSO D. DEWEY

Alphonso Dewey, who was stricken with apoplexy while at the dinner table Sunday, passed away Monday evening at 8 o'clock never having regained consciousness. He is survived by his wife, and three sons, R. A. Dewey of Detroit, Ray of Milwaukee, Harry at home and one daughter Mrs. Wm. Van Dusen of Detroit and one brother, L. D. Dewey of Tecumseh.

Mr. Dewey was born March 17, 1843 in the house where he died and where all his life was spent. He was the youngest of the family of seven children of Mr. and Mrs. Lorenzo Dow Dewey, Sr., L. D. Dewey, Jr. being the only one now living.

The funeral will be held at St. Elizabeths church, Thursday morning at 10 o'clock.

SAMUEL BRENGAN

Word was received by Henry McClure Monday morning of the death of his cousin Sam Brengan who passed away at his home in Seattle Sunday, April 22nd, after a long illness. The body will be brought to Tecumseh for burial.

Mr. Brengan is an old Tecumseh boy and his many friends here will regret to hear of his death.

LIFE OF THE WORLD.

Traditions That It Will Last Only 6,000 Years.

There is a general and widespread notion, which the curious investigator will find scattered throughout both medieval and modern literature, that the world will last 6,000 years from the date of its creation. An inscription in one of Martin Luther's books reads as follows: "Elijah, the prophet, said that the world had existed 2,000 years before the law was given (from Adam to Moses), would exist 2,000 years under the Mosaic law (from Moses to Christ) and 2,000 years under the Christian dispensation, and then it would be burned."

In the Etrurian account of the creation by Suidas there is a similar tradition, "The Creator spent 6,000 years in creation, and 6,000 more are allotted to the earth."

In the black letter edition of Foxe's "Acts and Monuments" (1632) there is a whole sermon given with the 6,000 year limit of the earth's duration as a text.

Some writers contend that the "six days" referred to in Holy Writ really mean 6,000 years and that the "seventh day" is a type of the coming millennium, or "Sabbath of a thousand years."

The psalmist says, "For a thousand years are in thy sight as yesterday" (Psalm xc, 4). See also II Peter iii, 8, which is even more specific.

POISON GAS BEETLES.

Fumes With Which Bombardiers Keep Their Enemies at Bay.

Most people think that the use of poison gas in warfare is a purely human, or perhaps one should say inhuman, idea. Yet the plan has been adopted by nature. Certain kinds of beetles known as bombardiers and called by scientists Brachinus make free use of poisonous fumes to keep their enemies at bay.

A typical species known as Brachinus crepitans is largely attacked by certain ground beetles. These ground beetles are very active and can easily overtake the bombardiers. Just as they get within reach, however, a very strange thing happens. The bombardier has the power of ejecting a peculiar liquid, which, when it comes into contact with the atmosphere, bursts into a sort of pale green flame. This is immediately followed by a kind of smoke.

Now, this smoke has a remarkable effect upon the pursuer. No sooner do the fumes come into contact with the ground beetle than the creature is blinded and stupefied. A strange paralysis overtakes the insect, and it seems unable to move any farther. Quite a while elapses before the ground beetle recovers. In the meantime the bombardier makes good his escape.—American Boy.

Fury of Sunstorms.

How can we, who are bewildered and appalled by the fury of our planet's cyclones and volcanic eruptions, form a conception of the terrible energy of natural operations of the sun? Newcomb suggested that if we call the solar chromosphere an ocean of fire we must remember that it is an ocean infinitely hotter than the fiercest furnace and as deep as the Atlantic is broad. If we call its movements hurricanes we must remember that our hurricanes blow only about a hundred miles an hour, while those of the chromosphere blow as far in a single second. There are such hurricanes as, coming down upon us from the north, would in thirty seconds after they had crossed the St. Lawrence river be in the gulf of Mexico, carrying with them the whole surface of the continent in a mass not simply of ruin, but of glowing vapor.

Sharpness of Madmen.

In Sir William Butler's autobiography there is an amusing story about six insane soldiers who escaped while the corporal who had brought them on board the troopship left at Durban and who mingled with the 1,800 sane men on the decks. The problem of the voyage was to find who were the six madmen. By the time the boat reached Cape Town twenty six men were officially under observation, and not one of the six was among them.

In the end the crazed half dozen were identified as those who had taken an especially eager part in the lunatic hunt.

Books and Apples.

A young lady in a library job got tired of fussing round in stuffy alcoves. So she chucked it all and went to raising apples. She never made money hand over fist, as she expected, but she always declared she had won out on the exchange. "I used to like an occasional apple with my books," she declared, "but the present plan of having a book now and then with my apples is a heap better." — Collier's Weekly.

Hard to Suit.

"This horn you sold me won't make any noise," said the customer.

"Well, I thought you wanted it for your grandson," said the clerk.

"So I did."

"MY SWORD SHALL BE BATHED IN HEAVEN"

This might well be the title of the President's great message to Congress. If ever a sword were drawn in a righteous cause, America's sword is so drawn today. If ever a war were justified, this war surely is. We have endured the limit of patience and perhaps beyond. We have tried to the uttermost every honorable means to avoid war and have failed. And finally we have had war made upon us. We have simply formally recognized an existing fact.

Moreover we go to war, not against a people whom we love and admire and to whom we owe an incalculable debt, but against an irresponsible autocracy, a military caste and tyranny who have hypnotized and misled their own people, deliberately prepared and finally precipitated a war of pure conquest against its neighbors, crucified a peaceful and friendly nation, and added such atrocities to the horrors of war as the human imagination hitherto has been unable to conceive. The Imperial Government of Germany is today a were wolf, running amuck through the civilized World. There can be no peace or security for any other nation until such a government is destroyed and made hereafter forever impossible.

And we go to war, not in lust of conquest, not to enlarge our dominions, not for military glory, not even to seek indemnities, but simply and purely for right and justice, for liberty and democracy, for civilization and peace.

Surely 'Our Sword is Bathed in Heaven." "For the divisions of Reuben there were great searchings of heart in a certain crisis of Israel's history. In this supreme crisis of our national history may there be no occasion for such searchings of heart. This great crisis will test and search us to our innermost soul as a nation. Aye, it will prove whether we are a nation with a single loyalty or a mob of mixed peoples with divided allegiances. And more than that, whether we are a Christian nation with a conscience for the right and a passion for freedom, justice and humanity.

SPRING HOUSE-CLEANING AND REMODELING

Seem to be Quite the Proper Thing for Tecumseh Grocerymen

A short time ago Aldrich & Son moved into their fine new quarters and made extensive improvements

Later F. D. Avery treated his store to a new coat of white enamel paint, making it fairly shine, and we understand, he has instructed his clerks to wear only snow white aprons to match the new paint.

C. M. Gilbert's store has come in for extensive improvements. Three new silent salesmen occupy the front of the store and, located back of these, are new package counters, the under part of which are made up of drawers and bins for sugar, rice and all kinds of bulk goods. These have glass fronts so that the customers may see what he is buying. These bins are dust proof and are of the latest patterns.

The shelving along the walls has been changed so as to make more room for his increasing stock. A new display refrigerator has been ordered and will soon be ready for [illegible]. The old counters have all been replaced by new and the arrangement of the new will add much to the convenience of both the force and trade. The store has been painted on the inside in white enamel.

Mr. Gilbert states that he has plans perfected for a new modern front for his store and will install it as soon as the material arrives.

RED CROSS

The plans are laid for a systematic canvass of the township in behalf of membership for the Red Cross society April 30th.

Don't forget the great mass meeting arranged for Sunday night, the 29th. Dr. F. A. Ferry, Judge Larwell and others will speak. If you have any questions, write them out and send them in at that meeting and they will be answered.

Make up your mind to be a member. One's patriotism really demands it

The Use of Candy.

Pure candy is good for children. Pure sugar is good for grown people. Of course there are exceptions to every rule. If the doctor prescribes a diet and orders a patient to refrain from sweets the patient is bound to obey his adviser. What is the use of calling a physician and paying him for suggestions if the latter are treated with indifference? People in ordinary health need not be afraid to gratify an appetite which craves sweets. Those who have looked into the matter have been telling us lately that soldiers on the march hold out better if they have rations of sugar than if their food omits this useful commodity. A fondness for sugar is often a defense against the temptation to use alcoholic stimulants. The inebriate does not care very much about pure sweets.

Some New Uses For Yeast.

Because it is so essential in the making of bread and beer most of us think that yeast is useful for nothing else. But the Berlin Institute of Fermentative Industries calls attention to the fact that valuable flavoring extracts and tonics can be obtained from it and a relatively large percentage of muscle building matter. Its remaining constituent, a mass of cellulose, can be used to make a very hard mass, known as ernolith, an excellent noninflammable substitute for celluloid.—Popular Science Monthly.

ATTENTION, YOUNG MEN!

Do you realize that, if you are of the proper age and good physical condition you are liable to be called upon to enter the army? Do you know that if you volunteer, or should be selected by draft, you enter the army as a private?

However, under government authority camps for training of candidates for commissions in the new army will begin May 8th, which will give you, if qualified, an opportunity to begin your service as a Second Lieutenant or better.

The camp for this District is at Fort Sheridan near Chicago. Eligibles, as to age, are those who are between the ages of twenty years and nine months, and forty-four years, at the beginning of the camp. Besides being within the age limit, candidates must be of known standing as to character and personality, address and force, reputation and standing in the community, likely to command the respect of officers and enlisted men, of adequate education, and ability to stand the required physical examination. Mature men of experience in business, and otherwise qualified, are in demand and can reasonably expect a commission as Captain and possibly as Major.

The pay of Second Lieutenant is $1700.00, of a First Lieutenant $2,000.00, of a Captain $2,400.00 and of a Major $3,000.00, plus allowance.

For information as to details, apply to Fred B. Wood, Frank S. Turner, Wm. F. Fisher, Chas. Burridge, Herbert S. Temple, Guy E. Nemire, Leon S. Rosacrans, R. K. Anderson, Faron S. Anderson and Geo. A. Rathbun. Dr. E. E. Hendershott has consented to act as Medical Examiner. Time is short.

CIVIC AND TOWN IMPROVEMENT SOCIETY

Hold Important Meeting Friday

Vacant Lots to be Used for Garden Spots. School Boys Will Be Asked to do the Work

Following in line with the great plan which is being urged by the Government to raise a bumper crop this year to help feed the world, and which is being enthusiastically pushed forward by almost every town and city in our country, the Civic and Town Improvement Society of Tecumseh set in motion a movement to secure all available vacant property in Tecumseh to be used and planted for garden spots this summer.

The meeting was held at the home of Mrs. J. D. Shull Friday afternoon and was well attended. A committee was appointed to canvass the town to secure all vacant property that would not be used this season. This land they plan to plant with two crops of potatoes, beans, etc., the society furnishing the seeds and paying the cost of preparing the ground. It is further planned to enlist the services of the Tecumseh school boys to care for the crop when planted.

The society voted to contribute $5.00 to the Red Cross and join the Belgian relief society by agreeing to pay $1.00 per month for a period of one year.

The annual meeting of the society will be held at the home of Mrs. Thomas McCann, Friday, May 4, at which time officers will be elected for the ensuing year.

The following delegates to the county federation to be held at Blissfield were appointed:

Mrs. Andrew Wilson,
Mrs. J. D. Service,
Mrs. J. B. Kennedy.

Committees were appointed as follows:

Garden spots:
Mrs. Thomas McCann,
Mrs. J. B. Kennedy.
Parks:
Mrs. John Wyrill,
Mrs. O. B. Finch,
Mrs. J. B. Kennedy.

RED CROSS MEMBERSHIP GROWING

The membership list of the Red Cross is growing and they have already enrolled 150 names. This is considered a good showing when it is taken into consideration that no canvass has been made for membership. It is the ambition of the committee to make a big showing for "Good Old Tecumseh" and if she keeps up the record of the past she will do her share towards putting Lenawee County on the map.

The county must furnish 2000 members before a charter will be granted. This is a worthy movement and it is earnestly desired that all who can will take out a membership in the Red Cross society.

Call at the headquarters in the old postoffice building and the ladies in charge will tell you about what they hope to do.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the disease portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rubbing sound or imperfect hearing and, when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflamation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

HOLSTEIN-FRIESIAN SALE

William B Hatch proprietor of registered Holstein Friesian cattle, of Ypsilanti, Michigan, whose auction advertisement occurs elsewhere in this issue, has been breeding a choice line of Blacks and Whites for the past ten years He says this is the best line of offerings he has ever put into any sale and he hopes they may be purchased and further developed in Southern Michigan.

Mr. Hatch was a member of the American Commission representing the State of Michigan which studied co-operative agriculture in thirteen European countries a year before the war broke out. The studies took him thru Holland where this breed of cattle has been practically the exclusive breed for a thousand years He has tried to follow the original type in breeding Hatch Herd and not follow the fancies of faddists This sale promises to be largely attended.

As Mr. Hatch well puts it: "This is the time to 'beef' scrub bulls and cow 'boarders' and substitute something profitable The war demands for food is certain to make dairy products in much greater demand"

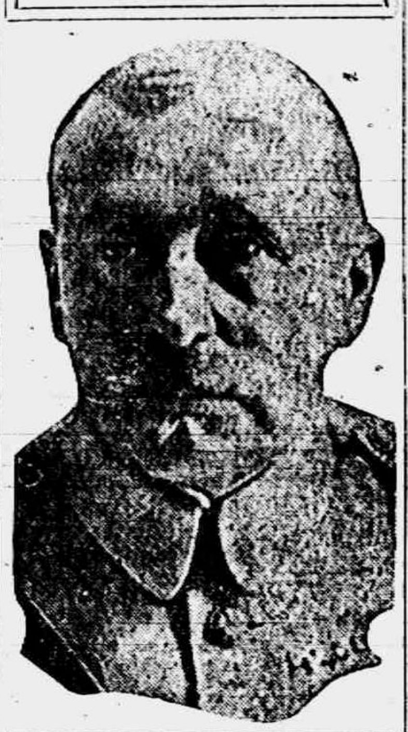
GEN. NIVELLE

Intrepid French General Who Launches Big Offensive.



A GENERAL SURVEY OF THE WAR.

Thursday, April 12.—The British forces in France southeast of Arras captured the villages of Wancourt and Heninel and adjoining positions, and also made progress north of the Scarpe river and on the last portion of the Vimy ridge held by the Germans, according to the official communication.

In an attack on the new front below St. Quentin between Coucy and Quincy-Basse the French drove back the Germans to the southwestern edge of the upper Cousy forest, capturing several important positions, the war office announces. In the Champagne the Germans were ejected from trenches east of Sapigneul.

Friday, April 13.—On a twelve-mile front from north of the river Scarpe to south of Loos British troops pressed back the Germans all along the line and captured six villages.

Field Marshal Haig's men also gained a footing in German trenches northeast of Lens. Prisoners and guns also were taken in the advance. Southeast of Arras the British also made progress, and now are astride the Hindenburg line as far as a point seven miles southeast of Arras.

The villages seized by the British are all east and north of Vimy ridge. They are Bailleul, Willeval, Vimy, Petit Vimy, Givenchy-en-Gohelle and Angres.

The French south of St. Quentin took several lines of German trenches.

Saturday, April 14.—Field Marshal Haig's men fought their way south and east of Fayet, one mile northwest of St. Quentin. The village of Gricourt, one mile north of Fayet, was carried at the point of the bayonet. The Germans suffered many killed and wounded in addition to the loss of more than 400 prisoners.

The mining center of Lens is virtually surrounded on three sides by the advancing British troops. The town of Lievin, southwest of Lens, was captured in the morning and the village of Cite St. Pierre, northwest of Lens, also has been taken.

Along the entire front from the Scarpe river to south of Loss, the British pressed forward and reached points two to thre miles east of Vimy ridge.

Sunday, April 15.—Lens has fallen. The center of France's rich coal fields, captured by the Germans early in the war, was entered by British patrols, according to a correspondent of Lloyd's News with the British army.

A heavy attack by the Germans on a six-mile front on both sides of the Bapaume-Cambrai road was a failure. The Germans gained a foothold at only one point at Lagnicourt and were driven out. The Germans left 1,500 dead in front of the British positions after this attack.

AN UNFASHIONABLE FISH.

Fine In Flavor and Food Value, Yet Our Anglers Discard It.

It seems as if there are fashions in fish just now as there are in wearing apparel. A fish that brings in German markets nearly four times as much per pound as our fresh mackerel and considerably more than haddock is thrown away by our fishermen because no one wants to eat it. Yet those who eat it praise it for its delicate flavor. Even the English like it. Every year they consume 3,000 tons of it. Yet we will have none of it.

This fish is known as the goosefish, anglerfish, devilfish and monkfish. True, its appearance is against it, but still the epicures in England and Germany demand it because it is delicious. Analyses made by the bureau of fisheries on samples show that goosefish contains considerably more protein than flounder, slightly more than a cod, a little less than halibut and considerably less than sirloin steak.

The goosefish has an average length of three feet and is broad and flat, somewhat resembling the flounder in general outline. The only way to get it, says a Philadelphia woman, is for the housewives to club together and demand it. At the present time fishermen do not take the trouble to bring it home, but discard it from their nets.—Popular Science Monthly.

A Tale of Six Cities.

There are at least six cities on this continent which every one should see. Every one should see New York because it is the largest city in the world and because it combines the magnificence, the wonder, the beauty, the sordidness and the shame of a great metropolis. Every one should see San Francisco because it is so vivid, so alive, so golden. Every one should see Washington, the clean, white splendor of which is like the embodiment of a national dream. Every one should see the old gray granite city of Quebec piled on its hill above the river like some fortified town in France. Every one should see the sweet and aristocratic city of Charleston, which suggests a museum of tradition and early American elegance, and of course every one should see New Orleans.—Julian Street in Collier's Weekly.

Nest of a Turtle.

The manner in which a turtle constructs her nest is both interesting and suggestive, it being one of the most expeditious operations ever performed by that slow moving creature. After selecting a suitable spot she begins digging out a hole with her hind legs by moving slowly in a circle and throwing the excavated sand into a rim all around it. When that is about eighteen inches in depth and twelve in circumference she drops her eggs into it, pulls the rim of sand over them and, rising on all four legs, lets her body drop heavily on the covering sand until she has made it as compact as any part of the surrounding beach. She then makes a few false demonstrations on the shore to mislead inquisitive enemies and hastens to the sea as fast as she can travel.

Insects In Flight.

Motion pictures of insects in flight prove that the movement of the wings of all insects presents the same general character. When flight is begun the amplitude of the first wing beats is much smaller than of the subsequent ones, but the period remains almost unchanged. The insect regulates the velocity of its flight not by the rapidity of the motion of its wings, but by changing their inclination. Although in normal conditions the period of the wing beat remains constant, it may be increased or diminished by various influences, such as fatigue and cold.

Hastening the End.

"You'll find I'm hard to discourage," said the persistent suitor melodramatically. "Some day I'll make you admit you love me, and then—not till then—I will die happy."

"I'll say it now," replied the heartless girl. "I don't mind telling a lie for a good end."—Pearson's Weekly.

ALL SHEEP BREEDERS ASKED FOR 2 FLEECES

Editor Burch Appeals to Shepherds to Aid in War.

Chicago, April 23.—W. W. Burch, editor of the "American Sheep Breeder," has sent a letter to President Wilson, in which he encloses a thrilling appeal, published on the cover of his current issue, to the sheep growers of the nation asking each to furnish two fleeces of wool to bte government as a gift to the soldiers who will wear them after the authorities will have had them woven into clothes. In his letter to the President, speaking of the "Legion of the Golden Fleece," Mr. Burch says:

"We propose to apply the acid test to the patriotism of the American shepherds, and feel certain that we will not be disappointed. In our industry are many German-Americans and thus far we have not heard an unpatriotic word from them. On the contrary they have expressed their loyalty to the Stars and Stripes in no uncertain language.

"It may be that our appeal for 'two fleeces of wool' will meet with such a hearty response that we will be able to furnish the raw material for a large number of uniforms for the army. After the movement is well started we shall take up with some of our wool and clothing manufacturing friends the idea of weaving the cloth and manfacturing into clothing these fleeces, free of charge to the government. While we are not unmindful of the fact that the United States government is perfectly able to purchase clothing for the army, the fact that our shepherds are heart and soul with Mother Columbia in their great struggle will be an inspiration to other branches of agriculture to take up with cheerfulness the patriotic burden and responsibilities that will fall on their shoulders."

MINE COLLEGE WILL DRILL

Competent Instructor to Be Named for Houghton Institution.

HOUGHTON, April 23.

The Michigan College of Mines board of control granted a petition from the student body to appoint a competent military drillmaster.

A Gigantic Meteor Stream.

One of the most accomplished and assiduous students of meteors, Dr. Denning, is of the opinion that the August meteors, which radiate from the constellation Perseus and are sometimes popularly called the "tears of St. Lawrence," belong to a stream so broad that the earth, traveling between eighteen and nineteen miles a second, occupies seven weeks in crossing it.

This would make the width of the stream, if the earth traversed it at a right angle to its course, nearly 80,000,000 miles. These meteors are so scattered all round the orbit in which they travel that some of them are visible every year. They are believed to be connected with a bright comet which appeared in 1862 and is supposed to have a period of about 120 years. The outer end of its elliptical meteor stream is situated far beyond the orbit of Neptune.—Los Angeles Times.

Elephants' Fear of Mice.

The reason why one tiny mouse is capable of scaring a whole herd of elephants half to death is found in the fact that in the elephants' native land there are little animals known as chacanas, which feed on a small, sour berry of which elephants are very fond. They live in settlements, something after the manner of prairie dogs, under the berry bushes and sometimes when feeding the elephants trample upon the little towns, and the chacanas in their fright frequently run up the tubes of the elephants' trunks. Their long, sharp claws catch in the flesh, and they cannot be ejected. The more violently the monster blows through its trunk the more firmly the hooked claws of the little animal become imbedded in the flesh, and inflammation and death are the result. In captivity, therefore, the elephants think they are in danger of the deadly chacanas when they see a mouse.—New York American.

M. A. C. ASKS BANKS TO ASSIST IN SEEDING

Long Term Loans with Crops as Security Urged.

EAST LANSING, April 23.

The high price of seed, particularly for beans and potatoes, threatens in many sections of the state to deter farmers from planting maximum acreage to these crops, in the opinion of the farm crops department of the Michigan Agricultural college.

Within the last week appeals have been coming daily to M. A. C. for financial assistance in procuring seed, and accordingly the suggestion is being made to Michigan bankers to make long term loans to agriculturists for the purchase of seed, with the crop as security.

This is a method of aiding farmers which some state bankers have already adopted, and which is an established feature of agricultural finance in the south.

"Short term loans of from 60 to 90 days will not meet the situation," declared J. F. Cox, acting professor of farm crops at the college, "but by arranging special seed loans running until the crops are harvested, both the farmer and the bankers will be benefited. In the south the entire banking system in rural communities is based on the cotton crop, and loans are freely made payable at harvest time."

The Barber's Query.

There is always something interesting in a barber shop. For instance, we always get a sly grin when a customer wearing on his face what is very plainly a six days' growth of beard is asked by the barber whose chair he approaches, "Shave, sir?" One can't help wondering what the barber thinks he might have come in to have done.—Detroit Free Press.

WESTMINSTER GUILD

Tuesday evening the Misses Genevieve Halladay and Edith Ingersoll were hostesses for the Westminster Guild at the Halladay home.

Mrs. Fred Dickinson presided in the absence of the president Mrs. R. B. Stuckey Later Miss Ingersoll conducted the Bible study of the evening when papers were read by Mrs. Dale Hodges and Mrs. Wilfred Waldron. At roll call many experiences of missionaries were related.

A social hour followed when the hostesses served a dainty lunch. The members agreed that it had been a very interesting evening.

CLASS PARTY

Mrs. Paul Bowen's Sunday-school class of boys enjoyed a little party at the Presbyterian church Tuesday night. A big feed of course was the event, then came games and a business session with an election of officers who are as follows:

President—Wendel Cleveland
Vice President—Harold Sisson
Secretary—John Garlinghouse
Treasurer—Dale Bowen

O folds of white and scarlet! O blue field with your silver stars! May fond eyes welcome you, willing feet follow you, strong hands defend you, warm hearts cherish you, and dying lips give you their blessing! Ours by inheritance, ours by allegiance, ours by affection—long may you float on the free winds of heaven, the emblem of liberty, the hope of the world!—Anon.

MAJOR C. H. REASON HONORED IN BRITAIN FOR VALUABLE WORK

In Command of Over Sixty Military Hospitals.

WAS KITCHNER'S GUEST

Dined With Minister of War Few Days Before the Latter's Death.

Major Clifford H. Reason is the latest London officer to be honored by having his name specially drawn to the attention of the British secretary of state for valuable services rendered during the war. One of the early volunteers in the war, Major Reason has held several important posts. He is a cavalry officer of long standing, having joined the 1st Hussars as a lieutenant fourteen years ago. On May 3, 1910 he became officer commanding "B" squadron, and held this position until the outbreak of war.

Having volunteered, he was made second in command of the 7th C. M. R. which he helped to recruit, and which was sent overseas in drafts. Later Major Reason was appointed brigade major of the infantry brigade, then in this city.

In August, 1915, he left for Britain having been asked to depart on shortnotice by the militia department He was senior officer on board ship. His official appointment in England was in the C. A. M. C. as commanding officer of Central Military Hospitals Division, with headquarters at Shorncliffe, comprising over 60 institutions. This post he still occupies and is doing excellent work.

As a surgeon, Major Reason stands high, being a graduate of Western University, and a fellow of Trinity College. He is also a past-president pf the London Medical Association. As a combatant officer he holds certificates as field officer and M. S. C. (Militia Staff Corps.)

Major Reason was one of the last guests entertained by Earl Kitchner. A day or two before the great war minister's tragic death, he visited the wounded at Shorcliffe. There he was met and conducted around the hospital by Major Reason, whom he invited to dine with him in the evening Two or three days after the dinner, Earl Kitchner was drowned.

It is an interesting fact that the last photographs taken of Earl Kitchener were in groups which include Major Reason, and Dr. H. T. Reason of this city has these photos which he values highly.

The above article was taken from the London Advertiser a publication published in London Canada, the home town of Major C. H. Reason and will be of interest to Tecumseh people. The Major is a brother of A. E. Reason, a son-in-law of J. J. Freeman of this place. The article appeared under date of February 28, 1917.

WHAT THE SELECTIVE DRAFT SYSTEM REALLY MEANS

(American Defense News Service.)

Washington, April :—Opposition to the selective draft system for the army from several elements of the country whose patriotism and loyalty cannot be doubted has convinced official Washington that it is due to ignorance of the real meaning of the word "conscription" in the discussion. Contrary to general belief, does not mean that the Government can step haphazard into any household and drag away the husband, or father, or son or brother and impress him into military service—quite the contrary.

Here is what will happen if the conscription bill, reported to Senate, becomes a law:

[illegible] The President will designate [illegible] proclamation a day of registration, [illegible] the voting precinct being used as the smallest unit for enrollment. The governors of the various States will be asked to have the sheriffs of the counties appoint registers to take the names of all males between the ages of nineteen and twenty-five. Those who refuse to enroll will be arrested.

2. The State officers will exempt from military service "persons engaged in industries, including agricultural, found to be necessary to the maintenance of the military establishment or the effective operation of the military forces, or the maintenance of national interests during the emergency.

3. Those not exempted will be reported to the War Department, which will make further exemptions.

4. It is estimated that by August 1 the 500,000 men desired will be in training camps. In the meantime the Government must provide equipment for the recruits.

5. It is estimated that the registration will result in an enrollment of 7,000,000 and about 40 per cent of this number will be weeded out on account of physical disabilities. The 500,000 to be selected from the remaining 60 per cent will be chosen by lot.

An adequate army must be raised for the protection of the United Staes, and when the people understand what "Conscription" really means they will force recalcitrant Congressmen into line behind the President for passage of the Conscription bill.

MARY PICKFORD COMING

Manager F. S. Anderson announces with pleasure the booking for a near date of the first presentatoin in this city of Mary Pickford in her new photo play, "Less than the Dust." No star of screen land is so admired and so affectionately regarded as Miss Pickford whose past creations are all remembered for their real art and charm. Her screen appearance at the New Royal Theatre during this engagement will have an additional interest in that it will mark her first presentation here of a production made under her own company, the Mary Pickford Film Corporation. It will be the most elaborate production in which she has ever been seen, one that has been given a masterly direction by John Emerson. Its scenes are laid in India and England, Miss Pickford playing the part of a cast-away, a girl of English birth who having been adopted by a Hindu sword maker, is reared among the natives of the lower caste. Its story is full of realism and dramatic strength with an appealing love story in which the girl and a young English officer are the central figures. Miss Pickford has surrounded herself with a cast of distinction with a company of unusual size appearing in the various elaborate and picturesque scenes.

Mary Pickford's first appearance on the screen since she became the head of her own film corporation, will be in "Less Than the Dust." At the New Royal [illegible]

Our schools have been in the habit of late of closing an hour earlier in order that the pupils might have the opportunity of attending certain picture shows. This has seemed to us a queer policy and we wondered why it was done.

We are informed, however, that the purpose of the school in closing is to create a liking for a higher class of pictures and to supplement the teaching in English.

The schools closed for the "Birth of a Nation" and the reason given was that it was not possible for all of the pupils to attend in the evening as a special price was made to school children in the afternoon.

"Alice in Wonderland" was another instance. This story is a child's classic which is studied in nearly every series of primary readers and therefore the pictures would aid the younger pupils in their work. Many of them could not attend in the evening.

"The Prince and the Pauper" was the latest picture for which the schools closed. This picture is reported as a clean picture by our greatest American humorist, a story with a moral and found in our text books. Many out-of-town pupils could not attend in the evening.

We are also told that many of our larger schools have their own moving picture machines in their schools and that the pictures are shown to help the students in their work, but as this is impossible here in our schools, it has been arranged to cooperate with our local picture theaters

The above reasons seem to be good ones and to throw an altogether different light on the subject. Undoubtedly others will be glad to know the whyfor of the matter also. We were inclined to think that schools were intended for study and not to attend picture shows, but the above reasons clear the matter up so far as we are concerned.

Tecumseh merchants expressed themselves almost to a unit Tuesday night in favor of a continuance of our Wednesday Bargain Days and entertainments. Perhaps nothing since the days when Tecumseh maintained a league base ball team has attracted as much attention from the outside as have our Special Bargain Days. They have and are advertising our town as a live town

One of our new merchants stated at the banquet that people outside are talking about it and saying Tecumseh is very much on the map and wide awake This was one of the reasons why he picked our town to locate in.

A prominent farmer told us a day or two ago that he had heard many farmers express themselves favorably in regard to them and were already making inquiries as to when they would start again, some saying they felt as if they should help contribute something towards the support of the series of entertainments

It is certain that the merchants have acted wisely in undertaking the campaign for this year and we feel that it is a big advertisment for Tecumseh, making the town a strong pulling point for trade in this community

Last year the committee in charge of the entertainments were wide awake They worked hard and insisted on nothing but the best, which resulted in high class performances such as one would see in first class vaudeville theaters in the cities. We trust that strong committees will be appointed this year and that the high standard of attractions maintained last year will be continued this

This is a year when patriotism should ring out true and clear and no doubt patriotic programs will be arranged for during the summer's campaign and will add much to the interest of our Bargain Days.

Exports Also Best of Any Previous Month Except January.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Despite the German submarine campaign, American experts in March reached a value of $551,278,000, which has been exceeded only once, last January, the best month in the country's history. Imports of $270,481,000 set a new American record.

Foreign and domestic commerce bureau statistics show the country's foreign trade increased in March $156,000,000 over the February totals.

Exports for the nine months ending with March were valued at $4,634,900,000, against $2,995,500,000 for the corresponding period in 1916 and $1,193,100,000 in 1915. Imports for nine months ending with March were valued at $1,181,320,000; at $1,504,663,000 in 1916 and at $1,213,614000 in 1915.

Import records show that the proportionate amount of goods entering free of duty has been increasing stearily. The net balance of gold imports for the nine months' period was $651,108,000.

MINGAY—TAYLOR

A very impressive wedding was solemnized at St. Peter's Episcopal church at 5 o'clock Tuesday evening when Nellie Dustan Mingay, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. W. Mingay, became the bride of Samuel Charles Taylor of Sault Ste. Marie, Rev. James G. Widdifield, rector of St. Peter's church, performing the ceremony.

The church was very prettily decorated in green and white. A lattice work of white was stretched across the chancel, with clusters of cut flowers and spring blossoms, and a lattice bower entertwined with myrtle was arranged at the chancel rail. It was under this bower that the bridal party stood during the ceremony.

Before the ceremony a vested choir of twenty-four voices, led by Mrs. R. S. Moore, rendered a musical service consisting of The Betrothal Anthem from "The Voice that Breathed o'er Eden" by Bartlett, "The Bridal Chorus" by Cowan, the old wedding hymn, "O, Perfect Love" by Barney and "The Bridal Chorus" from Wagner's "Lohengrin."

During the singing of the last chorus the bride entered the church on the arm of her father. They were met at the altar by the groom and the clergyman. The full Episcopal service was used.

The bride was attired in a dark blue silk traveling suit with hat to match, and carried a white prayer book which was carried by her mother on her wedding day.

At the close of the ceremony the organist played Mendelsohn's "Triumphal Wedding March." Miss Camilla Hayden presided at the organ.

One of the features of the wedding most appreciated by the bride was the fact that those taking part in the choir had volunteered their services in appreciation of the many courtesies that she had shown them in times past.

After the wedding the bridal party returned to the home where a wedding supper was served to the relatives and a few intimate friends by the Misses Marion and Mildred Brooks, Mrs. Alex Reid catering.

In the dining room a large wedding bell of meline was suspended over the table with streamers of meline draped to the corners of the table. Daffodils were used in profusion for decorations. Many presents of money, beautiful silver, cut glass, linen, etc., were received by the bride.

After a somewhat stormy passage Mr. and Mrs. Taylor embarked on the train for Detroit at Clinton. After a short wedding trip they will make their home at Sault Ste. Marie. Mr. Taylor is county clerk of Chippewa county.

Miss Mingay was a graduate of the U. of M. in the class of 1900, and taught in our Tecumseh High school for a number of years and for the last three years has taught in the High school at Flint.

The out of town guests were H. S. Holmes and Mr. and Mrs. R. D. Walker of Chelsea.

COMMERCE CLUB BANQUET

Largely Attended by Tecumseh's Business Men

HELD IN LECTURE ROOM OF M. E. CHURCH TUESDAY EVENING

Business Men Voted to Put on a Series of Twelve Bargain Days This Coming Summer

The Commerce Club banquet held in the lecture room of the Methodist church Tuesday evening, was largely attended. Plates were set for 88 men. It was the first round-up meeting of the business men for the season and proved a very interesting one

The men gathered in the auditorium of the church at 6:30 and when the call was given, marched down to the lecture room and took their places at the long tables provided for them, Mrs. Wilfred Waldron played a march to aid the men to quicken their step to the banquet room.

Seated at the speaker's table were the officers of the Tecumseh Commerce Club, Charles Burridge, president, and H. S. Temple, secretary, the speakers of the evening, W. H. Burnham of Adrian, Gen. F. B. Wood and Dr. W. B. Hartzog, of Tecumseh, also the Club's guests, Major John Bonner and Clark Baldwin of Adrian.

The invocation was pronounced by Rev. James G. Widifield, rector of St. Peter's church.

The Methodist ladies served a three-course banquet which put the men in good humor for the feast that followed. At each plate was a small U. S. flag and a card bearing the names of the officers and committees of the Tecumseh Commerce Club. Each table had its candelabra with lighted candles. Large United States flags were draped upon the walls.

Mrs. Floyd Heesen had general charge of the banquet and Mrs. Fred Rosacrans had charge of the tables. The young ladies of the church did the serving.

Chairman Burridge, after a few introductory remarks, introduced W. H. Burnham of Adrian who spoke in the interest of the Red Cross movement, giving convincing reasons why everyone should get behind the movement. The Adrian men left after Mr. Burnham's talk as they were scheduled for speeches later at Ridgeway.

Gen. F. B. Wood was the next speaker and he told of the opportunities offered men between the ages of 20 years and 9 months and 44 years through the Military Training Association. He appealed to young men to embrace the opportunity offered by the military camp which starts May 8th next at Ft. Sheridan, Ill., whereby a man between the above ages, if he passes the examinations and succeeds in his three months' training, may become an officer in the new army.

Mr. Burridge next took up the business of the evening and first presented the matter of Wednesday Bargain Days for the coming season. He called for a general discussion to draw out the sentiment of the business men. Many new ideas were advanced, but the general sentiment was strongly in favor of a continuance of the Bargain Days.

Some thought that it might be wise to set aside the campaign this year and devote the money to assist the Government in carrying on its war campaign, but the general sentiment prevailed that we should strive to keep business good and that the Bargain Days were not only a mighty good advertising stunt for Tecumseh, but that it brought a vast number of traders to our town. A motion was finally made that a campaign be carried out this coming year, which passed without opposition. A second motion that we hold 12 Bargain Days instead of 15 this season also carried unanimously.

It was also the sentiment that two or three programs of a patriotic nature might be put on this season.

The matter of sprinkling our business streets was brought up. It led to a rather animated discussion, the chairman finally disposing of the matter by placing it in the hands of the Retail Committee of the Commerce Club who were to get in touch with the Council and effect a settlement.

Dr. Hartzog was the last speaker. He presented the work of the local branch of the Red Cross, announcing a meeting for the coming Sunday and urging everyone to become a member

The meeting then adjourned and everyone felt that it had been good for him to touch elbows with his fellow business-men.

ACCIDENT TO FRED CHASE, JR.

Early in the week the report was current in town that Fred Chase, Jr. who is located at Sylvania, Ohio, had been run over by a loaded truck and had an arm and leg taken off. This report was much exaggerated as was proven when his father and brother went to Sylvaina as soon as the word was received.

He was on a truck load of crushed stone and one wheel ran into a rut, throwing him to the ground in such a way that one of the wheels ran over his arm crossing the elbow. At last reports the arm had not been amputated.

The X-ray was to be used Wednesday or Thursday. Should it be left it will be stiff, but even at that it will be better than no arm.

He was up and around the house when they reached his home. And strong hopes are entertained that he may not have to lose his arm. Aside from a few bruises he was not otherwise hurt.

DRIVE IS LAUNCHED AGAINST RUSSIANS

Dual Attack Is Started by Land and Sea.

PETROGRAD — A German battleship and cruiser squadron has left Libau, presumably to attempt an attack behind the Russian lines from the Baltic, according to official word from Riga. It was reported also that another German warship squadron was enroute to the Russian Baltic positions from Kiel.

The Riga dispatches asserted that a number of transports, loaded with troops, were accompanying the German squadron from Libau.

LONDON, ENG. — A dispatch from Petrograd on Thursday said there were well founded reports that the Germans were preparing to attack the northern front, massing troops along the Dvinsk-Riga line and concentrating troops and warships in the Baltic sea ports

A portion of the German fleet was reported to have ben sent from Kiel to Libau. The Petrograd dispatch said it was regarded as probable that the plan is to make a descent in the rear of the Russian northern flank, some where [illegible] Gulf of Finland, and to [illegible]

Prof. Shomar then introduced Sena Hathaway who acted as toastmistress in a very pleasing and efficient manner. Decorations favored both classes, the dining room being decorated in green and white, the Senior colors, and the parlor in pink and green, the Junior colors. All reported a good time and are looking forward to the good things promised at the Seniors' reception in the near future.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the disease portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rubbing sound or imperfect hearing and, when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflamation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

BRITISH IN NEW DRIVE IN FRANCE

Germans Dislodged North of the Scarpe.

1,000 ARE MADE PRISONERS

Two Village Captured and Last Part of Defenses in Region Wiped Out. Arm to Lens Cut Off—Battle Still Progresses on Broad Front.

LONDON, ENG. — The British chopped off the right arm of the original Hindenburg line. Terribly battered and bruised, it had been dangling in the air limp, hitting back now and then aimlessly, ineffectually, in a last heroic exertion of its withering strength.

It is the hand of that arm that has been so tenaciously clutching the great coal city of Lens, and has held it against all the formidable attempts of the Canadians to pry it loose. Now that the arm has been literally hacked off, the grip of the Teuton steel hand about Lens is bound to relax promptly and give the heart of France's coal district to the republic's allies. But in the week that has passed since the British came within the very grasp of the city, in a week of almost superhuman resistance on the part of its defenders, the city has been virtually levelled to the ground and its environs destroyed by fire and water, lest the reconquerers explait the mines to feed their ammunition furnaces.

Sweep Both Sides of Scarpe.

The shattering of the original Hindenburg line's last remnant in the north was effected by Sir Douglas Haig in a furious drive that began Sunday night and is still in progress. Smashing ahead on both banks of the river Scarpe, his forces captured the village of Gavrelle, on the north bank, and Guemappe village, south of the river.

More than 1,000 prisoners were taken.

Gavrelle lies on the main highway from Arras to Douai, being only eight miles from that great strategic objective. Guemappe is on the Arras-Cambral highway, about five miles from Arras.

The British are now face to face with the "Wotan line," a powerfully fortified position stretching from Drocourt, southeast of Lens, down to Queant, switch point of the Hindenburg line. The auxiliary front had been built by the Teutons for the defense of Douai.

5,000,000 Corns Lifted Right Off!

Try 2 Drops of Magic "Gets-It."

There's a wonderful difference between getting rid of a corn now and the way they used to try to get rid of it only four or five years ago. "Gets-It" has revolutionized corn history. It's the only corn remedy today that acts on the new principle, not only of shriveling up the corn, but of loosening the corn off—so loose that you can lift it right off with your fingers. Put 2 drops of "Gets-It" on that corn or callus tonight. That's all. The corn is doomed sure as sunrise. No pain, or trouble, or soreness. You do away once and for all with toe-bundling bandages, toe-eating salves and irresponsible what-nots. Try it—get surprised and lose a corn. Capital Cheers Balfour Party.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The American capital extended a simple but heartfelt welcome to the British minister for foreign affairs, Arthur J. Balfour, and the other members of the British commission, which has come to Washington, as Mr. Balfour himself expressed it "to make co-operation easy and effective between those who are striving—with all their power—to bring about a lasting peace by the only means that can secure it, namely, a successful war."

Everywhere bunting flew in the light breeze, mainly the American colors. The British union jack and the French tricolor were in evidence in many places, but the local flagmakers had been unable to meet the public demand for them.

AVOID ANY POLICY OF DELAY

Thousands Struggle to get a Glimpse of the Man Who Is Willing to Lead a Force of Fighters into Foreign Lands—For Dry United States During the War.

Chicago, April 30.—In two notable speeches Colonel Roosevelt called for the United States to "put the flag on the firing line at the earliest moment and keep it there until the war is over."

T. R. brought to the state that produced Lincoln, Grant, Logan, Sheridan and Sherman his plea that he be allowed to raise an expeditionary force for overseas service—and Chicago received him at two large gatherings as a military leader, and put an O. K. on his request.

Colonel Roosevelt's fighting message to the West is: Send a fighting force to the fighting line.

In two great speeches in Chicago last Saturday he called for the United States to put the flag on the firing line at the earliest moment and keep it there until the war is over.

Colonel's Appeal to West.

Here is the colonel's appeal to the people of the West, made in his stockyards speech, delivered Saturday evening:

I come here tonight to appeal to the people of the great West, the people of the Mississippi Valley, the people who are the spiritual heirs of the men who stood behind Lincoln and Grant. You men and women, who live beside the Great Lakes and on the lands drained by the Ohio, the Mississippi and the Missouri, have always represented what is most intensely American in our national life. When once waked up to actual conditions, you have always stood with unfaltering courage and iron endurance for the national honor and the national interest. I appeal to the sons and daughters of the men and women of the Civil War, to grand sons and daughdaughters of the pioneers; I appeal to the women as much as to the men, for our nation has risen level to every great crisis only because in every such crisis the courage of its women flamed as high as the courage of the men.

I appeal to you to take the lead in making good the President's message of the second of this month, in which he set forth the reasons why it was our unescapable duty to make war upon Germany. It rests with us—with the American people—to make that message one of the great state documents of our history. Let us accept the lessons it teaches. Let us grasp what it says as to the frightful wrongs Germany has committed upon us and upon the weaker nations of mankind, and the damage she has wrought to the whole fabric of civilization and of international good faith and morality. Then let us steel our hearts and gird our loins to show that we are fit to stand among the free people whose freedom is buttressed by their self-reliant strength. Let us show by our deeds that we are fit to be the heirs of the men who founded the Republic and of the men who saved the Republic; of the Continentals who followed Washington, and of the men who bore the blue under Grant and the gray under Lee.

But, mind you, the message, the speech will amount to nothing unless we make it good and it can be made good only by the high valor of our fighting men, and by the resourceful and laborious energy of the men and women who with deeds, not merely words, back up the fighting men. We read the Declaration of Independence every Fourth of July because, and only because, the soldiers of Washington made the message good by their blood during the weary years of war that followed. If, after writing the Declaration of Independence, the men of Seventy-Six had failed with their bodies to make it good, it would be read now only with contempt and derision. Our children still learn how Patrick Henry spoke for the heart of the American people when he said "Give me liberty or give me death;" but this generation is thrilled by his words only because the Americans of those days showed in very fact that they were ready to accept death rather than lose their liberty. In Lincoln's deathless Gettysburg speech and second inaugural he solemnly pledged the honor of the American people to the hard and perilous task of preserving the Union and freeing the slaves. The pledge was kept. The American people fought to a finish the war which saved the Union and freed the slave. If Lincoln and the men and women behind him had wavered, if they had grown faint-hearted and had shrunk from the fight or, had merely paid others to fight for them, they would have earned for themselves and for us the scorn of the nations of mankind. The words of Lincoln will live forever only because they were made good by the deeds of the fighting men.

Making the Message Good.

So it is now. We can make the President's message of April 2d stand among the great state papers in our history; but we can do so only if we make the message good; and we can make it good only if we fight with all our strength now, at once; if at the earliest possible moment, we put the flag on the firing line, and keep it there, over a constantly growing army until the war closes by a peace which brings victory to the great cause of democracy and civilization, the great cause of justice and fair play among the peoples of the world.

We Americans are at war. Now let us fight. Let us make it a real war, not a dollar war. Let us show that we have the manhood to pay with our own bodies, and not merely to hire other men to pay with their bodies. Let us fight at once. Let us put the flag at the front now, at the earliest moment and not merely announce that we are going to fight a year or two hence.

I most earnestly and heartily stand by the proposal of the President to raise an army on the principle of universal obligatory military training and military service, demanded as a right, not as a favor, from all the young men of the country capable of bearing arms. This is the principle I have long advocated with all fervor of conviction. It is the only really democratic principle on which permanently to shape the military policy of this country. To have it adopted as the permanent principle of our national military policy will be of incalculable service to our national peace and welfare. Moreover, if the war lasts, as well it may, for one or two or three years, the army, to see it through, must be raised in this fashion. It is vitally essential, both from the standpoint of fighting this war through to a successful conclusion, if it should last a long time, and from the standpoint of our permanent national safety and democratic welfare, that we should immediately inaugurate this principle and set about raising a great army in accordance therewith.

Such an army will naturally need a long time to train, and at the earliest moment we should begin to devote our strength and energy to calling it into being and training it. This should be the task which we treat as of prime importance. But most emphatically, we should not rest content with this. We should not rest content with merely preparing an army to act a year or eighteen months or two years hence.

Let us put the flag on the firing line at the earliest possible moment, this Summer, wherever our services are most needed—in France or Flanders or the Balkan Peninsula. It need only be a small army at first. But even a division would be better than nothing. Then we can constantly keep that division filled, and other divisions from time to time added to it; until, a year hence, if the war continues, we have a really formidable fighting force at the front, a fighting force which will steadily increased month by month, year by year, until the triumph comes.

To do this, it is necessary that we should appeal for volunteers, not in any way as a substitute for, but as a supplement to, the Administration's plan for raising an army in accordance with the principle of obligatory universal service. If the system of universal obligatory training and service had already been in existence here for a number of years, and if in other ways we had been prepared in advance, we could by this time have had an expeditionary force of a million men under way for the front, ready to strike the finishing blow. But the system does not yet exist, and, necessarily, all kinds of preliminaries will have to be gone through before it can now be called into being and an effective army of large size raised under it. Therefore, to wait for it before really entering into the war means an indefinite delay, a delay that might bring us to the end, not merely of the campaign this year, but of the campaign next year before we can strike hard and effectively. I wish to see the system of obligatory service used in order to make all men serve who ought to serve. It would be a capital mistake to use it in such fashion as merely to prevent men rendering service when they wish to render it and can render it, and ought to render it. Do not let anyone volunteer to stay at home. But do not hinder men, who, under conscription, would be entitled to stay at home, from volunteering to go to the front if they can render good service. Under the bill proposed to Congress by the War Department, many millions of excellent fighting men would be exempt from service, while a long time would elapse before the others are sent to the front. Under these conditions, we ought to use the volunteer system to fill the gap; it opens to us at once a great possibility; let it be used, and used exclusively to those who would otherwise be exempt an opportunity to go to the front without claiming exemption. Let me illustrate my meaning by a homely comparison. Every village ought to have a fire company. But if it commits the error of waiting until a fire starts before organizing the fire company, it will merely aggravate the situation by committing the further error of refusing to put out the fire until after the fire company is organized. The only wise thing to do is to put out the fire with the means that are handy, and then immediately organize the permanent fire company.

No Policy of Delay.

I most earnestly hope that we shall avoid any policy of delay. If we are true to our own souls, we shall show that, like our forefathers, we are willing to pay for our principles with our bodies and not merely with our dollars. Congress has passed, without a dissenting vote, a bill to appropriate seven billions of dollars as representing part of our contribution to the great war. This is fine; but only on condition that we also put our men into the fighting line. Half of this great sum is to go to the Allies; that is, it is to be spent by them in getting their men up against the German and Austrian and Turkish shells and bullets. Now, we Americans have always prided our selves on being able to do our own fighting. It is right to help others to fight in the common cause for which we are engaged. But it is even more necessary that we should fight ourselves.

I ask that we send a fighting force over to the fighting line at the earliest possible moment, and I ask it in the name of our children and our children's children, so that they may hold their heads high over the memory of what this nation did in world's great crisis. I ask it for reasons of national morality no less than for our material self-interest. I ask it for the sake of our self-respect, our self-esteem. Our children will have to read the history of what we have done during this war. Let us make the chapter that yet remains to be written one that our children shall read with pride; and they will read it only with a feeling of self-abasement unless they read that in the times that tried men's souls we have shown valor and endurance and proud indifference to life when the honor of the flag and the welfare of mankind were at stake.

Ban Rum, Says T. R.

In a speech delivered in the afternoon at a luncheon given by the Chicago branch of the National Security league, he urged that use of grain for the manufacture of alcoholic drinks be prohibited for the period of the war.

The colonel said on the subject. "The world is having a shortage of food. Soon we in this country shall face a shortage of food. Therefore, let us use all the grain we have for food and not for intoxicants. Now that the war is on let us forbid any grain or corn being used in the manufacture of intoxicating liquors."

He urged obligatory military training, the expansion and improvement of the navy, and asserted that an expeditionary force should be sent to France at once. Present conscription plans, he said, would deny service to many men who wished to volunteer. He remarked that when England adopted conscription, she did not decline the services of volunteers from Canada and Australia.

Resolutions Invite Envoys to Chicago

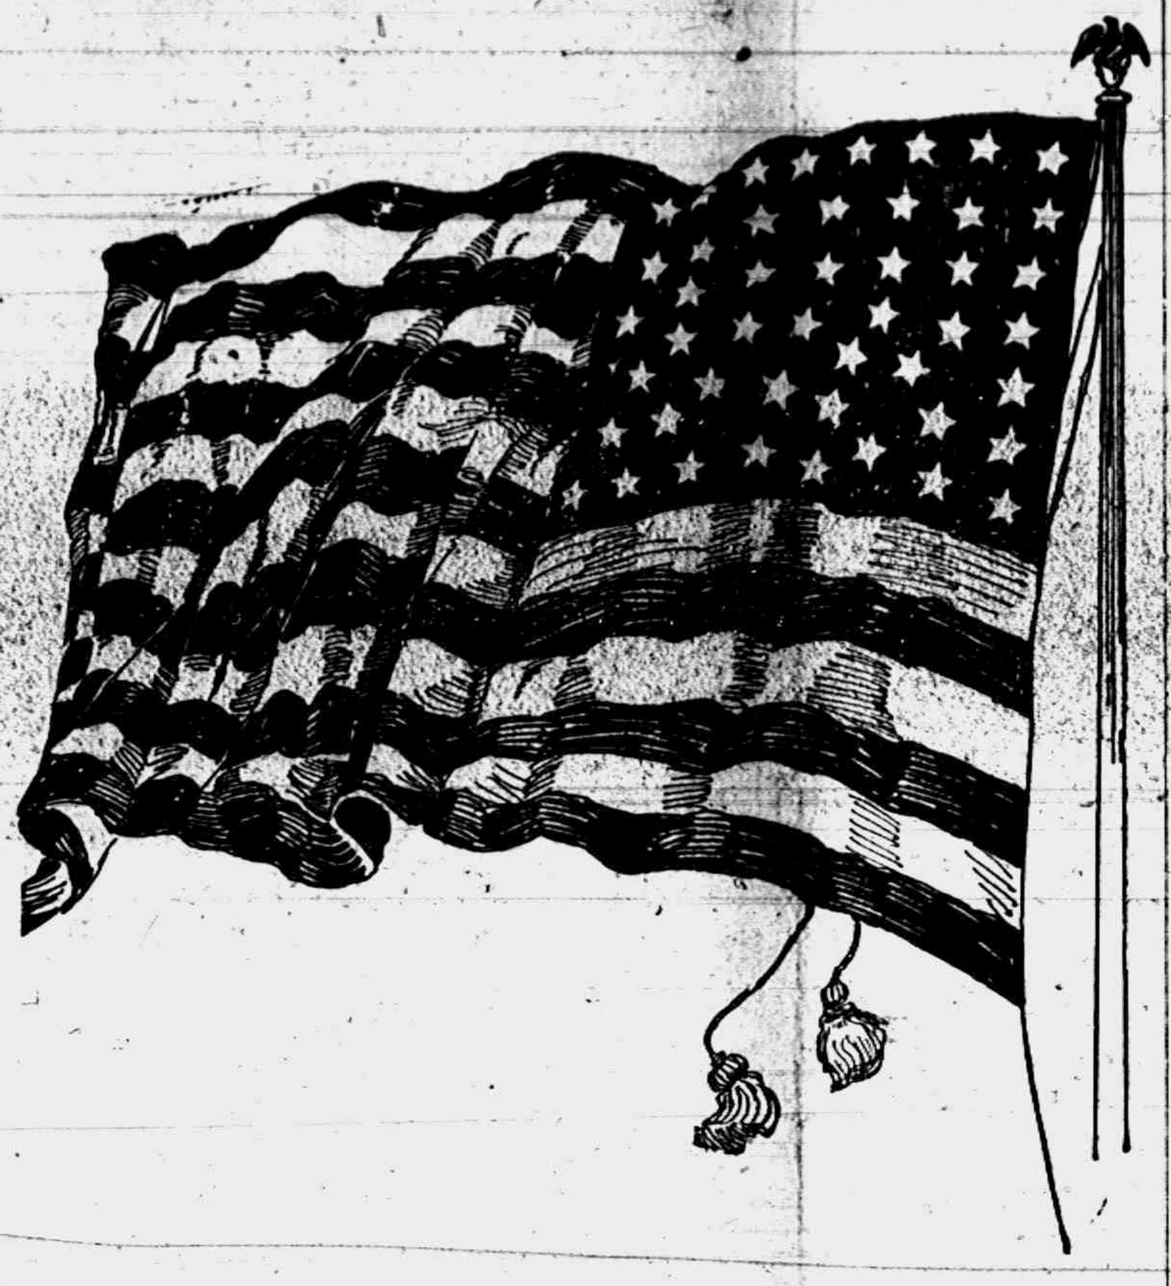
"RESOLVED, That this great meeting of the citizens of Chicago, called together by the National Security league, with all the enthusiasm of a common purpose, indorse the invitation extended by Frank O. Lowden governor of Illinois, and the city government to Minister of Justice Viviani and Marshal Joffre of the French commission and Arthur J. Balfour of the British commission and their distinguished associates to visit Chicago and personally meet its people; that whatever else may occupy their time and attention while here we earnestly request their presence and their valued counsel from such of their number as will speak directly to our people at a meeting to be held in Chicago at their convenience; be it further

"RESOLVED, That in anticipation of their favorable answer and entire co-operation in the same spirit that the invitation is expressed the president of the National Security league shall appoint such committees and such authority as may best carry into effect the purpose and the intent of this resolution."



THE AMERICAN FLAG

When Freedom from her mountain height, unfurled her standards to the air,
She tore the azure robe of night, and set the stars of glory there!
She mingled with its gorgeous dyes
The milky baldric of the skies,
And striped its pure celestial white
With streakings of the morning light;
Then, from his mansion in the sun,
She called her eagle-bearer down,
And gave into his mighty hand
The symbol of her chosen land.

OUR TURN OF SERVICE.

There is so much to be set right in the world, there are so many weaklings or unfortunates to be led and helped and comforted, that we must continually come in contact with such in our daily life. Let us take care that we do not miss our turn of service.—Elizabeth Charles.

CONSCRIPTION BILL IS PASSED BY CONGRESS

Senate Also Adopts Amendment for Roosevelt.

Washington, April 30.—Conscription! This was decreed by congress as the military means to employ to bring the imperial German government to terms and to end the war. On final passage the measure went through by the following votes: House—For, 397; against, 24. Senate—For, 81; against 8.

But while the senate and house manifested indubitably their purpose to adopt conscription, the national sentiment in favor of authorizing Colonel Theodore Roosevlt to go to France proved so strong that the Harding amendment to this end was adopted in the senate.

Here is th elist of members who voted against action designed to arm the country for the prosecution of the war:

Alabama—Burnett, Hudleston; California—Church, Hayes, Nolan, Randall; Colorado—Hilliard, Keating; Florida—Clark, Fears; Illinois—King, Mason; Kentucky—Powers; Michigan—Bacon; Minnesota—Lundin; New York—London; North Carolina—Dominick; Ohio—Claypool, Crosser, Gordon, Sherwood; Washington—Dill, La Follette.

The senators who voted against the conscription bill follows: Democrats—Gore, Hardwick, Kirby, Thomas, Trammell—5. Republicans—Borah, Gronna, La Follette—3. (Vardaman excused from voting.)

Washington, April 30.—Guatemala has broken off diplomatic relations with Germany, handed to the German minister his passports and canceled the exequaturs of German consuls there.

Bad English on the Stage.

The stage is much to blame for the vogue of slipshod and ungrammatical diction. The text of most of the popular songs is pointlessly defiant of grammar. The singers and actors often affect a strident nasality for footlight use which they discard with their cosmetics and their costumes. If actors and actresses find that they are putting to flight a public of sensitive ears they are likely to reform.—Philadelphia Ledger.

MICHIGAN IS LIBERAL IN GOOD ROADS AID

Farmers, Now Owners of Autos, Are Among Boosters.

LANSING, April 30.

With more "ready cash" for improved road building on hand; with extended powers for raising money for roads; with state wide compulsory provisions for raising money for repairs on main highways; with increased bonding power and with increased general powers, the highway authorities of Michigan will this year enter upon the greatest construction and systemizing period the state ever has known.

The legislature of 1917, which has just closed its session, has not been only more liberal than any predecessor, but it has placed upon the statute books more constructive legislation with reference to improved highway construction than any other legislature.

The outstanding feature in analyzing the attitude of the legislature towards spending public money for roads was the influence of the automobile. The town man, with his fast semi-racer, heavy limousine and other evidences of urban modernity, can no longer look upon the rural legislator as incapable of appreciating an automobile owner's viewpoint—every farmer legislator with two exceptions owned an auto. Not only does he own autos, but automobile trucks now are so common in the rural communities that the legislature, without question or debate, passed truck regulations, governing the size of tire and weight of load.

In court Justice Heston sentenced a masher who had accosted a working girl to pay a fine of $100 or serve ninety days in jail.

The Red Cross organization which is being pushed in this locality and, in fact, everywhere throughout the nation is one of the most worthy movements before our American people today. Our people need feel no hesitancy in associating themselves with Red Cross. Most everyone is familiar with the movement by this time as all papers, of late, have been full of it and public meetings have been held in our city with capable speakers whose object was to inform the people.

Our local branch is officered by prominent people of Tecumseh and they are donating hours of service to the work. The following are the officers and members of the committee in charge of our local branch: Mrs. B. J. Pulver, chairman; Mrs. G. A. Rathbun, first assistant; Chas. Burridge, second assistant; Guy Nemire, secretary and H. S. Temple, treasurer.

When the committee call upon you, if they have not already done so, you need not feel that they are on a begging campaign, but rather that they are giving you an opportunity to serve your country. Our boys will be called out in the near future by the thousands. We can't go, many of us, but we can all do and must do our share towards pushing this war to a successful ending, and getting lined up with the Red Cross is one way of helping.

How Hard Rubber Is Made.

We're all of us coming in contact with hard rubber every day of our lives. Our fountain pen, our inkwell tops, the magneto parts and telephone receivers are all made of hard rubber.

But how is it made? Where does it differ from the rubber in an automobile tire, for instance? We'll wager a guess that not one man in a thousand knows.

Vulcanization consists of uniting sulphur with rubber to give it certain properties of elasticity, durability and, still more important, make it to retain these same properties under all normal conditions of heat and cold.

When a larger proportion of sulphur than is found in ordinary soft rubber is present and vulcanization is continued for a much longer time we obtain as a result a substance vastly different in physical properties—hard rubber. Before vulcanization it is quite elastic and we can mold it to suit our needs.—Exchange.

Those Good Old Prices.

I've just come across an old menu, stained and torn, that was issued seventy-five years ago by Hathaway's hotel and eating house, which makes one long for a return of some prices that prevailed in those "good old days." This famous old eating house stood on the spot where the present Boston tavern stands, and the menu referred to is one of the relics of old Boston days in the tavern's collection.

According to that menu, a porterhouse steak was served for 37½ cents, tenderloin steak was 25 cents, sirloin 20 cents and plain beefsteak 15 cents. Roast goose was 25 cents, turkey and chicken 20 cents.

In the barber shop shaving was 8 cents, hair cutting 15 cents and shampooing 20 cents. Baths cost 15 cents. A night's lodging was but 50 cents.—Boston Post.

Arms of Washington.

The arms which Washington used are heraldically described as follows: Argent (silver), two bars gules (red), in chief three mullets (stars) of the second, gules (red). The crest: A raven with wings addorsed, sable (black), issuing out of a ducal coronet, or (gold).

Although these arms were used by Washington, the arms of the family in Yorkshire are materially different, bearing a lion and being surmounted by a crest with an eagle, not a raven. The Yorkshire arms were the original arms, according to Albert Welles, whose "Pedigree and History of the Washington Family" gives with edifying detail the descent of the Father of His Country from Odin, first king of Scandinavia. Fifty-five generations were required to evolve George Washington from Odin.

"How much are calories? I want to buy 500," a young woman inquired of the floorwalker.

"Calories?" he replied. "I don't believe—500—I doubt if we have that many in stock. However, inquire at the dress goods counter."

"Have you any calories in stock?" she asked the clerk.

"Calories? What's them?" The clerk for once looked puzzled.

"Well, I don't know. But I know this wouldn't be the department. Calories, you know, are something to eat. I went to a food lecture the other day, and they said to eat at least 500 calories a day. I suppose it's a vegetable."

"I suppose so," said the clerk.—Columbus Dispatch.

True Eloquence.

True eloquence, indeed does not consist in speech. It cannot be brought from far. Labor and learning may toil for it, but they will toil in vain. Words and phrases may be marshaled in every way, but they cannot compass it. It must consist in the man, in the subject and in the occasion. Affected passion, intense expression, the pomp of declamation, all may inspire to it. They cannot reach it. It comes, if it comes at all, like the outbreaking of a fountain from the earth or the bursting forth of volcanic fires with spontaneous, original, native force.—Webster.

"INTOLERANCE" COMING

The world's greatest show, D. W. Griffith's mightiest spectacle, "Iintolerance" was booked this mornng for an early appearance at the Bradley Opera House. The date, which will probably be Friday, May 25th, will be confirmed later.

"Intolerance" was produced by D. W. Griffith who was also the producer and director of "The Birth of a Nation" and "Intolerance" is presented on the same magnificent scale as was his former production, carrying a special 60 foot car load of stage settings, effects, machines, chorus, etc including a complete orchestra of 25.

"Intolerance" will go into the Detroit Opera House for an all summer run commencing the first of June, but they are filling some open time between the Chicago engagement, where they have been playing for over a year and the Detroit engagement, and owing to the two capacity houses it gave "The Birth of a Nation" Mr. Griffith has selected Tecumseh for one of these dates. We get the same orchestra and production including stage setting complete that will play the Detroit Opera House.

"Intolerance" is truly the world's mightiest spectacle, where Mr. Griffith used hundreds of people and horses in "The Birth of a Nation" he uses thousands in "Intolerance."

Might Have Changed History.

Here is the story of an averted tragedy which, if it had not been averted might have changed the whole course of modern history in Europe. The time was about three weeks after Sadowa The place was the little village of Pirsdorf, about thirty miles from Vienna. King William of Prussia and Bismarck were there, and they sat down on a terrace outside a small cafe to drink beer Kern, an Austrian forester, saw them He regarded them as the deadly enemies of his country. He was an excellent marksman, and he had his double barreled gun with him. Taking aim from behind cover, he was about to fire when his wife, seeing what he was after and fearing the consequences, clutched him by the coattails. He turned to argue with her, and before the argument was finished the king and his chancellor had disappeared. So nothing happened. But if Kern had been allowed to fire there might have been no German empire.

Joy of Pockets.

The pocket has to be lacked before it is properly appreciated, the London Chronicle says. This writer had taken his pockets as a matter of course until one evening he attended a fancy dress ball in costume which, he discovered when too late to remedy the defect, was absolutely pocketless. The question at once arose what to do with pocket handkerchief, money, cloakroom ticket, and so on. The handkerchief, of course, went up his sleeve, but it took some minutes to devise receptacles for coins and other necessaries in the lining of the cap, the heels of the shoes and the cuff of the coat. All night long, however, he felt lost through having no place to thrust his hands into. Since then he finds himself frequently putting his hands into his pockets to experience the sheer joy of knowing that they are there.

A Thirty-three Year Job.

The founder of "synthetic philosophy," so called as being an attempt at fusing all the sciences into a whole, was Herbert Spencer. It was in 1859, when he was about forty, that Spencer projected his scheme of philosophy, based on the principle of evolution in its relation to life, mind, society and morals. He proposed a scheme requiring him to complete eleven volumes in twenty years, but he was thirty-three years at work on it, and then it had greatly exceeded the original scope. To the accomplishment of his self imposed and gigantic task he devoted all of his time, strength and mental powers, steadfastly refusing honors and titles. Delicate from infancy, he yet lived to pass his eighty-third milestone.—Chicago Journal.

Passing Counterfeits.

Johnny—Say, papa, passing counterfeit money is unlawful, isn't it? Papa—Yes. Johnny—Well, papa, if a man was walking along the street and saw a ten dollar counterfeit bill upon the sidewalk and did not pick it up wouldn't he be guilty of passing counterfeit money, and couldn't he be arrested and put in jail? Papa—More likely the lunatic asylum. Now you may go to bed, my son.—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

RED CROSS RALLY

Sunday Evening at Bradley's Opera House

Hall Crowded to Listen to Inspiring Words Spoken by Judge H. L. Larwill and F. A. Perry.

The Opera House was crowded to the doors Sunday evening to attend the big Red Cross Rally. Judge H. L. Larwill and Dr. F. A. Perry of Adrian were the speakers and those who attended were not disappointed for both speeches were ringing appeals for the people of the community to stand by their flag and to get behind the Red Cross movement.

The opera house was decorated with United States flags while at either side of the stage were small flags of Britian and France to typify our union in the mighty struggle across the seas with the Allies.

The meeting opened by singing "America," led by Fred Dickinson with Miss Genevieve Halladay presiding at the piano. The Invocation was pronounced by Rev. W. A. Rex.

Dr. W. B. Hartzog acted as chairman. He stated they had been disappointed in not having with them the Red Cross quartette from Adrian and, after a few announcements in regard to the canvass to be made Monday for Red Cross membership, introduced the first speaker, Judge H. L. Larwill of Adrian.

The Judge is always welcome before a Tecumseh audience and in his own delightful manner made a forceful patriotic appeal to the people. He stated that it was extremely hard for this great liberty-loving people to realize that we were at war. He reviewed the history of the war step by step, told of the German invasion of Belgium, of the fearful wrongs that Germany had perpetrated upon this little country, how the French had so valiantly checked the onward march of the invaders and held them in check for many weary months until the English could get ready to come to their aid and how they were now so valiantly pushng them back out of France.

He pointed out the dangers that still confronted the Allied forces and urged for a speedy entrance of Uncle Sam into the line of battle where he could fight side by side with the armies who have been fighting our battles for over two years The judge spoke of the obligation we owe the French who so nobly came to our assistance during the dark days of the Revolution.

He told of the kinship with the mother country England, how our laws and customs sprang from theirs and how the great Allied countries were fighting for a just and noble cause.

No country ever went to war with a cleaner record. The war was forced on us. The sinking of the Luisitania was a declaration of war and then he reviewed the many vicious acts that followed and how our President acted with patience until the ruthless U-boat campaign was announced and of his masterly message to Congress on April 2nd. Congress has acted slowly since war has been declared and a great deal of unpatriotic feeling has been expressed in that body. He paid his respects to the Hon. W J. Bryan, Senator LaFollette and "the little fellow from Wyandotte who represents us in Congress." He stood firmly for the army conscription bill

Judge Larwell declared that we were not going to war against the German people for our friendship was great for them and we owed them much but were striving to liberate them from the tyranical power of Prussian imperialism. The Imperial German government had broken all laws of civilization and had left no honorable course for this nation to pursue but that of taking up arms against her and crushing her completely.

Dr. Perry then gave a stirring address in the interest of Red Cross. He told of the great importance of the work and how little prepared this great nation is to take care of the needs of our soldiers at the front. Sometime ago President Wilson inquired into the membership of Red Cross and was horrified to find a membership of only 25,000 It was then that he sent out his appeal to the country for a million members. Since this our membership has increased to 250,000 and a vigorous campaign is on all over the country to increase the membership to the required number.

Japan has a membership of 1,800,000, Germany 1,600,000, and no nation of importance has so small a membership as ours. All remember the results at the time of the Spanish American War when this country let its soldiers die by the thousands for lack of the treatment that could have been given them by the Red Cross.

The Red Cross is as essential as any branch of the service and he appealed to the patriotic people of Lenawee county to forget the all mighty dollar and contribute to this great movement He had confidence in the loyalty of Tecumseh people and those living in this township and had placed the membership for the township at 600 This nation must not send her sons to lay on the battlefields without a fully equipped Red Cross to give them the proper care and comforts. Our people must awake and furnish the government with a competent and complete Red Cross service

The meeting closed with the Benediction offered by Dr W B Hartzog.

LOCAL U. S. MARINE SCORES AS MARKSMAN

Coming rapidly to the front through his ability as a rifleman, Ralph N Luce of Tipton has qualified as a marksman in the U. S. Marine Corps, according to an official bulletin from Washington. He recently made an excellent score at "slow and rapid" fire, winning the badge of marksmanship and an increase of pay

Ralph, who is a son of Mr and Mrs Irving Luce of Tipton, enlisted in the Marine Corps at its Jackson recruiting station, Dec. 18, 1916. He has just completed a course of training at Port Royal, S. C. Besides the regular military subjects, the course includes boxing, swimming and other athletic training.

Dozens of recruits arrive daily at Port Royal, and they take keen interest in our country's preparation for war while training to become "Soldiers of the Sea". Without a doubt the Tipton boy will be well prepared to "do his bit" when the call comes to go into action.

LETTER FROM ENGLAND

Ovid Marsh is in receipt of a letter from a cousin, Owen Marsh from Avergavenny, Mon., England, which is very interesting. It was written on Good Friday and he says:

"By this morning's paper I see that your President and Senate have declared war against the Huns. Thank God! You are coming to help us. I did not think you could stand out much longer, seeing the awful and cruel manner in which the Germans are waging this war, sinking without warning hospital ships and everything they come across"

Mr. Marsh is a man 80 years old yet he is chairman of the county council and fully employed on several war committees. Among them is the Agricultural War Committee which is helping the farmers who are short for help Food is becoming fearfully dear and they expect soon to be on compulsory rations

Mr. Marsh has given one of his large houses for the Red Cross hospital work and has also lent a large shop as a receiving station for all kinds of produce which the farmers in the district are bringing in as gifts for the army. His letter breathes loyalty throughout.

BETTER BABY WEEK IN 1917

The recent epidemic of infantile paralysis will necessarily modify the plans for Baby Week in certain communities. It would seem wise in any community in which epidemics have occurred in 1916 to 1917, to omit any features such as baby health conferences, baby parades, etc., involving the bringing together of numbers of babies. In such communities however, special opportunity may be offered to carrying out in other ways an educational campaign for the several protection of babies, as well as for the proper treatment of babies with paralyzed muscles. Last year it was found in at least one city, heavily afflicted by the epidemic, that the baby death rate was actually lower than the year before, Let us hope that we may be able to look back upon the campaign of 1917 with as much pride as we now feel for the Baby Week of 1916. We must remember that the United States includes 14,188 incorporated towns and villages and 3,000 counties so that brilliant as was our beginning there is much more to do before every center in our country has had even one celebration of Baby Week. for 1917 should write as soon as possible to the Children's Bureau U. S. Department of Labor, Washington, D. C., for more detailed suggestions.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only Constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hunderd dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

Making a Garden.

Agriculture is nearly as old as man, and since it began it is probable that farmers have been studying out balanced rations for domestic animals, but even yet few housekeepers have any real scientific ideas on feeding the family. Your state agricultural college or the department of agriculture, Washington, can help you out in this, and you should take the matter into consideration in making your garden and see to it that your vegetables include the most nutritious and health giving properties. Every farmer knows that when a horse works all day he should receive certain feed and when he is idle—in rainy weather, for instance—he gets different rations. How about a man or a child? Do you know how to set your table to get the maximum results and keep perfect health? Do you serve the same food to the men working in the heat of the harvest field, to the boy going to school and to the babies? Your garden should contribute to the health and happiness of each.—Reclamation Record.

A PASTORAL LETTER

The following appeal from Bishop Charles D. W. Williams was read at St. Peters Church Sunday morning and is in harmony with the feeling that is sweeping our country today.

My Dear People:

In this great national crisis which has so recently come upon us, two opportunities for service offer themselves to every Christian man and woman—opportunities to which each of us ought to respond with joy. We cannot shoulder rifles, don uniforms, join the navy or army but each of us has his "bit to do" for the common need and service.

The first concerns, not our own people, but "crucified Belgium." Our American Commission for Belgium Relief has left Belgium. But their work is being carried on by honest and capable hands and it is likely to be more needed in the near future than it ever has in the past. "The cry of the children," the starving children of Belgium, rings in our ears. Enough food is reaching them to keep them barely alive. But one dollar a month would supply a biscuit and a cup of chocolate for one child and that additional nourishment often means the saving of that child from rickets or tuberculosis. Will not you form such a "dollar-a-month club" in this congregation? If any would-be contributor feels unable to give a dollar a month, let several combine to make the subscription. Your Bishop has been appointed by the Governor on the "Michigan Commission for Belgium Relief." I will gladly receive and forward any contributions or they may be sent direct to Prof. Francis W. Kelsey, University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Secretary of the State Commission.

Faithfully your Bishop,
Chas. D. Williams.

The second opportunity that the Bishop referred to was the National Red Cross Work, but as our local branch of the Red Cross society are doing such efficient work it was not thought best to publish that part of letter.

THE BELGIAN CHILDREN ARE STARVING

They are wasting away from hunger—the end will be death or, worse than death, a life crippled by underdevelopment of body and mind.

No matter what we may think about the war, or the action of adults the children are not responsible.

Will you join us in the Dollar-a-Month Club for Belgian Children?

If you can not give a dollar a month, will you not raise that amount among your neighbors and friends and be responsible for its prompt collection? If you can give more, will you not subscribe just as many dollars as possible? Every penny you send will go straight to the Relief Work for Belgian Children through the Commission for Relief in Belgium. Join the following members:

"LESS THAN THE DUST"

When Mary Pickford appears next Monday at the New Royal Theatre in her newest picture play, "Less Than the Dust," it will mark her first engagement in Tecumseh since she decided to shake off the shackles which had restricted her development previously and become absolutely independent in her productions. Much is expected from this radical departure. Miss Pickford is optimistic that her decision will result in a new era in the motion picture art. She will no longer be obliged to make pictures by the clock or calendar, but will take plenty of time to select a thoroughly satisfactory story, make an elaborate production and rehearse a company of supporting players of high and even merit. Then when the play is just right it will be distributed by Artcraft Pictures Corporation, which was organized especially to present these new master productions of the most famous little star in the field of the motion picture.

"Less Than the Dust," the first Artcraft release, offers an entire evening's entertainment and Manager F. S. Anderson of the Royal has gone to extra expense to obtain this supreme attraction for his theatre. Hector Turnbull, author of many a well-known film success, wrote the story with which Miss Pickford will inaugurate her new policy, crediting his inspiration to a poem which Laurence Hope called "Less Than the Dust." Miss Pickford has decided to retain this title because it expresses so well the character of the pathetic little heroine whom misfortune carried from her fine home in England to the slum of a city of modern India. All the mystic and picturesque charm of the East has been retained in the production, for which a complete city was built before John Emerson, the director, began the filming of the Indian scenes required by the story

ORDER OF EASTERN STAR WINS IN LIBRARY CONTEST

Springbrook Lodge of Tipton a close Second.

Exciting Contest Closed Monday Evening.

The Tecumseh Chapter, No. 51 Order of Eastern Star is the winner in the Library contest, which closed Monday night and will receive the handsome case and library of books which has been on exhibition in McCann & Bowen's window for the past several months.

The finish was close and the race has been between the O. E. S. and the Springbrook Lodge of Tipton. The result was in doubt up to the final count, both orders depositing enormous numbers of votes in the closing hours of the contest. Tellers were kept busy most of the afternoon and evening and it was not until a late hour in the evening that the result was announced. After 3 o'clock in the afternoon the Springbrook Lodge deposited over 1,130,000 votes and it looked as if they would surely win. The contest has created a good deal of interest in this locality and its progress has been watched closely. The Tecumseh Library polled over 1,000,000 votes and finished third in the contest.

The library which the Eastern Star won is composed of about 100 volumes, neatly bound and of a mixed collection. Such authors as Kipling, Barrie, Gibbn, Eliot, Larand, Bryan and others are to be found in this collection. Fiction, history and reference books make this collection quite valuable for library purposes. With the library comes a handsome oak case built in four sections with glass front.

The final result of the contest is as follows:

About 200 memberships were Secured

Monday was canvass day for the local Red Cross movement as well as for the county and workers planned to cover every nook and corner of our town and township. The canvass was blocked out by the chairman of the canvassing committee Dr. W. B Hartzog and his assistant Rev W. A. Rex, for the territory covered by our local organization and eight captains were appointed to have charge of the work for their districts.

While the result of the campaign is not definitely known at this time, as many of the ladies still have sections to cover, still we were told by the secretary this morning that about 200 memberships were secured from Monday's campaign. This added to the number previously recorded will bring our local Red Cross membership up to over 400.

The canvass is thorough and an opportunity will be given to everyone to aid in this great movement which will do so much to care for our sons who go to the front. Old Lenawee will make a splendid showing without doubt, and later all members will be given plenty of opportunity to do Red Cross work for the local branch. Quantities of material will have to be provided for the service and people will have a chance to make garments, prepare bandages and a countless number of other supplies for the front.

A "BABY WEEK" FOR 1917

May 6 to 10 has been set aside for another nation-wide campaign for "Better Babies." The department of Public Health, Home Economics and Civics are again co-operating, with Mrs. Cowles back of the movement.

Our own Bessie Leach Priddy of Ypsilanti, former chairman of Civics, heads the Civics Committee in the General Federation and will give valuable aid to the project.

Much or little can be expended in conducting a successful "Baby Week" and many campaigns were carried in last year without the expenditure of any real money. State and local boards of health will gladly co-operate, also the press, the pulpit, chambers of commerce and other organizations.

The General Federation Magazine for January, 1917, devotes three pages to plans for the 1917 campaign telling you also how a campaign may be carried out successfully in one day or one week. Our new Handbook of Outlines also offers valuable suggestions, telling where material may be secured and how programs can be worked out.

It is to be hoped that an increasingly large number of clubs will enter into the campaign of "Better Babies" for Michigan. Write to the Children's Bureau, Washington, D. C. for the new bulletin on baby week campaigns, plan to co-operate with other agents in your community and notify your president of results. Mrs. Bessie Leach Priddy, Ypsilanti Normal College, requests that reports of these celebrations be sent her for use in her work in the Gener- Federation along civic lines.

AFTER NINE YEARS

Tecumseh Testimony Remains Unshaken.

Time is the best test of truth. Here is a Tecumseh story that has stood the test of time. It is a story with a point which will come straight home to many of us.

Mrs. C. Stevenson, Wyandotte & Pottawatamie Sts., Tecumseh, says: "The first notice I had that my kidneys were disordered was a sharp, shooting pain across my back. At that time I was sick in bed with malaria. The nurse I had attending me said I ought to try Doan's Kidney Pills; I got a box and began their use. The pains left, the kidney secretions became natural and the gravel stones that I had been passing for years, disappeared." (Statement given December 10, 1906.)

STILL USES DOAN'S

On July 27, 1916 Mrs. Stevenson said: "I still use and recommend Doan's Kidney Pills, I could not get along without them when my back or kidneys trouble me, for they never fail to give me relief."

Price 50c at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Stevenson has twice publicly recommended. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y. adv

Your Own Career.

"You may be whatever you resolve to be." That was the motto of Stonewall Jackson, who died a lieutenant general at thirty-nine. The meteoric soldier found that sticking everlastingly at it was what put the [illegible] in [illegible] Stonewall's maxim means that you can do what you try to do if you try hard enough. Mr. Favre found that out forty years ago when against obstacles supreme and penalties of $1,000 a day for failure he pierced the St. Gothard tunnel through the Alps. That stupendous work cost eight times the original estimates of ten millions, but it was done, and done to the everlasting glory of human pluck.—Girard in Philadelphia Ledger.

Join the Pay Up Crowd.

John D. Rockefeller often referred proudly to the fact that when he was making $25 a month he made it a point to pay all his bills promptly. He also managed to save a little money that later became the foundation of his great fortune. When you pay your bills promptly you know just where you are at. Pay up is becoming a national slogan. Cities and states have inaugurated pay up days and pay up weeks. The man who pays his bills when they are due feels better for it. There is no doubt that he makes the man he owes feel better. Do your part in the pay up campaign. Pay now.

Pays His Men Each Day.

Contractors in central Pennsylvania have solved the problem of keeping labor on the job. The force of one contractor who began paying his men off every day instead of at the end of the week was so pleased with the arrangement that it stuck by him, and other contractors have adopted the same plan. According to reports, the plan has met with success wherever tried.—Engineering Record

World's Oldest Investment.

The oldest investment security on earth is the real estate mortgage. We know that money was loaned on mortgages in ancient Babylon in the time of King Hamurabi, 4,000 years ago, and that some 2,500 years ago the great Babylonian banking house of the Egibi family invested large sums in mortgages on both city and farm property, the mortgages being recorded on bricks, which have been preserved in the safety deposit vaults of those times—great earthenware jars buried in the earth—preserved until the archaeologists in our own day and age dug them up to show us when, where and how mortgages originated.

The hairy woodpecker, says American Forestry, likes fat pork, while a tree sparrow just dotes on dog biscuit. Bread and milk is the favorite dish of the mocking bird.

A GREAT SOCIAL PROBLEM.

To Get Men Rightly to Adjust Themselves to All Other Men.

Our great social problem is how to make the man at the bottom loom so large and seem so important that all other men will cease to think of him as a thing and treat him as a person. The real social problem out of which other minor problems grow and of which they are really only aggravated symptoms is the world old problem of the right relation between persons.

This is a fundamental issue and to solve it would solve all these minor manifestations. The friendly relation of men is therefore not alone the gist of the race problem, but it is the gist of all social problems.

The age long struggle has been how to get men rightly to adjust themselves to all other men.

Right adjustment to other men would mean in the economic realm that no capitalist would want to beat down below a living wage the laborer who made production possible. It would mean that no laborer would want more wages and shorter hours than the condition of production would stand.

Right adjustment between men would mean that no landlord would be willing to live easy off rents of houses which made health and happiness impossible to the occupant. It would mean in return that no tenant would demand more than that for which he gave a just return, and he would protect the interest of his landlord as he would protect his own interest.

Right adjustment would mean in all walks of life the rule of right, not the rule of might.—Southern Workman.

BIRDLAND DANCE HALLS.

Playhouses and Gardens of the Australian Bower Birds.

There are several species of bower birds, chief among them the Satin and the Newton. The Satin bower bird is the best known. When the bowers were first discovered it was supposed that they were playhouses built by the native children, but as a matter of fact they are the dance halls of birdland.

The nests are built in the trees and have no connection with the playhouses. The male birds build these latter and gather every bright and shining object they can find to adorn the entrance to the bower. When it is completed, according to one who has watched them, little "at homes" are given daily, at which the males meet and pay their court to their ladyloves, now bowing and scraping, now playing hide and seek through the bower and now doing an absurdly dignified dance for their edification.

Newton's bower bird decorates its bower with fresh flowers every day, and if a visiting male bird wants to fight all he has to do is to disturb one of these flowers. The master of the bower proceeds with the painful duty of teaching him how to behave in company, while the remainder of the party raise a great racket, but never interfere. A naturalist studying them disarranged one of their flowers, but each time he did it the bower master rearranged it with great care.—National Geographic Magazine.

Impeachment Cases.

Although one president of the United States (Johnson), one cabinet officer (Belknap), six United States judges and eight governors of states have been impeached since the foundation of the republic, only one senator, William Blount of Tennessee, has been arraigned before the bar of the house of congress to which he was elected. Of the eight governors impeached one was acquitted, in three cases the charges were dropped, one was permitted to resign, and three were removed. Three of the impeached judges were removed, and three were acquitted. Both President Johnson and Secretary Belknap were acquitted. Politically the last named impeachment cases were the most important the United States has experienced.—Argonaut.

Leftover Sandwiches.

Sometimes after a party there are sandwiches left over. Here is an excellent way of using them up: Make a batter exactly like you use for pancakes and add to it either sugar or salt, according to whether the sandwiches are sweet or savory. Then each sandwich is dipped in the batter and fried till a golden brown in fat from which a faint bluish smoke is rising. No matter how dry they are they are delicious done in this way.

Mrs. Peck—Yes, Tommy; sometimes—when I feel tired.

"'Cause my father told mother that if he were your husband he'd make you sit up!"—Exchange.

Guard Your Habits.

We are creatures of habit. We succeed or fail as we acquire good habits or bad ones, and we acquire good habits as easily as bad ones. That is a fact. Most people don't believe this. Only those who find it out succeed in life.—Herbert Spencer.

THE EMERGENCY SHELF.

Simple Remedies That Should Be at Hand In Every Home.

Gasoline is a good disinfectant for the treatment of wounds in emergency cases. It is especially good if the wound is lacerated or if the skin was dirty when the wound was made. After washing the wound with gasoline paint with a tincture of iodine, using a small wad of absorbent cotton for the iodine "paint brush."

Every family should have a supply of emergency remedies at hand, and a physician suggests this list for the home medicine shelf:

Two ounce bottle of aromatic spirits of ammonia, a good stimulant in case of fainting—use as an inhalation or put one-half teaspoonful in one-quarter glass of water and give internally; eight ounces of gasoline, use freely to cleanse wounds; two ounces of tincture of iodine to paint wounds and kill germs; one yard sterile gauze; one yard zinc oxide adhesive plaster, two inches wide; one yard zinc oxide adhesive plaster, one inch wide; one-fourth pound sterile absorbent cotton; one-half dozen gauze bandages, assorted sizes; eight ounce bottle saturated boric acid solution to use as an antiseptic wet dressing for wounds and as an eye wash; eight ounce bottle peroxide of hydrogen, good for slight cuts and abrasions, but not to be relied on for serious wounds; one hot water bag; one fountain syringe; one ice bag.—Kansas City Star.

TO PREVENT ILLNESS.

That Is One of the Objects of Compulsory Health Insurance.

Compulsory health insurance is now being talked of as another step in community welfare, the course being especially recommended in welfare work among wage earners.

Investigation has shown that a large proportion of sickness is preventable, but most persons, small wage earners or not, are likely to neglect their ailments until prevention is no longer possible and serious illness must be treated. Even then the doctor's services are avoided as much as possible because of the cost, and the victim of disease goes back to his work before he is fit.

Under the compulsory insurance system it is the idea that every worker shall be visited at stated intervals by a physician whether he is ill or not; the slightest illness brings a call from the doctor, whose business is to keep him well if possible. In many cases he will succeed, with the result of a great saving of time and wages to the worker.

The total of such savings in the industrial centers will run into the millions and will proportionately lessen the demands on charitable funds.—Indianapolis Star.

The Wild Pigeon Mystery.

That the wild pigeon, once so common in the United States, has become extinct is one of the strangest mysteries in American natural history. It is a puzzle which has baffled scientists and which probably never will be solved. Half a century ago wild pigeons were abundant in Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, Kentucky and all the states of the middle west. In their migrations they traveled in flocks numbering tens of thousands, and it sometimes took a single flock the better part of an hour to pass a given point. Vast numbers of the pigeons were killed every year by gunners, but many investigators hold that the complete disappearance of the species must have been due in part at least to other causes. No other bird was ever so numerous in this country as the pigeon.

New York's Subways.

More than 2,000 trains start each day from the terminals of New York's subway systems. They are run on schedules as carefully prepared and as closely timed as those of a trunk line railroad.

Between 1,000,000 and 1,500,000 persons ride each day on the subway. This is more than twice the number carried daily by all the trains on the entire Pennsylvania railroad system.

Nearly two-thirds of the New York users of the subway are carried during the morning and evening rush hours.—Rapid Transit.

Not His Language.

Lord Robson, at one of the dinners of the Glamorgan society, told the story of a Welsh witness in a Glamorganshire case who, having been sworn to speak the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth, was asked if he could speak English or would like an interpreter. "No," he replied; "I can speak some English, but I cannot speak the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth."—St. James' Gazette.

Sensible Girl.

"When Arthur proposed to me he was so excited he couldn't speak."

"But how did you know he wanted to marry you if he couldn't speak?"

"Well, he was down on his knees, and I knew he wasn't looking for a lost collar button."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Forebodings.

"I fear my doctor's bill is going to be heavy."

"Oh, you are not very sick."

"That's not the point. He ran into some obstruction on his way to my house and badly damaged his machine."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Modest Pa.

"Pa, was mother much of a flirt when she was young?"

"I guess not, my dear. Anyhow, I'm the best she could land."—Detroit Free Press.

Not Used to the Railway.

Of course every one rides on the trains in Japan nowadays, for there are 7,000 miles of railways in the country, and every considerable town is at least connected with the railway by electric car or automobile. Not so very long ago, however, the train was a curiosity.

A party of ladies who were taking their first ride on the train once had trouble with their shoes. A Japanese on entering a house always leaves his shoes at the door, so when these ladies got aboard they politely left their clogs on the station platform. Great was their consternation later to find that their shoes had been left miles behind.

Maxwell

A better car—
for less money!

The Maxwell competes with cars that sell for several hundred dollars more.

By that statement we mean that it offers equal advantages—appearance and comfort. People think of it in comparison to the complete and good lookng cars when they are planning to buy.

But in price it compares with the very cheapest makeshifts on the market. Deduct the necessary equipment found on the Maxwell as regular parts of the car and it is the lowest good car on the market today.

When you bear these facts in mind you can easily see why it is the world's greatest motor car value.

You can't buy greater motoring satisfaction—this meaning convenience, service and comfort Why pay more?

Repudiated National Debts.

Spain, at one time by far the most powerful of European nations, was the earliest power to contract a national debt, which in 1556 only amounted to the modest sum of £1,000,000. By 1610 it had grown to £40,000,000 under Philip III., after whose death the whole of it was repudiated.

France in 1643 began to incur her debt, chiefly through the wars of Louis XIV. and the lavish expenditure in building Versailles. In the later years of Louis XVI. this amounted to £468,000,000, only to be repudiated on the establishment of the republic, when some creditors received 33 per cent and others nothing.

An Odd Court Incident.

Sensational incidents are not uncommon in the closing stages of famous criminal trials. One of the most remarkable occurred in Melbourne on the last day of the trial of Ned Kelly, known as the "ironclad bushranger of Australia." A knife dropped from a gallery overhead and fell at the feet of the desperado in the dock. He had every temptation to grasp it and put an end to his existence, for there was not the slightest chance of his escaping the gallows. But it was promptly picked up by a bailiff, and its owner was arrested and brought before the judge. He pleaded that the occurrence was purely accidental, and the explanation was accepted by the court.

"Then shout, boys, shout, cheer, boys, cheer!
Support the colors on your flag,
You noble volunteer!
Hoist up hte flag, Oh, long may it wave
Over Columbia, the home of the brave!"

ARMENIAN RELIEF

To Be Systematically Conducted by the Local Presbyterian Church

The two countries of the world in most pitiable condition so far as food supplies are concerned are Armenia and Belgium. Our government has recommended both these countries to the charities of America. There are at present more than 300,000 Armenians, mostly women and children, who are dependent wholly upon American charity. These splendid people are the oldest Protestant people in the world. Their faith dates back to the second century after Christ. So it is particularly fitting that a church like the Presbyterian should espouse their cause. The Junior Church, the Session, some Sunday-school classes and a number of individuals are going to contribute regularly to this relief work. If this work appeals to you, you are cordially invited to join in the work.

Neither money or food is sent to the Armenians direct, but all the funds are sent by cable, so there is no chance of loss. And the expense of sending same is met by Armenian societies in this country The food can be bought in nearby Turkish provinces, but there is no charity in the hearts of the Mohammedian Turks for the Armenian Christians. Of every dollar given every cent goes for food. The local church last year gave $107 for that work, and it is hoped this amount may be doubled this year.

RED AND BLUE CONTEST ENDS

Reds Victorious

The Red and Blue Contest, which has been going on in the Men's Class of the Presbyterian church, came to an end last Sunday. More than 125 men were present. The Blues, under the leadership of James Lowry, were unable to overcome the lead attained by the Reds, under John H. Smith as captain. The Reds had more than 500 points to the good. The date of the banquet has not been set.

Hon. Chas. Evans of Tipton will address the class next Sunday at 10 o'clock. The men of town are cordially invited to be present.

Queer Nest of the Tontobane.

The oddest of all birds' nests is the one built by the tontobane, a South African songster. It is built of cotton and always upon the tree producing the material. In constructing the domicile the female works inside and the male outside, where he builds a sentinel box for his own special use. He sits in the box and keeps watch or sings nearly all the time, and when danger comes in the form of a hawk or a snake he warns the family, but never enters the main nest.

Thackeray in America.

Thackeray's lecture on Swift, some of the manuscript of which has been sold by his daughter for military charities, proved one of his greatest successes in America. James T. Fields, his host at Boston, has told how all the tickets for the Swift lecture were sold the day before it was delivered.

"I remember Thackeray's uproarious shouting and dancing when told this," he adds. "When we rode together to the lecture hall he insisted on thrusting his long legs out of the carriage window, in deference, as he said, to his magnanimous ticket holders. These included Longfellow, Oliver Wendell Holmes, Emerson and other leading literary lights."—London Chronicle.

A GENERAL SURVEY OF THE WAR.

Wednesday, April 25.—Captain Rice of the American steamship Mongolia, which has arrived at a British port, reported that the Mongolia had fired the first gun of the war for the United States and sunk a German submarine.

The British troops along the Arras battle line made further slight advances south of the Scarpe river. There was a continuation of aerial activity in which fifteen German airplanes came to grief and six British aircraft failed to return to their base.

Dunkirk was bombarded by German destroyers. British and French patrol ships engaged the Germans, one of the French torpedo boats being sunk.

Thursday, April 26.—Renewed German attacks on British positions near Gavrelle have been completely repulsed. [illegible] 300 German airplanes have been shot down on the west front.

The American schooner Percy Birdsall of New York was reported sunk without warning to the state department.

Saturday, April 28.—The British captured Arleux-en-Gohelle and German positions, including part of Oppy, on a front of more than two miles. The French made progress on Chemin-des-Dames and report the capture of 20,000 Germans since April 19. Berlin says British attacks at Monchy broke down, and reports infantry battle on the whole front.

Both house of congress voted for selective draft bill by huge majorities. Measure wanted by President and general army staff passes.

Sunday, April 29.—Another trench system—a barrier to the British forward march toward Douai—has been taken over a front of a mile in sanguinary fighting. The new position lies south of Oppy, and runs almost to the outskirts of Gavrelle.

Berlin admits the loss to the Canadians of Arleux-en-Gohelle, and to other parts of Field Marshal Haig's army of Oppy and positions near Gavrelle and Roeux, which are characterized as "advanced positions." The German war office adds, however, that except for Arleux all positions were regained.

Allies to Visit West.

CHICAGO, ILL.—The state department at Washington announced officially that Marshal Joffre and his colleagues in the French and English commissions will visit Chicago, though the exact date was not set.

The commissioners also will journey to Springfield to pay homage at the tomb of Lincoln, the champion of democracy, just as they did Sunday at Mount Vernon, where wreaths and speeches expressed the appreciation of free people for the deeds of George Washington.

Constriction Bill Is Passed.

WASHINGTON — Conscription! This was decreed by congress as the military means to employ to bring the imperial German government to terms and to end the war. On final passage the measure went through by the following votes: House—For, 397; against, 24. Senate—For, 81; against 8.

U. S. Ship Sunk, 9 Gunners Die.

LONDON, ENG.—The American oil tank steamer Vacuum has been sunk. The captain and part of the crew and a naval lieutenant and nine American naval gunners are missing.

Cass City Forms $1-a-Month Club.

CASS CITY, April 23.

Outside of the larger cities, Cass City is among the first in Michigan to organize a Dollar-a-Month club to aid Belgium children. The work is under the supervision of the Woman's Study club.

Expecting Too Much.

It was a cold, raw day, but the Neversweats and the Fearnaughts were playing a game of ball on the prairie just the same.

The pitcher for the Neversweats, his fingers half frozen, failed dismally in getting the balls over the plate.

"Aw," said the captain, "I t'ought ye wuz one o' dese cold weather pitchers!"

"I am," said the slab artist, blowing on his benumbed digits to warm them, "but I aint a ice pitcher, blame ye!"—Chicago Tribune.

That the selection of James E. Hutchingson as military instructor of Detroit's public schools by Dr. Charles E. Chadsey is in line with the latter's alleged opposition to military training in the public schools, and that the outcome will be the collapse of martial affairs in the city's educational institutions, is the belief of officers in the Thirty-first Michigan Infantry.

BUSINESS MEN WANTED FOR OFFICERS RESERVE

Great Need of Competent Executives Who Hold Responsible Positions Now, Says Major Malone

Chicago, Ill., May 4, 1917.

"We have the application this morning," said Major Malone at the war department, "of a man who is the principal owner and head of a million dollar business which he has worked up from nothing. He is past forty, his military experience is extremely limited and he barely meets the physical requirements, but we are going to accept him because we need not one, but many scores of just such men in the line.

"We can get all kinds of business executives who are willing to act on committees, but we are not getting a sufficient number of mature men between the ages of 36 and 44 to go out to the forts and to train for taking positions right with the men on the march and at the war front.

"Of course, I appreciate that the best men without proper military experience cannot make ideal officers. But we have not men enough for the proper military experience, so we are glad to get mature men who are willing to learn.

"College education is valuable, but is not near as important now as experience in executive positions, whether at the head of an important department in any business.

"Such men are needed and are needed especially right now for the first volunteer officers."

Applications are being received by mail and in person at room 502, Military Training Camps Association at the War Department.

Applicants may enter any day from May 8th to May 14th.

The recruiting for officers' reserve corps here in Tecumseh is in charge of Gen'l F. B. Wood and R. K. Anderson. They will explain all details.

Is there a good, high class, experienced and successful executive in this town who is willing to leave his business and go to the training camp May 8th?

Latest reports from the Red Cross canvass which started in this village and township Monday shows a total membership for our local branch of about 650. When the campaign started Monday morning the records showed 202 members and this would make a net gain to date of about 450 memberships as a result of the canvass.

This report is very flattering as many had put the possible number of members to be secured from this township at about 500 and Dr. Perry, the head of the Red Cross for Lenawee county, had placed the number at 600. Many subscriptions are still coming into headquarters and many promises are on file, so that when the total is finally in, it is hoped that the number will exceed 700

This report is a splendid expression of the loyalty of the people of this community and shows how anxious they are to be of service to their country in this great war crisis.

It is a matter of regret that the local headquarters could not give to each member a Red Cross button, but the number of members far exceeded the supply of buttons Enough are expected to supply every member.

Many members have been inquiring when they could go to work on supplies for the Red Cross and express themselves ready and anxious to commence the work of making comfort bags, sanitary sponges, knit work etc.

The work of the Red Cross will be almost unlimited when once it gets in motion and the organization is perfected, but no work should be commenced until the proper orders are received from the heads of the department. These instructions, as we understand them, will give in detail just what they want, of what material the supplies are to be made and how they are to be made. The local branch will be advised and will, without doubt, give publicity to the order as soon as it is received. If work should be started before orders were received, it would likely lead to confusion and a waste of time and money.

The work of organizing the Red Cross society in this country is an enormous task. When one stops to consider that only a few months ago the total membership was only 25,000 and that it now is numbered by the hundreds of thousands, one gets a fair conception of the big task of getting a system worked out by which it can be properly handled Our membership in the township alone is about 1 40th of the total membership which was recorded for the whole country a few months ago.

The people are urged not to get excited but to be patient and wait for orders from headquarters They will soon come and Lenawee County will have plenty of opportunity to do its share of work.

PUT FLAG ON FIRING LINE, ROOSEVELT

San Juan Hill Hero Appeals to Nation.

PLAN TOLD AT CHICAGO

Make the President's Message Good, He Urges

AVOID ANY POLICY OF DELAY

Thousands Struggle to get a Glimpse of the Man Who Is Willing to Lead a Force of Fighters into Foreign Lands—For Dry United States During the War.

CHICAGO, ILL. -- In two notable speeches Colonel Roosevelt called for the United States to "put the flag on the firing line at the earliest moment and keep it there until the war is over."

T. R. brought to the state that produced Lincoln, Grant, Logan, Sheridan and Sherman his plea that he be allowed to raise an expeditionary force for overseas service—and Chicago received him at two large gatherings as a military leader, and put an O. K. on his request.

Colonel Roosevelt's fighting message to the West is: Send a fighting force to the fighting line.

In two great speeches in Chicago last Saturday he called for the United States to put the flag on the firing line at the earliest moment and keep it there until the war is over.

Colonel's Appeal to West.

Here is the colonel's appeal to the people of the West, made in his stockyards speech, delivered Saturday evening:

I come here tonight to appeal to the people of the great West, the people of the Mississippi Valley, the people who are the spiritual heirs of the men who stood behind Lincoln and Grant. You men and women, who live beside the Great Lakes and on the lands drained by the Ohio, the Mississippi and the Missouri, have always represented what is most intensely American in our national life. When once waked up to actual conditions, you have always stood with unfaltering courage and iron endurance for the national honor and the national interest. I appeal to the sons and daughters of the men and women of the Civil War, to grand sons and daughters of the pioneers; I appeal to the women as much as to the men, for our nation has risen level to every great crisis only because in every such crisis the courage of its women flamed as high as the courage of the men.

I appeal to you to take the lead in making good the President's message of the second of this month, in which he set forth the reasons why it was our unescapable duty to make war upon Germany. It rests with us—with the American people—to make that message one of the great state documents of our history. Let us accept the lessons it teaches. Let us grasp what it says as to the frighful wrongs Germany has committed upon us and upon the weaker nations of mankind, and the damage she has wrought to the whole fabric of civilization and of international good faith and morality. Then let us steel our hearts and gird our loins to show that we are fit to stand among the free people whose freedom is buttressed by their self-reliant strength. Let us show by our deeds that we are fit to be the heirs of the men who founded the Republic and of the men who saved the Republic; of the Continentals who followed Washington, and of the men who bore the blue under Grant and the gray under Lee.

But, mind you, the message, the speech will amount to nothing unless we make it good and it can be made good only by the high valor of our fighting men, and by the resourceful and laborious energy of the men and women who with deeds, not merely words, back up the fighting men. We read the Declaration of Independence every Fourth of July because, and only because, the soldiers of Washington made the message good by their blood during the weary years of war that followed. If, after writing the Declaration of Independence, the men of Seventy-Six had failed with their bodies to make it good, it would be read now only with contempt and derision. Our children still learn how Patrick Henry spoke for the heart of the American people when he said "Give me liberty or give me death;" but this generation is thrilled by his words only because the Americans of those days showed in very fact that they were ready to accept death rather than lose their liberty. In Lincoln's deathless Gettysburg speech and second inaugural he solemnly pledged the honor of the American people to the hard and perilous task of preserving the Union and freeing the slaves. The pledge was kept. The American people fought to a finish the war which saved the Union and freed the slave. If Lincoln and the men and women behind him had wavered, if they had grown faint-hearted and had shrunk from the fight or, had merely paid others to fight for them, they would have earned for themselves and for us the scorn of the nations of mankind. The words of Lincoln will live forever only because they were made good by the deeds of the fighting men.

Making the Message Good.

So it is now. We can make the President's message of April 2d stand among the great state papers in our history; but we can do so only if we make the message good; and we can make it good only if we fight with all our strength now, at once; if at the earliest possible moment, we put the flag on the firing line, and keep it there, over a constantly growing army until the war closes by a peace which brings victory to the great cause of democracy and civilization, the great cause of justice and fair play among the peoples of the world.

We Americans are at war. Now let us fight. Let us make it a real war, not a dollar war. Let us show that we have the manhood to pay with our own bodies, and not merely to hire other men to pay with their bodies. Let us fight at once. Let us put the flag at the front now, at the earliest moment and not merely announce that we are going to fight a year or two hence.

I most earnestly and heartily stand by the proposal of the President to raise an army on the principle of universal obligatory military training and military service, demanded as a right, not as a favor, from all the young men of the country capable of bearing arms. This is the principle I have long advocated with all fervor of conviction. It is the only really democratic principle on which permanently to shape the military policy of this country. To have it adopted as the permanent principle of our national military policy will be of incalculable service to our national peace and welfare. Moreover, if the war lasts, as well it may, for one or two or three years, the army, to see it through, must be raised in this fashion. It is vitally essential, both from the standpoint of fighting this war through to a successful conclusion, if it should last a long time, and from the standpoint of our permanent national safety and democratic welfare, that we should immediately inaugurate this principle and set about raising a great army in accordance therewith.

Such an army will naturally need a long time to train, and at the earliest moment we should begin to devote our strength and energy to calling it into being and training it. This should be the task which we treat as of prime importance. But, most emphatically, we should not rest content with this. We should not rest content with merely preparing an army to act a year or eighteen months or two years hence. Let us put the flag on the firing line at the earliest possible moment, this Summer, wherever our services are most needed—in France or Flanders or the Balkan Peninsula. It need only be a small army at first. But even a division would be better than nothing. Then we can constantly keep that division filled, and other divisions from time to time added to it; until, a year hence, if the war continues, we have a really formidable fighting force at the front, a fighting force which will steadily increased month by month, year by year, until the triumph comes.

To do this, it is necessary that we should appeal for volunteers, not in any way as a substitute for, but as a supplement to, the Administration's plan for raising an army in accordance with the principle of obligatory universal service. If the system of universal obligatory training and service had already been in existence here for a number of years, and if in other ways we had been prepared in advance, we could by this time have had an expeditionary force of a million men under way for the front, ready to strike the finishing blow. But the system does not yet exist, and, necessarily, all kinds of preliminaries will have to be gone through before it can now be called into being and an effective army of large size raised under it. Therefore to wait for it before really entering into the war means an indefinite delay, a delay that might bring us to the end, not merely of the campaign this year, but of the campaign next year before we can strike hard and effectively. I wish to see the system of obligatory service used in order to make all men serve who ought to serve. It would be a capital mistake to use it in such fashion as merely to prevent men rendering service when they wish to render it and can render it, and ought to render it. Do not let anyone volunteer to stay at home. But do not hinder men, who, under conscription, would be entitled to stay at home, from volunteering to go to the front if they can render good service. Under the bill proposed to Congress by the War Department, many millions of excellent fighting men would be exempt from service, while a long time would elapse before the others are sent to the front. Under these conditions, we ought to use the volunteer system to fill the gap; it opens to us at once a great possibility; let it be used, and used exclusively to those who would otherwise be exempt an opportunity to go to the front without claiming exemption. Let me illustrate my meaning by a homely comparison. Every village ought to have a fire company. But if it commits the error of waiting until a fire starts before organizing the fire company, it will merely aggravate the situation by committing the further error of refusing to put out the fire until after the fire company is organized. The only wise thing to do is to put out the fire with the means that are handy, and then immediately organize the permanent fire company.

No Policy of Delay.

I most earnestly hope that we shall avoid any policy of delay. If we are true to our own souls, we shall show that, like our forefathers, we are willing to pay for our principles with our bodies and not merely with our dollars. Congress has passed, without a dissenting vote, a bill to appropriate seven billions of dollars as representing part of our contribution to the great war. This is fine; but only on condition that we also put our men into the fighting line. Half of this great sum is to go to the Allies; that is, it is to be spent by them in getting their men up against the German and Austrian and Turkish shells and bullets. Now, we Americans have always prided our selves on being able to do our own fighting. It is right to help others to fight in the common cause for which we are engaged. But it is even more necessary that we should fight ourselves.

I ask that we send a fighting force over to the fighting line at the earliest possible moment, and I ask it in the name of our children and our children's children, so that they may hold their heads high over the memory of what this nation did in world's great crisis. I ask it for reasons of national morality no less than for our material self-interest. I ask it for the sake of our self-respect, our self-esteem. Our children will have to read the history of what we have done during this war. Let us make the chapter that yet remains to be written one that our children shall read with pride; and they will read it only with a feeling of self-abasement unless they read that in the times that tried men's souls we have shown valor and endurance and proud indifference to life when the honor of the flag and the welfare of mankind were at stake.

Ban Rum, Says T. R.

In a speech delivered in the afternoon at a luncheon given by the Chicago branch of the National Security league, he urged that use of grain for the manufacture of alcoholic drinks be prohibited for the period of the war.

The colonel said on the subject: "The world is having a shortage of food. Soon we in this country shall face a shortage of food. Therefore, let us use all the grain we have for food and not for intoxicants. Now that the war is on let us forbid any grain or corn being used in the manufacture of intoxicating liquors."

He urged obligatory military training, the expansion and improvement of the navy, and asserted that an expeditionary force should be sent to France at once. Present conscription plans, he said, would deny service to many men who wished to volunteer. He remarked that when England adopted conscription, she did not decline the services of volunteers from Canada and Australia.

Resolutions Invite Envoys to Chicago.

"RESOLVED, That this great meeting of the citizens of Chicago, called together by the National Security league, with all the enthusiasm of a common purpose, indorse the invitation extended by Frank O. Lowden, governor of Illinois, and the city government to Minister of Justice Viviani and Marshal Joffre of the French commission and Arthur J. Balfour of the British commission and their distinguished associates to visit Chicago and personally meet its people; that whatever else may occupy their time and attention while here we earnestly request their presence and their valued counsel from such of their number as will speak directly to our people at a meeting to be held in Chicago at their convenience; be it further

"RESOLVED, That in anticipation of their favorable answer and entire co-operation in the same spirit that the invitation is expressed the president of the National Security league shall appoint such committees and such authority as may best carry into effect the purpose and the intent of this resolution."

A gallon of oil will burn twice as long in this stove as it does in other stoves, giving out an even, hot blue blaze at all times. They are built strong, at the proper height, are sanitary and free from obnoxious odors, simple to operate, easy to clean on account of a self-cleaning device.

A demonstration in your own home convinces that they are absolutely dependable at all times and in all ways very satisfactory. Our sales are large. We have different styles and sizes in stock. They are sold at extremely low prices on account of an early purchase of large quantities.

While our people should be loyal and in every way aid in raising the new army, still they should not let the opportunity pass by for the expression of their appreciation and love for the boys of '61-'65 who served their country in its time of need and gave their lives for their country's good. G. B. GARLINGHOUSE INJURED

G. B. Garlinghouse had a narrow escape from death this afternoon about 4:15 when a part of the old shed in the rear of the old livery barn suddenly collapsed and buried him beneath a pile of rubbish. He was at work removing some old timbers when they gave away above him. He was removed to the office and Dr. Beardsley called. As we go to press we learn that he is conscious and they think he has sustained no serious injuries.

GUY E. BELDING ADDS MOTOR HEARSE AND MOTOR TRUCK TO HIS EQUIPMENT

Guy E. Belding has been making some valuable additions to his business outfit, which shows he is progressive in his ideas and that the best is none too good for his use. The new auto hearse is certainly quite an acquisition in these days when the automobile has taken the place of the horse and carriage for funeral procession.

The hearse purchased by Mr Belding was made by the Sayers & Covell Co of Cincinnati, O It is equipped with a 6 cylinder, 50 horse power Continental motor, geared to run slow or fast as needed. The body is a beauty. The exterior is done in hand carved panels. All wood used is of solid material with no veneer and it is painted in two shades of dull gray. The interior is finished in solid mahogany. Under the floor of the space used for the casket is a long drawer equipped with roller bearings, extending the full length of the car. This can be used for rugs and various supplies In the top part of the car is a removable rack where flowers may be carried. The driver's seat is upholstered in a rich gray leather Electric lights light up every nook and corner of the car.

Mr. Belding, realizing the advantages gained in time and up-to-date service, has also added to his rolling stock a ¾ ton Reo truck. This truck is intended for general utility work and can be used for both the furniture and undertaking business. It has a long body which gives him plenty of room for all kinds of furniture or supplies needed in conducting a funeral. In fact this truck can be used for a hundred different purposes and will greatly increase this firm's facilities for service. The truck has curtains which may be rolled up or lowered at will or the top may be removed entirely.

In purchasing this equipment Mr. Belding has studied to get not only the best but something that would increase the efficiency of his service and we congratulate him on giving the people of Tecumseh the advantages which ordinarily are only expected from larger places.

MRS. NORMAN C. McCONNELL

Mrs. Jennie McConnell, who was run over by a land roller last week Tuesday, passed away at her home in Raisin township Thursday at 6:30 Her injuries were much worse than at first realized. One leg sustained a compound fracture and she was badly bruised all over her body. Lockjaw developed Monday.

Mrs. McConnell was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John McClelland and was born near Holloway. She was 34 years of age. She leaves her husband and son Harley, her mother Mrs Anna McClelland of Tecumseh, and two sisters, Margretta McClelland, of Oberlin, and Mrs. Homer Wilcox of Allegan, and a brother Will McClelland of Holoway.

The funeral will be held at the home Saturday at 1:30 p. m. with burial in Brookside cemetery.

BEEF THE "SCRUBS" AND "BROODERS"

With this slogan Hatch Herd will present to the public a choice array of pure bred Holstein-Friesian cattle in a sale on May 9 as will be seen by the advertisement elsewhere in this issue.

William B. Hatch, Proprietor, reports that the prospect for a large attendance is good and that F. G. Jhnston of Columbus, Ohio, the pedigree expert, will act as sales manager.

He says further that a farmer now in search of foundation stock Holstein-Friesians looked at the offerings last week and said: "I would like to buy every female you are offering at private sale." But no one has been permitted to buy an animal at private sale since our last annual auction. Every buyer will have a chance to every animal offered this year on the sale-ring next Saturday.

IMPROVEMENTS AT HAY'S ICE CREAM PARLORS

Kenneth Hay has been making some improvements to his soda water fountain and has purchased of the Liquid Carbonic Co. of Chicago, a new interior for his fountain. The important is equipped with the latest in cooling devices which keep the whole system cold. It has ten different departments for flavors three receptacles for ice cream, with a capacity for fifteen gallons and four jars for fruit juices. The piping all passes through the cold air chamber which keeps it ice cold at all times.

He has also purchased a carbonator, to be used for keeping the soda water charged. The business of the carbonator is to mix the gas with the water and to keep the charge up to the proper amount. It works automatically, when the charge gets low, the motor starts the machine in motion and works the charge up to the proper place again. By the use of these new improvements Mr. Hay hopes to give the public far better service this coming season.

Charles Caswell

Our community was shocked when Charles Caswell was killed by the train at the depot at 11:30 Sunday a. m. He was aged 51 years, 4 months, 29 days. He leaves an aged mother, the wife, two sons, three daughters, two brothers and two sisters

He was a kind husband and loving father and will be greatly missed by all who knew him. He was a member of the Gleaners of Cone.

The funeral was held at his late home Wednesday at 11 o'clock, conducted by Rev. G. W. Spooner of the Milan Baptist church and a large number attended.

Sad and sudden was the call of him so dearly loved by all. His memory is ever dear. The flowers we lay upon his grave may wither and decay, but fresh with love within our hearts his memory will stay, when memory is the only friend that grief can call its own. An angel came and gently whispered, "The door is open for thee Heavenly rest for God knows whate'er is best."

Wisner, and Rena Allen, now Mrs. Frank Fisher, were painting peach blossoms and japonicas with sprays of the same, all beautifully blooming, before them for their models. One of the pictures hangs on Mrs. Wisner's wall with the date plainly marked upon it. There is a well verified tradition of an earlier spring than that. April 11, 1847, the peach trees were said to be all in blossom

Tecumseh Testimony Remains Unshaken.

Time is the best test of truth. Here is a Tecumseh story that has stood the test of time. It is a story with a point which will come straight home to many of us.

Mrs. C. Stevenson, Wyandotte & Pottawatamie Sts., Tecumseh, says: "The first notice I had that my kidneys were disordered was a sharp, shooting pain across my back. At that time I was sick in bed with malaria. The nurse I had attending me said I ought to try Doan's Kidney Pills; I got a box and began their use. The pains left, the kidney secretions became natural and the gravel stones that I had been passing for years, disappeared." (Statement given December 10, 1906.)

STILL USES DOAN'S

On July 27, 1916 Mrs. Stevenson said: "I still use and recommend Doan's Kidney Pills, I could not get along without them when my back or kidneys trouble me, for they never fail to give me relief."

Price 50c at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Stevenson has twice publicly recommended. Foster-Milburn Co.,

Use "Gets-It," Lift Corn Right Off

Shrivels, Loosens—and It's Gone!

"Just like taking the lid off—that's how easy you can lift a corn off your toe after it has been treated with the wonderful discovery, 'Gets-It.'" Hunt the wide world over and you'll find nothing so magic, simple and easy as "Gets-It." You folks who have wrapped your toes in bandages to look like bundles, who have used salves that turned your toes raw and sore, and used plasters that would shift from their place and never "get" the corn, and who have dug and picked at your corns with knives and scissors and perhaps made them bleed—just quit these old and painful ways and try "Gets-It" just once. You put 2 or 3 drops on, and it dries at once. There's nothing to stick. You can put your shoe and stocking right on again. The pain is all gone. Then the corn dies a painless, shriveling death, it loosens from your toe, and off it comes. "Gets-It" is the biggest selling corn remedy in the world today. There's none other as good.

"0-0-!"
End Corn and Stop Pain Quickly With "Gets-It"

Sold in Tecumseh and recommended as the world's best corn remedy by R. I. Putney. ad

FIXED FOOD PRICES TO BOOST ACREAGE

Many More Potatoes Will Be Planted, Is Belief.

LANSING, May 7.

The announcement from Washington that congress has been asked to fix a minimum price on foodstuffs will, it is thought, increase acreage in Michigan, especially of potatoes.

Members of the food preparedness board have been trying to combat the idea that overproduction was coming and that prices in the fall would clump.

"I am sure that the announcement from Washington will help to increase our acreage," said W. K. Prudden of the farm preparedness committee. "It should drive into the planting of more acreage a lot of farmers who have held back because they were afraid they might lose.

A surprising thing happened in line with the labor shortage.. A Chicago newspaper, which has an employment bureau for the back-to-the-farm movement, forwarded to Governor Sleeper almost fifty applicants of Chicagoans who wanted to work on Michigan farms. In the applications, those looking for work are asked if they have any preference as to locality.

BANKERS GIVE SEEDS FREE

Sault Ste. Marie Financiers Aid Farmers in Poosting Crops.

SAULT STE. MARIE, May 7.

To increase the production of foodstuffs and not compel the farmer to bear the entire burden, the banks of Sault Ste. Marie, have purchased nearly $15,000 worth of small grain seed, turned it over to the farmers without profit and accepted noninterest bearing notes, which are due after the harvest next fall.

Farmers and business men co-operate in the move by signing bonds for others in order that every farmer might have sufficient seed.

AMERICA IS ABLE TO FEED ENTIRE WORLD

American Chamber Commerce Makes Report.

Washington, May 7.—America is abundantly able to carry the vast burden of feeding the world.

The Chamber of Commerce of the United States sent this word to the food conservationists of the department of agriculture and interior and the advisory food committee of the council of national defense after a survey of food conditions of the world.

The chamber's report showed although there might be an uncomfortable shortage of wheat in a few months because of bad weather, the vast increase in other grains, such as corn, oats and barley, would more than make up the deficiency.

At the same time it was stated a great deal of the burden could be taken from the shoulders of America by Australia, which will have a record wheat yield this year. A total of 114,000,000 bushels of wheat can be spared in Australia, it was reported.

In the United States the chamber announced that with favorable weather the winter wheat yield may somewhat exceed last year's.

REICHSTAG ASKS GRIP ON ARMIES

Change to Lessen Powers of Kaiser Favored.

AMENDMENTS ARE ACCEPTED

Conservatives Opposced Proposals, Declaring Officers as Appointed Had Rendered Service Without Flaw. Hungarian Franchise Troubles More Serious Than Have Been Reported. Budapest Factories Closed.

London, May 7.—Further amendments have been accepted by the constitution committee of the reichstag now in session in Berlin, according to a Berlin dispatch that has reached here.

The committee on Saturday, says the message, adopted a joint proposal by the center, national-liberal and progressive people's parties to alter articles 53 and 66 of the imperial constitution as follows:

"Article 53—The navy is under supreme command of the emperor. The organization of its structure appertains to the emperor. The emperor appoints the officers and men and officials of the navy under the counter signature of the imperial chancellor or the secretary of state for the admiralty as his representative. The officers and officials and men of the navy swear allegiance to the emperor."

Army Appointments.

"Article 66—The appointment of officers and military officials of a state contingent is made under the countersignature of the war minister of such contingent. These war ministers, with the exception of the Bavarian, are responsible to the reichstag for the administration of their contingents."

The proposals, says the telegram, were adopted against the votes of the conservatives, who asked why, at this moment, when German officers had most brilliantly stood the test of war, alteration should be made in the principles under which they hitherto had been appointed. If the appointment of officers was placed under the control of parliament, then the personal relations of loyalty to the monarch would be prejudiced, the conservatives declared.

A progressive member pointed out that by the new regulations the war ministers of the states would become responsible to the reichstag, but he declared there was no question of establishing a parliamentary army or undermining authority.

Hungarian Trouble Serious.

Copenhagen, May 7.—The ferment among the Hungarian working classes caused by premier Count Tisza's refusal of an effective reform of the franchise is far more serious than appeared in the censored telegraphic account of Wednesday's demonstrative strike.

All the Budapest factories, it now is learned, were then closed. A resolution was presented by the workmen after the closing, which demanded in the firmest of language a liberal electoral reform. If the answer was delayed or unfavorable, it was announced, the workmen were determined through a general strike to compel the government to yield.

The discipline among the workmen was shown by the strict adherence to the hour for the stoppage of labor fixed by their leaders.

"I'm heartbroken," was all he could say. He died eight hours later in the hospital. He was fifty-eight years old and unmarried. Thirty years ago Crull left this county, where he passed his boyhood, and went west, where he began the practice of law.

RUSSIANS RENEW LIGHTING

Slavs Quit Peace Talk and Are Victors on Two Fronts.

Petrograd, May 7.—With pacifist movements suppressed, extensive fighting flared up in Volhynia and on the Roumanian front. In both theaters the Russians were victorious, the war office announces.

East of Kovel, pivot of the Austro-German front in Brusiloff's great offensive last year, the Russian big guns bombarded the station of Foyursk. Terrific explosions and great fires followed. The entire station is believed destroyed, with large stores of ammunition. On the Roumanian front the Germans took the initiatice, launched a well-prepated attack. They were met by a hail of shells and compelled to fall back.

FRENCH WIN ON 18-MILE FRONT

Gen. Petain Is Hailed as Deliverer of France.

5,800 PRISONERS ARE BAGGED

Seven Cannon, Some of Large Caliber, Are Among Trophies—Fierce German Counter Attacks Are Repulsed. British Also Repulse All Attacks.

London, May 7.—Waves upon waves of Teuton storming columns were flung into the teeth of the French steam saw north of the Aisne and in the Champagne during the last twenty-four hours. Shattered and beaten, they floated back in thin lines everywhere. Those who were not cut to pieces by the hurricane of shells from the French barrier fire leaped on to grapple the poilus man to man. They ran into a gruesome picket line of bayonets and sealed their heroism with death. The day again belonged to the republic's soldiers. It was the third day to be crowned by absolute victory. For not an inch of the ground conquered by the horizon blue lines Friday and Saturday was wrested from them.

5,800 Prisoners Taken.

When dusk settled upon the battlefield, General Nievelle was victor in the greatest battle of the year, on a front of nearly eighteen miles. Another thousand prisoners were added to the captures, the total announced by the day communique being 5,800.

France hails Petain, savior of Verdun, as the "Man of the Hour," who has begun the real deliverance of the republic's soil from the invader. His appointment as chief commander of all rFench troops early last week was heralded as a good omen. He has surpassed all expectations.

Now that the Teutons have once more exhausted themselves in vain counter thrusts, he is expected to resume his drive on Laon. Only twelve miles now separate Nieville's troops from that keypoint in the Hindenburg line. Under Petain's new plan, it seems, there is to be no letup until a decision is reached.

During the night and day the battle raged fiercest near the Soissons-Laon railways in the region of Craonne, now in French hands. Around Laffaux, north of Freidmont farm, north of Braye-EnLaonnois and to the northeast of Cerny—at these points the German high commander threw division after division into the fray.

All German Efforts Fail.

"Everywhere," says the official communique from Paris, "the enemy's [illegible] maintained our gains."

While the men in their advance lines beat off the German avalanche, the French consolidated their newly won terrain. This, the French official report states, "gives evidence that the Germans suffered sanguinary losses during the day's fighting as well as in the counter attacks during the night."

The French now are in possession of the larger part of the range of hills marked by the "Road of the Ladies." Seven cannon, among them several of a large calibre, fell to them in their victorious onrush.

British Beat Off Attacks.

On the Anglo-German front, far to the north, in the Queant sector, where the "Wotan line" branches off from the original German front now referred to as the "Hindenburg line" in the British official reports, the Germans tried vainly to regain their positions. They were beaten off by the British gunfire. The counter attacks were especially furious east of Bullecourt. The British on their part made a successful raid on a front of a mile and a half, blowing up some German work and returning with prisoners.

The Council has decided to discontinue sprinkling in our down town section until such time as the matter can be taken up and decided. The town has consented to do the sprinkling until May 1st with the understanding that the merchants should get together and work out a plan by which the matter could be agreeably settled. Nothing having been done the council have taken the above action.

There [illegible]

[illegible] for one merchant to pay liberally for sprinkling and his neighbor to pay nothing and this has been the case in former years. It would seem to us that a plan could be worked out whereby the council could take on the job and have the expense spread on the tax roll. An assessment of say one-fourth or one-third to be paid by the village at large and the balance to be levied against the merchants occupying the stores along the street, to be apportioned according to the benefit which the merchant expects to get out of it. In this way it would make it impossible for some man to get a benefit at his neighbor's expense. It would do away with a weekly collector whose duty it has been to make collections and the village fire team could be used with their driver as in former years.

If this plan of using the village team proved unsatisfactory, a man and team could be hired. Certainly the work must be done and the matter should be taken up and disposed of before dry weather comes.

For some reason Congress seems to object to Teddy's plan of raising a division for service in France. We suppose that now Teddy is to blame for holding up the Conscription Bill. Congress had better give Teddy a chance and stop splitting hairs. Perhaps they are afraid that the people will want him again for President Wilson's job.

The bank reports which appear elsewhere in this issue show a splendid increase in business from the last published reports. It is a matter of congratulation not only to our two banks, but to the whole business community, for it shows a remarkably healthy condition and argues well for the thrift of this vicinity.

Leaves of the Eucalypts.

Eucalypts are evergreens which shed their bark, but not their leaves. But they are not shade trees. The leaves are placed in inclined rather than in horizontal position, and the passage of light is but little obstructed. For this reason smaller trees and bushes and grass grow underneath, and the woods in places assume the appearance of a jungle from which arise the towering shafts of trees. It is interesting to note that primitive types of eucalyptus as well as the young of more modern types have horizontal leaves, pointing to a time in the geologic past when the climate was more congenial and no precautions to conserve moisture need be taken.—National Geographic Magazine.

Boiled Milk.

When boiling milk most people throw away the skin which forms as the milk cools. This skin is, of course, the cream of the milk, and by throwing it away the richness of the milk is wasted. Instead, when the milk is just boiled, put it into a jug and stand it in a basin not as deep as the jug and let cold water run into the basin to cool the milk quickly. At the same time stir the milk, and the cream will intermix again. When the milk is cold there will be no skin, and it will therefore be as rich in cream as before being boiled.

Healthful Norway.

When Airmen Fly High.

Aviators have a cold time of it when they mount high into the air. On the hottest day in summer a flying man may be in the arctic regions in ten minutes by mounting to a height of 10,000 feet, just as the climber may pass through all the zones of climate by climbing Kilimanjaro, that giant peak which rises above the snow line from the equator. He commences with the tropical jungle and ends amid eternal snow. The temperature is invariably low at 10,000 feet and over, whether at the tropics or the poles, and it is quite likely to be lowest at the equator. In fact, there is little variation of temperature in these upper reaches of the atmosphere. It is much the same in summer as winter, except for the difference which a high wind makes. Even in the depth of a hot summer the airman will encounter 40 degrees of frost at 10,000 feet, and at twice that altitude 100 degrees of frost—the temperature of the south pole—is usual enough.

The Circuit Rider in Japan.

We are in the upper room of the neat Japanese home. We have fallen flat on our faces and exchanged greetings in the deliberate and considerate manner of the east. Beside me the captain sits on his heels, a feat which I admire the more after trying it for ever so brief a time. The infinite possibilities begin where man's greatest achievement leaves off, and about the time human understanding masters "C" in the alphabet of cause and effect and gets ready to take up "D," John L. Earth will blow up like a toy balloon colliding with a tack.—Richmond Times-Dispatch.

After You've Had a Fight.

The world would be much better if every man were as kind and good always as he is just after he has had a fight or a near fight. When he has cooled off he is glad to do just anything he can for anybody. If you want a match he will hunt one for you; if you want to borrow a knife he has his out in a minute, and he opens it for you; if you borrow a pencil from him he will say, "Keep that one if you want to; I have another." It just looks as if his only purpose in living is to help other people.—Claude Callan in Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINTS.

Care of Babies.

An authority on children's diseases makes the following useful "do not" suggestion in caring for babies:

Do not sneeze or cough in the baby's face.

Do not kiss the baby on the mouth or allow any one else to do so.

Do not fail to protect the baby's eyes from bright light.

Do not raise the baby without supporting its back.

Do not allow the baby to go even one day without a bowel movement.

Do not excite the baby during or immediately after nursing.

Do not forget that vomiting is usually caused from overfeeding.

Do not forget that diseases of the eye can be prevented by scrupulous care.

Do not forget that out of every 100 breast fed babies seven die in the first year and that out of every 100 bottle fed babies thirty die in the first year.

Fire Under Water.

Fire under water may be produced by placing some small pieces of phosphorus in a conical shaped tumbler and then covering them with the crystals of chlorate of potash. Next fill the glass with water and then add a few drops of sulphuric acid, the acid to be applied directly to the phosphorus and potash crystals by means of a long tube. If the experiment is properly carried out tongues of bright red flame can be seen flashing up through the water, the intense chemical heat produced by the action of the sulphuric acid on the potash and phosphorus being sufficient to inflame the latter, although entirely covered with water.

NOBLE THOUGHTS.

If instead of a gem or even a flower we would cast the gift of a lovely thought into the heart of a friend, that would be giving as the angels give.—George Macdonald.

LEARN TO SAVE.

Acquire the Habit of Spending Less Than You Earn.

Americans are not as thrifty as the people of many other nations. Savings bank statistics show this. Our money comes too easily, even in normal times. We feed the garbage pails too well. We ignore the little short cuts of economy. We forget the coming rainy day in our enjoyment of the present fair day.

And if savings bank reports are not enough, turn to the figures of the actuaries. See how few men, for instance, reach the period of natural retirement with enough of an estate accumulated to keep them through the remaining years of their lives. See how many are compelled to toil for a daily pittance beyond the time when they should have the privilege of retiring to ease on the income of their savings or are left stranded because unable to work.

All industry is built on the savings of those who at some time have learned the wisdom of putting aside some portion of their earnings as an investment. Abolition of thrift would mean the abolition of organized business. It would hardly be an exaggeration to say it would mean the abolition of civilization itself.

Save—save a little. Get the habit of spending less than your income. Make some banker your friend. Have a stake in the community. Stretch the pay envelope a little farther than merely to the next pay day. Buy a home. Don't float; anchor!

Trite words, these. Certainly. But it is astonishing how many people there are in the United States who have never taken them to heart.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

MAN AND HIS NECKTIE.

The Mystery That Cloaks the Fate of Discarded Cravats.

Every morning we stand before the mirror, flap the large end over and around, push it behind and up draw it carefully through. It becomes a habit, and yet, like dining, it has a certain fascination. The keen pleasure of a new and uncreased cravat helps to make a whole week brighter. And that dread day when a white spot appears in the center of the front of our favorite green one or when the beloved brown parts internally and while appearing the same without tells us that it is gone forever—that day our coffee is bitter and the mercury low.

But we never cruelly desert a faithful friend. For a couple of times after the white spot appears we try to tie it farther up or low down, usually with pathetically ineffectual results. And then we pasture it back somewhere on the rack with the bow ties that are not to our taste any more and the selections made by a worthy aunt at a reduction sale and let it enjoy a quiet old age.

Somehow eventually it disappears. We do not know how. Perhaps a careless maid drops it in a wastebasket or a plotting wife makes way with it. But most probably, like old watches and college textbooks, it has some unseen heaven of its own whither it is wafted after its life among us is over.—Atlantic Monthly.

Got His Answer.

She was a demure little woman, with a baby. As the car was crowded with shoppers, she did not put up the little one, who was old enough to sit up, on the seat beside her. She carried it on her lap and made room for a fierce looking big man, with a newspaper. The child kicked its tiny legs in delight at the strange things it saw while riding along, and its shoes rubbed the man's trousers.

"Perhaps, madam," he exclaimed, "you imagine that this conveyance is your private carriage?"

"Oh, no; I don't," was the prompt reply. "If it was you wouldn't be riding in it."

Copying Our National Parks.

Spain is to have national parks similar to those in the United States. Pursuant to a recent law the government will select especially picturesque tracts of land, incorporate them in a national park system, arrange for suitable means of communication in order that visitors may reach them easily and preserve the natural features of such tracts from deterioration. Advancing the project its sponsors called attention to the Yellowstone, Yosemite, General Grant, Crater Lake and other national parks in this country.

Poor Economy.

"When I bought my phonograph I had an idea that we'd save money by hearing good music at home."

"Well, didn't you?"

Cheerfulness is an exact wearing quality. It has been called "the bright weather of the heart."—Samuel Smiles.

Birds and Orientation.

Professor K. S. Lashley has completed an investigation of the sense of direction in birds. This is called the problem of "orientation." Dr. Lashley used the wild birds of the Florida keys known as noddy and sooty terns in experiments. In their recognition of their nests it was found that their eyes as well as their muscles are concerned. The birds showed no evidence of any special sense of locality, such as a "magnetic sense" or a "second sight." Birds are no more mind readers than men are. Nor do they have any ability to retrace their paths of flight by memory. They recognize their nests and their own young by muscle habits and eyesight.

A VALUABLE COLLECTION OF BUTTERFLIES

The Property of Miss Myrtle Foster.

Miss Myrtle Foster is the owner of a rare collection of moths and butterflies, not alone because of the fact that they are beautiful but because they came fron Columbia, S. A., and are something entirely foreign to this part of the country.

The collection was sent to her by C. T. Tribolet, a brother of Harold Tribolet of this village, who has an important government position in the Panama Canal Zone. The collection was secured by friends of Mr. Tribolet who had recently made a trip to S. America.

The group is composed of some thirty different varieties and almost every conceivable color may be found in the collection.

As we looked at them we wondered how it was possible for nature to paint such beautiful combinations of colors on the wings of these insects. Perhaps the most striking of her collection was the Brilliant Morphus, a butterfly quite a little largre than those found in thos section. Their wings are rich blue, tipped with black and brown underneath. The blue changes as you look at it from different angles to a green or purple. These butterflies, it is said, are very common in Columbia and at times so thick that people have to drive them away.

One quite remarkable feature about her collection is the fact that they made their long journey and came to her in almost perfect condition. Each butterfly was sent in a separate envelope securely fastened so that it would not shake about and injure itself.

The collection is a valuable one and probably would bring on the market at least $150.00 or more.

Don't Complain!

The world is full of complainers. Some complain of ill health, many of ill fortune and most of all of ill luck.

A pound of pluck is worth a ton of luck. It is not a perfect world. Who is well every day throughout the year without an ache, a pain or a cough?

Who is perfect in physique, in temper, in deed and word and conscience?

What man or woman is without a weakness or reason at times for misgivings or cause at times for repentance?

It is a world of foibles, fads and fanatics. If we were all perfect the preachers would be needless. Heaven would be on earth.

There is comfort in the thought that the striking differences we find among men and women make the world attractive. If all were alike the monotony would be unbearable.

Think of these things when you feel like repining over ill health, ill fortune, ill treatment or ill luck.

Misery loves company, and there are always "others."—John A. Sleicher in Leslie's.

Shoddy Tricks of Writing.

In "The Art of Writing" Sir Arthur Quiller-Couch, inveighing against the "trick of elegant variation," criticises a certain undergraduate's essay on Byron. "In an essay on Byron, he says, Byron is, or ought to be, mentioned many times. "But my undergraduate has a blushing sense that to call Byron twice on one page is indelicate. So Byron, after starting bravely as Byron, in the second sentence turns into 'that great but unequal poet,' and thenceforward I have as much trouble with Byron as ever Telemachus with Proteus to hold and pin him back to his proper self." Among the truly wonderful variations recorded by Sir Arthur are "the gloomy master of Newstead," "the meteoric darling of society," "the apostle of scorn" and "the martyr of Missolonghi."

Salt Means Much to Health.

"If the human race should be deprived of salt, even for a period of a few months," said a physician, "we would not only lose a natural healthful incentive for our food, but disease, with all its attendant miseries, would spread with such relentless speed as to defy the efforts of the most skillful doctors of the land. Ailing persons frequently refuse sugar, but they seldom turn up their noses at common salt. That is because there is in the body a deficiency of chloride of sodium, and nature intuitively excites the desire for it. Salt is essential to health and life and is as much a food as bread or flesh. If there is no wish for salt in a person doctors uniformly conclude that disease in some form is lurking unsuspected in the system."

The Barking Wolf.

The prairie wolf, the coyote of the Mexicans, is the American representative of the old world jackal. It is thirty-six to forty inches long, with a tail measuring sixteen to eighteen inches. Its color is usually a yellowish gray on the back and sides, with black cloudings. The under parts and inside of limbs are of a dirty white tint. The cry is a sort of snapping bark, and for this reason the animal is known as the barking wolf. It lives and breeds in burrows and has its young in April, often ten at a time. It hunts in packs and is very fleet.

The Hen.

The hen is nowhere noticed in the Old Testament. It is mentioned in the New Testament, however, in Matthew xxiii, 37, and Luke xiii, 34. That a bird so common in Palestine should receive such slight notice is considered to be singular.

MOTHERS' DAY PROCLAMATION

By the Governor.

Our American civivlization is built around the home. The heart of the home is the mother. What is there in all the realm of Art that stands higher, more commanding, more beautiful, than a simple, refined, gracious woman in her household; a woman whose daily life is an outpouring of the Gospel of service, who is worshipped by her children, beloved by her husband and who rules in her home by sweetness, by gentleness, by self-denial, by love? The mothers of the land are engaged in the noblest of all callings, the rearing of their sons and daughters to take their places as useful members of society.

As we, whose mothers have left us, look back through the years, how sweet and precious is the memory of the mother in the old home. All her life was a beauteous life. It ran like a rill down the old hill-side and sang all the time. It was like flowers that know no summer and no winter. The memory of it kindles in us still the supremest affection and arouses the finest enthusiasm of our hearts.

Therefore, that we may pay a special tribute of affection to the mothers who still live and honor the memory of the mothers who have gone from us, I, ALBERT E. SLEEPER, Governor of the State of Michigan, Sunday, May Thirteenth, as Mothers' do hereby designate and set aside Day;and I call upon our people, both young and old, to gather in their several places of worship, and take part in services appropriate to the day and, by wearing of a red flower for the living mother and a white for the dear departed, to symbolize their love and reverence for the mothers of the nation.

In accordance with a resolution of the Congress of the United States, I further request the people of Michigan, on the aforesaid to display the United States flag in their homes and in other suitable places, as a fitting expression of their desire to pay homage to American motherhood.

Given under my hand and the Great Seal of the State, this second day of May, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and seventeen, and of the Commonwealth the eighty-first.

Albert E. Sleeper, Governor.

By the Governor:

Coleman C. Vaughn,
Secretary of State.

INTOLERANCE !

You have often read of Belshazzar, the great Prince of Babylon. You have often seen the sensuous pictures of his feast, the greatest in all history. The feast of Belshazzar, it rings with vibrant thrills against your ribs as you repeat the sounding phrase. That is one of the places you will go in "Intolerance" the wonderful D. W. Griffith spectacle which is coming to the Bradley Opera House for a matinee and night performance on Friday, May 25th.

We will take you so close to Belshazzar you could almost reach out and shake hands with him. You can see the very inner pupil of his eye grow smaller as he rides his warsteed, or see him smile as he looks at his adored one.

We will take you through the gate of Imgur Bel, the great gate of Babylon; by the walls, three hundred feet high, exactly as they were the day Belshazzar drove his golden chariot on their dizzy heights.

Can you imagine it? Can you picture it? Did you ever dream of driivng along the top of Babylon's encircling walls? Well, you will the very night after you see this wonderful spectacle. The action of "Intolerance" does not all take place in Babylon but includes modern and ancient, America, Europe and in fact nearly every country from the ancient days in Babylon down to the present time, today. "Intolerance" was produced by D. W. Griffith who was also the producer of "The Birth of a Nation" and "Intolerance" is Mr. Griffith's second big spectacular production. A complete orchestra and chorus, also a 60 foot baggage car of stage settings, effects, machines, etc. is carried for the presentation of "Intolerance". The people of Tecumseh and vicinity can expect the greatest of productions in "Intolerance" and they will not be disappointed.

Dust In the Eyes.

Notwithstanding the best fitting goggles automobile tourists are frequently inconvenienced quite seriously by dust in their eyes, and, although it seems impossible to exclude the dust, the subsequent treatment for the abatement of the annoyance is quite simple. A solution of borax in warm water will quickly remove the dirt and may be applied either by means of an eyecup or by a small swab of cotton, particular attention being given to wiping out the inside of the lower eyelids, where the bulk of the dust will collect. Besides cleansing the eye, this solution will be found decidedly soothing and to allay the natural inflammation.—Scientific American.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

How to Avoid Grippe.

Don't put your mouth close to a telephone transmitter.

Avoid overeating, stuffy rooms and undue exposure to inclement weather.

Have a drinking glass, knife, fork, spoon, towels, pillowcase and handkerchief for your very own. Keep these articles by themselves.

Stay away from congested places where there is apt to be poor ventilation and where there are always people with colds.

Keep the feet dry, take plenty of exercise, observe regularity in bedtime hours and do not dress too warmly indoors. It is also well to have the nose and throat examined.

Doing It the Right Way.

For every right way to do a thing there are ninety-nine wrong ways.

Take the apparently single matter of loading sugar in cars or putting it in storage houses. The difference between any one of the ninety-nine wrong ways and the one right way is a sufficient reason for the world's biggest sugar company to issue a book about it.

An amateur wouldn't dream there could be so much science in rolling 150 barrels of sugar in a box car. But this little book, filled with diagrams, is a school of instruction for all employees. There they learn to do it the right way and to avoid the ninety-nine wrong ones.

The fellow who learns to load sugar the right way soon finds out that the thing contains higher mathematics, chemistry and finance.

The American people eat just about their own weight in sugar in a year, and even the tiniest saving on each pound achieved by this scientific handling is quite enough to pay all salaries and leave a snug margin to boot.—Girard in Philadelphia Ledger.

Paper From Wood Pulp.

The idea of making paper from wood originated in Germany in the early forties with Gottfried Keller, tradition having it that he in turn received his inspiration from a wasps' nest. Keller collaborated with a manufacturer of machinery, Heinrich Voelter, in whose name the patents were executed.

It was not until 1866 that the possibilities of this invention in this country were recognized, when Albrecht and Rudolf Pagenstecher induced their cousin, Alberto Pagenstecher, to build a mill in this country and financed the purchase of machinery and the building of a mill.

The choice of location fell to Curtisville, now Interlaken, Mass., where the outlet of Stockbridge bowl seemed to supply an adequate amount of power. The mill was built and on March 5, 1867, the first ground wood pulp was produced.—New York Globe.

FROM JAMES SNYDER

Now at the Howell Sanitarium for Treatment.

The following letter was received from James Snyder. His many friends will be delighted to know there is sure prospect of his ultimate recovery.

State Sanitorium, Howell, Mich
May 2, 1917.

Dear Friend:

Arrived here O K Saturday last Am feeling fine. There are all creeds, nationalities' sizes, ages, and all stages of tuberculosis here. I have had an examination and have an incipient case which is enough. Good food, fresh air, rest can only effect an arrest and ultimate cure of this disease.

We are 1080 feet above sea level. The wind whistles around all corners. Have a splendid view of the surrounding country with Howell three miles away.

The idea and system is fresh air every hour of the day and night which is carried out to a nicety that compels admiration. Lect[illegible]s are given once [illegible] week which are [illegible] pays attention [illegible] or her own use [illegible] had the pleasure of listening to one [illegible] which the superintendent Dr. P[illegible] "[illegible] Stick," among other things saying "This is no sun[illegible] resort. If patients do not care to c[illegible] rules and regulations they can get out."

There are about 140 patients in all. We are not allowed to talk with any woman excepting nurses only in the reception room a few moments before meals and one evening each week in the dining room.

Everything is clean, neat and sanitary as can be. Do not be afraid to recommend this institution as you will not be disappointed in conditions or treatment.

Writing letters is called "exercise" here. They demand absolute rest most of the time. I do not run any temperature but that matters not. Rules are rules, "T. B." is "T. B." and either you or "T. B." is bound to win with everything in favor of "T. B." unless one strives by right living to overcome the same.

Hope everything is satisfactory with you and may continue so.

Respectfully,
James Snyder.

WILLIAM A. DAGLISH

William A. Daglish was born in Detroit in 1861. His boyhood was spent in Tecumseh to which place his parents removed in 1867. Since 1878 his home has been most of the time in Chicago Cadillac and Saginaw. His wife died in October sf 1914.

Mr. Daglish died suddenly of uremia at Erie, Pa., April 29th, 1917, leaving one son, William L Daglish of Saginaw.

Funeral services, held at the home of his sister Mrs. O B Finch, were conducted by Dr. W. B. Hartzog, pastor of the Baptist church, and the body was borne to its last resting place beside father, mother, wife and sisters in Brookside by the hands of men who were his friends in boyhood. Those attending from out of town were William L Daglish of Saginaw, Dr. Mark Fessenden and Dr L. H. Fessenden both of Detroit.

A Nation With No Language.

The Swiss alone, of all the peoples of the world, may in a sense be said to possess no language, a fact that is the more surprising when we consider that there is no people showing a more intense patriotism.

The official languages of the little republic are French and German. The public documents are published in these tongues, both of which are spoken by many Swiss. Roughly speaking, however, about 75 per cent of the population speak German, while the remainder divide four other languages among them, mainly French and Italian. These tongues vary, as a rule, according to the proximity of the people to the country whose language they speak. In the Swiss parliament members deliver their speeches either in French or German, for nearly all the members understand both tongues.

When "Old Women" Abounded.

In the eighteenth-century women soon grew old, says an English writer. At the age of twenty-nine Marie Antoinette, the wife of Louis XVI., gravely discussed the question with her modiste, Rose Bertin. She would soon be thirty. Her idea was to change her manner of dress, which inclined too much to that of extreme youth. In consequence she should wear no more flowers or feathers. The glorious Georgiana, the duchess of Devonshire, complained to the French ambassador that she was already seven and twenty years old. "Consider," said the glorious one, "what an age that is!" to which the ungallant ambassador replied that "in France at seven and twenty a woman was considered elderly."

If it perplexes you, you have the remedy in your own hands.

Because there IS no eatable question when the right eatables are bought.

LOADED GUN EXPLODED IN BOY'S FACE

Claude Underwood the Victim of a Painful Accident

While Claude Underwood, in company with several boys, was playing at the pond Sunday afternoon, he had the misfortune to receive a charge of powder in the face. He had just tried to discharge a shot gun which he was carrying and, finding that it did not fire when he pulled the trigger, undertook to open the lock when suddenly it back-fired and the powder contained in the load was discharged in his face. The upper part of his face was peppered with shot but luckily his eyes were saved.

Claude walked down to the office of Dr. Beardsley where the doctor made an examination. Later he took the boy to his home and worked until a late hour digging the shot out of his face. Fearing tetanus the doctor administered anti-toxin. From last reports the boy is doing nicely.

G. B. GARLINGHOUSE IMPROVING

Aside from a Fractured Limb his Injuries are Slight

The condition of G. B. Garlinghouse who miraculously escaped death last Friday afternoon from being buried under a pile of lumber and rubbish is reported to be most favorable. At first it appeared that Mr. Garlinghouse had escaped without any broken bones or internal injuries but later it was found that one of the smaller bones of the lower limb was fractured. Aside from this he is only suffering from the severe strain and from flesh wounds.

Mr. Garlinghouse was at work removing some temporary props which were holding up a section of the old shed back of the livery barn and was planning to put in heavier ones, when suddenly the jack which was holding the timbers up slipped out of place and the whole section came crashing down on him, completely burying him under a mass of broken timbers and rubbish, only his head was sticking out from under the pile. He was saved from instant death by some beams which still held at one end, taking the weight of the pile of broken timber which came tumbling down on top of it.

Mr. Garlinghouse did not loose consciousness but called to his son for assistance. His call was heard and a score of men rushed to his assistance. He was so pinned in that it took quite a number of minutes for them to remove the timbers which held him fast. He was removed to the office of the garage and Dr. J. W. Beardsley was soon in attendance. An examination was made and as soon as possible the injured man was taken to his home.

He will be confined to the house for some time and every indication points to a complete recovery. Mr. Garlinghouse had about one chance in a thousand of getting out alive and his many friends are rejoicing that that one chance came his way.

TECUMSEH TOWNSHIP MAKES FINE SHOWING

The secretary of the local branch of the Red Cross reports a paid membership of 696 up to this morning. This is a fine showing for Tecumseh township and far exceeds the expectations of the workers who planned the campaign. When the total number is in for the county, it will undoubtedly place Tecumseh in the front rank and it speaks well for the patriotism of our people.

ANOTHER TECUMSEH BOY HEARD FROM

The names are all familiar to the older generation and three of the band are still alive: Brant Roberts, Andrew Snyder, Clarence Anderson, Eugene Crane, Eugene Curtis and C. A. Blanchard. Charlie says, "We thought we were all there was, at that time."

BELGIAN CHILDREN ARE STARVING

Only a dollar a month is needed to keep a child from starving. It will furnish one meal a day for a child, the "supplementary meal."

No matter what you think about the war, or the action of adults, the children are not responsible.

Will you join us in the Dollar-a-Month Club for Belgian Children?

If you cannot give a dollar a month, will you not raise that amount among your neighbors and friends and be responsible for its prompt collection? If you can give more, will you not subscribe just as many dollars as possible? Every penny you send will go straight to the Relief Work for Belgian Children thro the Commission for Relief in Belgium.

A First Consideration.

A teacher who was firmly convinced that a knowledge of the paintings and sculpture of the world was as essential as the "rule of three" had been explaining to her young wards some of the history connected with Rodin's famous statue, "The Thinker." She then asked the children what they thought he was thinking about.

"Oh, I know," replied one little girl. "He's lost his clothes, and he's wondering w[illegible] he's going to get some [illegible] Magazine.

Effect of Plant Foods.

Potash aids in the formation of starch in the grain, strengthens the stalk and encourages healthy growth.

Nitrogen hastens stalk and leaf growth, lengthens the season of growth and gives the plant a quick start.

Phosphoric acid helps fill the grain, improves the quality and hastens maturity.—New York Sun.

Second Base Play.

Second base is called the "pivot position of the infield." This is because most of the plays center around second base. Many double plays read "short to second to first; third to second to first; second to short to first; first to second to first," and so on. Records show teams strong on double plays are usually teams well up in the race. Generally speaking, ability to make double plays speaks well for a team's defense. A good defense means few runs for the opposition, provided the pitching is of the proper kind. Since second base is the pivot position, much of the team's success depends upon the way that base is played. If the shortstop and second baseman work smoothly it usually has the effect of balancing the rest of the team. A club that is constantly mussing up plays around the second sack never causes much trouble for the opposition.—Billy Evans in New York World.

Scandinavian Politeness.

Two points which attract the attention of travelers in Sweden are the punctilious honesty and truthfulness of the inhabitants. When asking for places at a theater, for instance, the ticket clerk never fails to inform the applicant if owing to a crowded state of the house a better position would be secured with a cheaper ticket than the one asked for. Again, when parcels are taken by steamer from Stockholm to country places in the neighborhood they are just placed on to the quay, where they frequently remain half a day without being claimed. It never seems to occur to any one that they could possibly be taken by anybody but their rightful owners. On a canal trip of any length a little book lies in the saloon of the steamer, in which each passenger keeps his own account of the number of meals, coffees, etc., he takes during the journey.

The Clever Brahman.

Speaking of the great power the Brahmans in India possess in localizing thought, a prominent Brahman once said: "We would consider a game of chess as played in this country mere child's play. An ordinary Brahman chess player could carry on three or four games at a time without inconvenience. The usual game played by the Brahmans consists in checkmating with one pawn designated when the play begins. I have seen a man perform a long problem in multiplication and division, at the same time noting the various sounds and discussions going on about him in the room. I have seen a man compose a triple acrostic in Sanskrit in a given meter, at the same time having three well versed men trying to overthrow him in his argument on religion."

Point of the Cape of Good Hope.

Cape point, which terminates the mighty headland known as the Cape of Good Hope, consists of a towering promontory of sandstone, which rises from the sea to an altitude of 840 feet. At the base of this stands a big solitary column which is known as Vasco da Gama's pillar. The lighthouse which here illuminates the meeting place of the Atlantic and Indian oceans is one of the most important and most useful of its kind. It is visible from a distance of thirty-six miles. The cliff scenery is wild and sublime, the rocks are magnificent, and the farreaching sea, with the fierce surf beating on the iron bound coast, is impressive. In the water directly beneath the cliff sharks are abundant.

Ancients Used Few Adjectives.

The plethora of adjectives in modern literature contrasts with the abstinence of the ancients in this respect. A contributor to the Italian review, Minerva, with time to spare, has made a count of substantives and adjectives in the works of Vergil, Dante and Leonardo. In the second book of the "Aeneid," which contains the fall of Troy, there are 1,637 nouns and 589 adjectives. In Dante's "Divina Commedia," out of the 6,215 adjectives which it contains only seventeen are in the superlative. These are facts from which the tyro in literature may well draw a moral.—Christian Science Monitor.

Just a Suggestion.

Before a man is hired to work at certain munitions plants he is required to give a complete account of himself and to answer a series of printed questions on a regular form.

The most important question of all appears at the head of each pedigree form. It is printed in bold faced type and inquires, "Where shall we ship your remains?"

Many a prospective workman gets "cold feet" when this significant inquiry greets his eyes.—New York Sun.

The President's Title.

Washington, the first president, was inaugurated April 30, 1789. The ceremony was delayed several days while congress disputed as to whether the chief magistrate should have such title as "his excellency," "his highness" or the like. It was decided that he should be simply "the president of the United States."

At the Reception.

Said He—They tell me you are an authority on flowers. Said She—Oh, hardly an authority, although I have made a study of them. Said He—Well, what would be the result if a blooming idiot was to mate with a society bud?—Exchange.

Hoggish.

Constituent—I worked hard for you and deserve some reward. Mayor—Some reward! Didn't I shake hands with you twice in public—before the election?—Exchange.

What's gone and what's past help should be past grief.—Shakespeare.

The Pulse Beat.

The readiest and roughest estimate of time is the pulse beat. It is sad to know that the human pulse beat is not exactly sixty to the minute. That is one of the faulty disarrangements of life. But it comes pretty close. And the rough and ready calculator of the time between the flash of lightning and the thunder depends on his pulse when he cannot see his watch. To the ordinary man a second is a pulse beat. —London Chronicle.

Comprehensive Business.

"I suppose you built up your colossal fortune by attending strictly to your own business."

"Yes," replied Mr. Dustin Stax. "But I made it my business to keep informed as to what the other people were doing."—Washington Star.

Unkind.

She—What do you suppose Harold meant by sending me those flowers? Also She—He probably meant to imply that you were a dead one.—Jack o'Lantern.

Paradoxical.

"The truth lies somewhere."

"Strange conduct, that, for the truth."—Baltimore American.

The Transformation.

After the hero of seventeen looks at the heroine of fifteen she is a different person. Before he looks at her she likes the fine brick houses in the neighborhood. In fact, she sees many elegant houses in town that she thinks would make ideal homes. Unlike her mother, she even likes the house in which the family lives. But after the hero looks at her you couldn't give her a big brick house. To her such places look cold, and she hardly would take one of them as a gift. But she just worships every little four and five room cottage she sees. They look so cute and neat and dear and sweet and cozy and snug. Oh, if she could just have a house like that and a hero like him—he is the only one there is of his kind—she would be just too happy for anything! And she would make fudge and have a regular home, only it would be far happier than other homes.—Claude Callan in Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

Tragedy of Being Dull.

"The man lacking imagination is the utterly matter of fact man. He is necessarily the man who never has and cannot have any point of view except his own. He is the Wordsworthian man to whom a primrose by the river's brim was strictly a yellow primrose instead of being a miracle. He is imprisoned in what to him is the actual, and he is always the exact center of the prison, which is of thickest iron. His tragedy is that he does not suspect and is incapable of suspecting that he is in prison at all and that the prison walls and floor and roof entirely prevent him from really 'getting at' any other human being whatsoever. He is always in his own place. This is the deep meaning of dullness, and this is the dull man's doom."

How a Bullet Falls.

In order to solve the problem a special stand was erected in Germany, and experiments were carried on along the shores of a lake the surface of which was frozen. The ice was covered with strong planks. It was shown that an infantry bullet shot upward in a vertical direction passes downward in the same position in which it passed upward. In other words, it came back to the earth with its bottom first. Why was it not upset at its culmination point? The answer is that the propelling force ceases to act at the culmination point, but the twist has as yet not stopped, and therefore it starts its fall with a twist. Even on impact the twist has not stopped, as was indicated by the warping of the wood fibers in the planking on the ice.—Popular Science Monthly.

Where the Five Points Was.

The Five Points, once a most dangerous part of the New York slums, is now the site of Paradise park. It is at the crossing of Worth, Baxter and Park streets, near the junction of Park row and the New Bowery and Chatham square and practically adjoining Mulberry bend. In 1740 fourteen negroes were burned here during the negro insurrection. Here the Dead Rabbits had their headquarters and fought the Bowery Boys. The Seventh regiment was called out July 3, 1857, to quell a riot here. The Five Points mission was incorporated in 1850.

Shrewd.

The manager, writing out the announcement of his show, ended with these words:

"The patronage of children under eighteen is not encouraged."

"That," he remarked shrewdly, "will appeal to the children over eighteen!" —New York Post.

Hard on the Records.

Freshman (in awed voice)—See that big fellow over there? He broke three records last week. Sweet Young Thing—Mercy, I wouldn't let him run the phonograph!—Penn State Froth.

Blindfolded.

If blindfolded, it is said, no person is able to stand five minutes without moving.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Restrain a Cough.

A patient German statistician has calculated that a patient who coughs once every quarter of an hour for ten hours expends energy equivalent to 250 units of heat, which may be translated as equivalent to the nourishment contained in three eggs or two glasses of milk. In normal respiration the air is expelled from the chest at the rate of four feet per second, whereas in violent coughing it may attain a velocity of 300 feet. This waste of energy is especially important because it occurs for the most part in persons whose assimilative functions are already working under difficulties; consequently the ingestion of the corresponding quantity of nourishment by no means compensates for the exertion. It follows that persistent cough is per se a cause of emaciation, though there are many other factors which tend in the same direction; hence the desirability of restraining cough within safe limits, especially when it is due to irritative reflexes, such as are excited by laryngitis and pharyngitis.—Medical Critic and Guide.

Life Expectancy.

According to the public health service, life expectancy during infancy and childhood has increased because of the more intelligent care of babies and young children, but life expectancy after the age of forty is less now than it was thirty years ago, because those who have arrived at years of discretion do not exercise discretion for themselves and take sufficient exercise to overcome modern conditions. Many more people are engaged in sedentary occupations than formerly, which deprives them of natural assistance afforded by physical exercise in eliminating through the skin and lungs the waste products of the body.—Collier's Weekly.

Worst of the Flies.

The horsefly is the most cruel and bloodthirsty of the entire fly family. He is armed with a most formidable weapon, which consists of four lancets so sharp and strong that they will penetrate leather. He makes his appearance in June. The female is armed with six lancets, with which she bleeds both cattle and horses and even human beings.
